"Everything For Sale" it should be parenthetically noted, is by Hector Turnbull, who has achieved the honor of being the first photoplaywright to have a film story made into a grand opera. His "The Cheat" is now playing at the Opera Comique, Paris, under the title "La Forfaiture."

AT THE GRAND.

TO-NIGHT.

Big Time N.V.E. Vaudeville and "Yellow Men and Gold"

The Grand Theatre will show for three days, beginning today, a photoplay that will tie kinks in the nerves of spectators. It is one of the most thrilling adventure tales ever filmed and directed by a man who knows how to handle such exciting scenes of conflict and rapid action as are unfolded in this picture. It is Goldwyn's adaptation of Gouverneur Morris' novel, "Yellow Men and Gold", and was directed by Irvin V. Willat.

It's got one of those unbeatable Goldwyn casts which made "The Old Nest," "Dangerous Curve Ahead," "Poverty of Riches", "Ace of Hearts" and other recent pictures stand out so conspicuously from among the great volume of photoplays. Helen Chadwick and Richard Dix, in roles entirely different from any in which they have previously appeared, are featured in the film. Others prominent in the cast are Henry Barrows, Rosemary Theby, Richard Tucker, Fred Kohler Henry T. Herbert, William Moran, Goro Kino and others.

The story is as thrilling as anything Mr. Morris has ever written. The action starts in Los Angeles, ... steel ships sailing for a South Sea island, of which Spanish treasure was sunk several centuries before, and comes to a powerfully exciting climax on the island itself when the rival factions clash over possession of the treasure. A wholesome, refreshing love story runs through the picture.

The final scenes take place back in Los Angeles and give a novel and unexpected twist to the plot.

The Pantages vaudeville offered for the last 3 days starting today, includes Happ Simpson, comedy acrobat and Vincent and Davey, lady and gentleman singing and talking duo. This program forms another evening's entertainment beyond comparison, for the prices asked.

MUSICAL HISTORY OF ALEX. SKOUGAARD

Axel Skovgaard received his first violin instruction at the age of five. When fourteen years old, Joseph Joachim, the "King of Violinists", took him as a pupil, and it was then that he definitely entered upon his career as a violin virtuoso.

For three years young Skovgaard was a favorite pupil of this eminent master at the Royal High School of Music of Berlin, where he also, during that period, he'd the position as solo violinist and concert-master of the distinguished Royal High School Orchestra. Since the age of twelve Skovgaard has been concertizing in the Scandinavian countries, Belgium Germany, Holland and England and he made his first appearance in America in 1903 when he appeared as soloist with the New York Symphony Orchestra under Walter Damrosch. He later made an extended tour through the United States and Canada with this orchestra including a number of appearances in Carnegie Hall, New York; in Boston Symphony Society Hall; in Chicago, Montreal and Toronto, as well as enumerable engagements in other cities throughout this country.

Skovgaard has also had the distinction of a number of royal commands, having appeared before the late King Christian of Denmark; the late King Oscar of Sweden, and Haakon, the King of Norway.

Skovgaard possesses a maturity which experience only can impact. He plays with brain and will and brings emotional intensity under their full control. He satisfies the ear of the critic and reaches the hearts of all.

F. A. GABY'S REPLY TO R. R. HALL'S QUERIES ON HYDRO PROBLEMS

T. Tooms, M.P.P., Gives Interesting and Instructive Address on Subject Before Young Men's Section of Chamber of Commerce Last Evening

READS LETTER

In an address to the Young Men's Section of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. T. Tooms, M.P.P., gave an interesting and instructive address on the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, at the conclusion of which he read a statement by F. A. Gaby, chief engineer of the Commission, as furnished the Gregory investigation commission at Mr. Tooms' request in reply to the questions asked by Mr. R. R. Hall in the Examiner of October 16.

"I thought they were pertinent questions, so I took them before the Gregory commission on enquiry now sitting to investigate Hydro matters and requested replies to them," Mr. Tooms said, and he proceeded to read Mr. Gaby's letter. Points raised by Mr. Hall are quoted and the replies follow them:

1. Peterborough's share of capital cost of the Central Ontario System.

The figure of $924,866.02 as given on Page 172 of the last annual report is arrived at by the following method.

The generating stations on the Trent River, the step-up equipment and the loop transmission are considered as being common to all the municipalities supplied with power on this system. The capital cost of this part of the plant, therefore, is divided up between all the municipalities on a basis pro rata to the number of horse power taken. Peterborough's share of this capital is $851,328.83. In addition to the general capital as above, there is a certain amount of equipment and plant which is used solely for the supplying of Peterborough. The capital value of this plant amounts to $73,537.19. The sum of these two figures makes up the total as given in Mr. Hall's letter. The principle on which this sub-division of costs is based is as recommended by the Engineers of the Commission and approved in principle and checked as to detailed computations by the Auditors appointed by the Province.

2. Method of determination of rate of $22.50 per H.P. charged against Peterboro.

The capital cost is determined as above and this fixes the amount of interest and fixed charges payable by Peterboro. To this is added the other operating costs as shown on Pages 172 and 173 of the annual report, making up a total cost for power supplied to Peterborough for the year ending Otcober 31st, 1921, of $99,140.25. This figure divided by the average horse power, viz., 4613.7, gives an actual cost per horse power of $21.49. This, of course, is less than the interim rate of $22.50 which is charged this year, for the reason that when the interim rate was struck it was known that the Ranney Falls plant would be placed in operation during the fiscal year ending October 31st, 1922 with consequent increase in the fixed charges to be met by the system. As it could not be determined before hand just to what extent the plant would be loaded during the period of operation in the fiscal year, it was necessary to allow a reasonable margin for safety, hence the rate of $22.50. When the Commission's books are closed, the actual cost during the past year will be determined and Peterborough will be credited or debited, depending upon whether or not the interim rate of $22.50 was too high or two low.

3. Information regarding Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Lindsay, Belleville, Napanee and Kingston.

Mr. Hall asks that information should be furnished for these municipalities similar to that furnished regarding Peterborough on Pages 172 and 173 of the annual report.

The Commission's regular financial statements furnished to the Government contain full details regarding the operation in these municipalities and the figures are not published in the Commission's annual reports for the reason that none of these municipalities have contracts with the Commission. The local systems in each of these municipalities are owned by the Government and operated by the Commission as its Trustee and the Commission has each year given complete details of its operations in these municipalities to the owner, the Provincial Govern-

A TEN MILLION DOLLAR FLARE-UP

Six Business Blocks Go Up in Smoke at Astoria, Oregon—Buildings Dynamited.

PORTLAND, Oregon, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—A fire raging at Astoria, Oregon, a port near the mouth of the Columbia River, had destroyed six blocks of the business district early to-day, and threatened to wipe out the town. The Portland fire department responded to the call for help with equipment and hose, but the buildings were being dynamited in an effort to check the flames. It is estimated that the fire has already caused damage amounting to four million dollars.

LATER DESPATCH.

The business district of Astoria was laid in ruins by a fire which broke out shortly after two a.m., and despite the efforts of the local fire department and reinforcements from Portland, swept 16 blocks, causing a loss estimated at betewen $10,000,000 and $15,000,000. One man was reported dead and another missing.

THREE BROTHERS FROZEN TO DEATH.

PORT ARTHUR, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Joel Adams, a trapper, 35, was lost in a storm and perished on the ice of Rainy Lake December 2. The body was found Wednesday, according to a message received by relatives in Port Arthur yesterday. He was the third of the same family to meet such a death.

Four years ago Stephens Adams, a mail carrier, lost his life on the ice and a year later Andrew, a trapper, died likewise on the same lake. All three men left widows and five children each.

AN AGREEMENT AMONG THE ALLIED PREMIERS.

LONDON, Dec. 8. — (Canadian Press.)— Agreement among allied premiers upon the question of reparations and inter-allied debts depends largely upon proposals which Premier Poincare is expected to unfold at to-morrow's meeting here, according to an authoritative statement from Belgian delegations which arrived this morning.

Until these proposals have been made known and considered, delegation said, it would be difficult to foretell what course Belgium would be likely to take during conversations over week end.

WERE SHOT AS REPRISAL FOR ASSASSINATION

Rory O'Connor Had to Be Assisted to the Scaffold—Tried by a Military Court.

CONTINUE FIGET

DUBLIN, December 7 (Canadian Press). — Rory O'Connor, Liam Mellowes, Joseph McKelvey, and Richard Barret were executed this morning at Mount Joy Prison as a reprisal for the killing of Sean Hales, the deputy shot yesterday, and a sa solemn warning to those associated with them in the "conspiracy of assassination against the representatives of the Irish people," according to an official army announcement issued here to-day.

It is intimated that the Irish Free State Government is determined to put an end to the armed rebellion as quickly as possible, and has decided on the most drastic measures to that end.

Rory O'Connor and Liam Mellowes were the leaders of the band of insurgents that held Four Courts building in its stand against Free State troops last June, and were taken prisoners when the building was captured after the three-day siege.

The prisoners were tried by military court-martial during the night, found guilty, and sentenced to death.

Sentence was carried out at 9.20 this morning.

Three priests were present.

They were marched blindfolded to the place of execution.

O'Connor had to be assisted to the scaffold.

The startling swiftness with which the Free State Government, in consequence of the assassination of Deputy Hales, executed the rebels caused a great sensation among the Dublinites, used as they are to sensational happenings.

Through to-day's executions, the Irregulars lost two of their principal leaders and two other important, although less known, men.

All four surrendered after the destruction of Four Courts, in the seizure of which O'Connor and Mellowes took a leading part.

CONTINUE FIGHT.

LONDON, December 7 (Canadian Press). — The Irish Republicans, says a despatch to the Evening Standard, have issued a manifesto, describing Timothy Healy, Governor-General of the Free State, as a life-long enemy of Ireland, and adds, "The fight will go on as long as there is a man in Ireland. It is war to the death."

LONDON, Dec. 8. — (Canadian Press).—The Dublin correspondent of the Evening Standard reports that a party of men to-day entered Mercer's Hospital and shot a Free State soldier lying in one of the beds, in reprisal for the executions of Rory O'Connor and Liam Mellowes.

Three Noted Rebels

Three of the four most noted Irish insurgents have now paid the price of their war against the Free State, —Erskine Childers, Rory O'Connor and Liam Mellowes. Eamon De Valera is still at large.

Mellowes was secretary to the old military executive, while O'Connor was head of that body and was generally credited with leadership of the armed movement against the treaty.

Richard Mulcahey, Minister of Defense, on behalf of the Army Council issued a proclamation to-day, which read: —"Conspiracy exists to assassinate members of the Nation's Parliament and has already claimed two victims To safeguard the life of the nation itself, sternest measures are necessary"

Rory O'Connor was an engineer in the service of the Dublin Corporation and received half pay during his sojourn in jail. Land mines were found in his cell when the outbreak occurred in Mount Joy Jail recently. Mellowes was a member of last Dail Eireann, McKelvey was a Belfast man from Falls district. When the split in the army occurred he sided with the executive forces. Military circles in Belfast regarded him as stormy Petrel Barret was quarter master from West Cork.

BAR WARSHIPS TURKS DEMAND

LAUSANNE, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press). — Turkey's proposals for regulations of the Straits of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, presented to the Near East conference to-day, were heard with satisfaction by representatives of the Allied Powers and the United States, as they were found not to contain any contention that the Straits should be closed to foreign warships, as Russia had demanded.

Turkey, as her plan was presented by Ismet Pasha, asked that warships passing through the Straits to the Black Sea should be limited in number so as not to constitute a danger, the suggestion being made that they be confined to a lighter class of vessels, for protection of international commerce.

Ismet asked further that warships be prohibited from lingering in the [illegible] guarantees against surprise attacks from land or sea, in the Sea of Marmora and Constantinople.

Control of Straits.

In presenting a counter suggestion concerning the control of the Straits and the Bosphorus to the Near East conference to-day, the Turk ask guarantees against surprise attacks from land or sea, threatening the security of the Straits, limitation of naval forces bound for the Black Sea so that they will not constitute danger to a zone extending between the two Straits to the Black Sea, interdiction upon the maintenance of warships in the Black Sea and the liberty of passage for merchantmen in time of peace and war.

The Turkish position on the Straits was presented by Ismet Pasha, who declared that Turkey had never acted contrary to international treaties concerning that waterway.

It was needless, he said, to have a demilitarized zone around the Bosphorus. It was sufficient to indicate that there would be no fortification, either land or naval, on either side. Roumania, Siberia, Greece and Bulgaria announced their adhesion to the Allied plan, and the meeting adjourned until this afternoon.

DELEGATES IN A NEW ROLE AT WELLAND HOTEL

Wild Women and Wild Men Kept Temperance Delegates Awake Until Three O'clock a.m.

WILL INVESTIGATE

WELLAND, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Five delegates to the recent convention of the World League Against Alcohol in Toronto had an experience in a Welland hotel this morning that will likely add to their strong abhorrence of intoxicating liquor and provide a subject of investigation for the local police. A party of five, including three woman and, according to information ascertained to-day, was registered at a hotel where a banquet was being held. Liquor is said to have been partaken freely by many of the guests at the banquet, and men in an advanced state of intoxication were very much in evidence. Several of the inebriates engaged in peripatetic exercise during the night, and one made his way into the room of one of the women guests, who claims that she was insulted. The entertainment at the gathering was of a varied nature, but the feature was provided by young women table dancers, who are supposed to have been imported from Buffalo for the occasion. Revelry reigned in this boisterous way until early this morning, and the temperance delegates declared, before leaving leaving here to-day, that they did not get to sleep until three this morning.

TO SETTLE WAGE DISPUTE TONIGHT

Agreement Between Canadian Railways and Men Imminent.

MONTREAL, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—C. P. Riddell, secretary of the Railway Association of Canada, announced this afternoon that a settlement of the wage dispute between Canadian railways and rail shopmen is imminent, and that an agreement will in all likelihood be signed before this evening. This dispute affects approximately 35,000 rail shopmen throughout Canada.

Negotiations between shopmen and Canadian railway companies over their wage dispute began last Monday in the offices of the Railway Association of Canada. The issue was the July wage reductions, which have been bitterly opposed by the men.

Two inquiries by boards of conciliation have been held, while two strike votes were taken by the men. The first vote was for a strike, but on the second the men's officers were order to negotiate.

Reductions imposed by the railways ranged from 12 to 20 per cent.

STEAM TRAWLER SUNK ON THE GRAND BANKS.

Danish Steamer Stood By and Rescued Crew of the Ill-fated Boat.

HALIFAX, December 8 (Canadian Press). — A wireless from Cape Race this morning to C. H. Harvey, agent for the Department of Marine and Fisheries reads as follows:

"Auguste Leblonde sunk on 7th at 2 a.m., latitude 45.23 north, longitude 49.15 west."

The August Leblonde, thought to be a steam trawler out of Fecant, France, was reported yesterday in distress on the Grand Banks, with the Danish steamer Neils Neilsen standing by, the latter having taken off their crew.

BARE BOARDS SHOWING IN SOME OF LOCAL RETAILERS' NUT COAL BINS BOOKING ORDERS IS SUSPENDED

Satisfactory Substitutes and Larger Sizes of Hard Coal Available, but the Poor Man's Specialty is Exhausted for the Present.

THE CONSUMER MUST LEARN TO ECONOMIZE

Only the proverbial two jumps separated the thermometer and the register of Peterborough's coal supply in their race toward the zero mark this week. Bare boards were showing in some of the retailers' bins, and the acceptance of orders of nut coal were temporarily suspended yesterday afternoon. Satisfactory substitutes and larger sizes were available, but the poor man's specialty was exhausted, although one yard was delivering two cars that had been sold weeks ago and others expected early delivery of shipments for which they had received invoices.

Interviews with a number of the retailers indicated that no person was being turned away without coal of some kind or other, and although some of the merchants were sanguine and disinclined to worry about the maintenance of supplies sufficient for the city's needs, the enquiries indicated that the margin of safety had been reduced for the time being to a rather precarious slimness.

Coal on the Way.

Mr. T. N. D. Kelly, of the Peterborough Fuel and Transfer Company, told the Examiner that their stock of nut coal was sold out, but they had some in transit which might reach here this week. This shipment comprised seven car-loads, of which two cars were soft coal. The Kelly brothers of Bridgenorth recently acquired this business, and have been raking the market to replenish their stocks. Letters to independent companies have not brought encouraging replies, and the Messrs. Kelly have had to depend largely upon the Delaware and Hudson, one of the "line" connections, for their deliveries.

At the office of H. B. Taylor and Son it was stated that nut coal had been sold up to yesterday, but the quantity on hand had all been taken. This yard has been receiving about half independent coal. The demand had been noticeably quickened this week, and it was believed that shipments would probably be equal to the requirements of customers.

The price quoted by both these dealers was $16.50 a ton, and although the nut size had run out, some of both the larger and smaller sizes were available.

"Independent" Coal.

Mr. Robert Hicks, of the Robt. Hicks Co., Ltd., told the Examiner that his company had been getting mostly independent coal, for which they had to pay a premium. He considered that it had been a question of securing coal even though a higher price had to be paid for it, and he intimated that the company might have obtained even more of it had local control been more encouraging to the importation of coal purchased from the independent sources.

SOLDIERS' GRAVES ARE WELL MARKED

Mr. L. LeBarr Receives Photograph of Cemetery At Etaples.

Mr. L. Lebarr has received a photograph of the grave of his son, Private Harold Lebarr, who died of wounds on November 19, 1917 after Passchendaele and was buried at Etaples. It shows a vista of white tombstones, somewhat similar in shape to those which mark the older graves in local cemeteries. A maple leaf stands out with cameo clearness at the top and underneath is a cross with the inscription of Private Lebarr's name, his regiment, the 5th C.M.R. and regimental number 195135 and date of death.

This letter was recently written from Paris, by Brother Gregory of the De La Salle College, Aurora, who went to Belgium to take part in a retreat of the Christian Brothers, that continued 100 days. A significant part of the letter is the following reference to the very thorough and satisfactory manner in which the graves and the cemetery at Etaples are taken care of. 'I dropped off at Amiens the other day and went over to Etaples. I am glad I did, for I am pleased with the excellent attention the graves of the "Boys" are receiving at the hands of the British authorities. I should like to see it when they have everything completed."

PLAINTIFF GETS $127.45 AND COSTS

Judgment Given in Lennox vs. Bullock Case

This was an action brought by Ira Lennox, a motor mechanic, against R. J. Bullock, the proprietor of a motor garage at Lakefield.

Neither the plaintiff's case nor the defendant's defence are made very clear or conclusive.

"I cannot congratulate either side on the manner in which they have kept their accounts. After giving it the best attention I possibly can under the circumstances, I have concluded to allow the plaintiff's claim in full at the amount claimed, $342.60.

"In addition to the credits given the defendant in the plaintiff's claim, I allow him further credits of $215.15."

Deducting this from th claim, as above set out, there is a balance owing of $127.45.

Judgment will therefore be entered for the plaintiff for $127.45, with Division Court costs.

J. O. O'Brien for the plaintiff and C. R. Widdifield for defendant.

SMALL GARDEN OFTEN PAYS BIG.

It is possible to make the garden pay big dividends for the amount of labour put upon it if that labour is well directed. A space 50 x 100 feet will, if properly planned and worked, give a supply of practically all vegetables except potatoes and a few other coarse vegetables, for a family of four the whole year. It must be rich soil, well cultivated, and a plan followed that will use the space all the growing season.

ment, in whose hands must rest the decision as to the publicity which they are to be given. These statements, of course, have all been audited by Messrs. Clarkson, Gordon & Dillworth before presentation to the Government. In the case of Peterborough, any surplus from local operations is applied for the benefit of the power and light users in that municipality, whereas in the case of Oshawa, Bowmanville, etc., any surplus from local operations goes into the general surplus of the system and is not applied for the particular benefit of the individual municipality.

4. Authority of the H.E.P.C. to charge Peterboro with a share of the capital cost of the system.

In the contract entered into between the City of Peterborough and this Commission, the City of Peterborough undertook to pay cost for power supplied to it. This being the case, the Commission must of necessity allocate Peterboro's share of the capital cost of the system and include the fixed charges on same in the cost of power supplied to Peterborough.

Mr. Hall asks why a similar charge is not made against all other cities, towns, villages and hamlets that purchase power from the Central Ontario System. The answer is that a similar charge is made and the figures are shown in the annual report, in just the same way as in the case of Peterboro, for all municipaltiies having contracts of a class similar to Peterboro. Besides those municipalities there are others whose system is owned and operated by the Commission as Trustee for the Provincial Government. Regarding these latter the Commission reports regularly and fully to the Government through the medium of statemenst prepared by the accountants of the Commission and audited by the special auditors.

5. Operation of Pulp Mill and Bruton Twsp.

Mr. Hall asks whether the 1921 loss of $17,693.64 on the Campbellford Pulp Mill is charged up to the power and light users on the Central Ontario System. This loss is not charged up to the power and light users as the operations of the Pulp Mill are conducted separately from the power systems and entirely separate records are kept. As a matter of fact, the Pulp Mill has not been any burden to the balance of the system, as its total operations to date have resulted in a substantial profit.

6. Operating Deficit.

Mr. Hall cites operating deficit down to Otcober 31st, 1921 of $168,930.15 and asks if that loss is to be charged to the power and light users in the district.

It should be noted that this is not actually an operating deficit. As a matter of fact, the entire system has earned sufficient revenue to pay all operating costs, all interest ,all sinking fund on the proportion of capital on which sinking fund is charged, and in addition has built up a net reserve for renewals and contingencies totalling $912,114.52. In other words the system has met all operating costs an dfixed charges and has only fallen short of the full theoretical renewals reserve set up, by the sum of $168,930.15. This, of course, does not affect Peterboro and the other municipalities which have contracts with the Commission, as these municipalities are served at actual cost.

7. Doubtful Accounts.

Mr. Hall cites the item of $7,251.70 which is set up as a reserve for doubtful accounts. Mr. Hall asks what municipalities are in default and what is the necesity for the making of such a provision.

This reserve is set up to provide for any accounts receivable which may prove to be bad through liquidation of power customers in systems served direct by the Commission as Trustee for the Government. No municipalities are in default and the necessity of making this provision is simply the exercise of ordinary business sense.

8. Accounts Receivable.

Mr. Hall draws attention to an account receivable for a debt payable by municipalities in respect to the operation of rural lines, amounting to the sum of $10,809.09 and asks what municipalities have made default in paying this item.

No municipalities have made such default and the municipalities have neither been asked for, nor do they offer excuses, as none are required. The rural lines in question are in the Townships of Whitby, East Whitby and Pickering. The account receivable is the amount of losses incurred before the rural lines were brought to a self-sustaining basis and the account will be extinguished through the accrual of surplus earnings.

9. Itemized List of Local Utilities, giving in detail their receipts and expenditures, etc.

This information has been regularly furnished to the Government by the Commission in the form of properly audited statements and Messrs. Clarkson, Gordon & Dillworth have reported fully upon various aspects of these statements to the Government.

1. Capital cost per horse power for various municipalities.

Mr. Hall shows the capital cost per horse power for Peterboro, Whitby and a number of other municipalities and asks for similar information regarding all the other cities, towns and villages which receive power from the Central Ontario System.

All this information has been furnished to the Government by the Commission and has been passed upon by the Governments' Auditors.

1. Proposed sale of Central Ontario System to Municipalities.

In the second paragraph of Mr. Hall's letter he asks for a number of details, all bearing upon policies to be followed in disposing of the component parts of the Central Ontario System to the Municipalities.

All of these matters are subject to determination by the owners of the property and doubtless will be considered by the Municipalities and this Commission feels that at the present time, it is not its place to set forth any terms on which sales could be made, but that the proper course is rather to await the direction of the Government in this respect.

IRISH LEADERS ASSASSINATED AS A REPRISAL

SHOT IN STREET.

DUBLIN, December 7. Canadian Press. — Sean Hales, a deputy of the Irish Parliament, was shot and killed yesterday as he was leaving the Ormond Hotel for Parliament accompanied by Brigadier General Patrick O'Maille, who was sworn in as Deputy Speaker of the House on Wednesday.

General O'Maille was seriously wounded, being shot in the head and arm.

General O'Maille underwent an immediate operation and last night was reported as doing as well as could be expected. An official statement from the army headquarters at Portobello barracks, said that his condition was not considered critical.

The shooting of the deputies is in fulfillment of a constant threat. Not only the Ministers who ordered the recent executions but all the members of the Dail Eireann who voted in favor of repressive measures had their names published in a black list and were warned that they would be held responsible.

Hence some of the Ministers and several of the members of the Dail have for some time past taken up their residence in the government offices but some were willing to risk their lives by residing outside.

Hales was a prominent supporter of the government and had been a strenuous fighter against the British. He was one of Michael Collins' closest personal friends. In 1916 he was arested by the British at Cork and kept in prison for nine months. He was the chief agent in holding the Irish Volunteers together in Southwest and West Cork, and took part in many ambushes against the British.

He was in charge of the Bandon Battalion from 1917 to 1922, and in April last took office as Brigadier-General in the same area, and since then has been a Major-General in the armed defence forces of the government. He voted for the Anglo-Irish

Ulster Decides Not to Have Anything to Do With South

It Took Just Half an Hour For Both Houses of the Ulster Parliament to Pass Unanimous Vote Refusing to Associate With Irish Free State.

BELFAST, December 8 (Canadian Press). — Premier Sir James Craig, accompanied by the Marquis of Londonderry, the leader of the Senate, and Colonel Spender, Secretary to the Ulster Cabinet, started for London last night, bearing an address to the King, contracting Ulster out of the Irish Free State.

The address was voted unanimously by both Houses of the Ulster Parliament yesterday, and so rapid were the proceedings that the entire business occupied less than half an hour.

In the course of his explanatory speech in the House of Commons Premier Craig declared it was useless to hold out any present hopes that Ulster would go under the Dublin Parliament, and added that the moment such a question arose he would refuse to remain Premier. The only possible course to secure happiness in Ireland was for the North and South each to go its own way.

The Premier's whole attitude was against any accommodation with the South. He said the Northern Parliament would have nothing whatever to do with the boundary commission, provided for under an agreement which he described as a bargain entered into by the wrong people behind the back of the Northern Government.

He admitted that, if the representatives in the Northern Parliament of the border counties could arrive at an agreement that something could be done here and there in the matter of the border arrangements, he would not stand in the way of approving such an agreement.

He insisted, however, that nothing could be done in the way of bringing an amending Act through the British House of Commons, because, "thanks largely to the Ulster delegation which went through the British constituencies prior to the elections, they had secured a majority for Ulster in the British House of Commons, which would refuse to carry such an Act."

Canada Has Fuel For Fifty Thousand Years

B. F. Haanel Tells of Vast Resources of Coal, Wood, Natural Gas, Crude Oil and Water Power in the Dominion.

HARD TO DEVELOP.

OTTAWA, Dec. 8.— (Canadian Press).—"When the sum total of heat energy reported in Canada's resources of solid fuels—coals of all kinds, peat and wood, natural gas, crude oil and water powers, is considered it will be seen that the country possesses sufficient energy for heat and power to answer her requirements at the present rate of use for a period considerably over fifty thousand years." This statement was made by B. F. Haanel, B.Sc., M.E.I.C., engineer of the Mines Branch, at a meeting last night of the Engineering Institute of Canada to discuss "the fuel situation in Canada".

Mr. Haanel said the fuel resources of Canada comprised the coals of British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan in the west, the coal deposits of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick in the east, the large areas overlain be peats in all parts of the Dominion, the oil and natural gas fields of Ontario, New Brunswick and Alberta and the standing forests. If, he said, by fuel resources is meant all sources of heat and energy represented in the developed and undeveloped water powers distributed through the country. In fact the coal resources alone he said, would last at the present rate for well over thirty thousand years.

Freight rates, Mr. Haanel said, were the reasons why the surplus from the west could not be sent to Ontario and Quebec where it was needed. The freight rates were due not only to the 2,000 mile haul but to the impossibility of balancing freights. Coal cars destined from the west would have to return empty. Even if the freight rates were cut in half it would be a question whether the western dealers could seriously complete with the American colleries The speaker noted that Manitoba was rapidly becoming independent of American coals through the increasing use of Alberta coal both for industrial and domestic purposes. The same would apply to Saskatchewan.

Nova Scotia, he said could increase her exports of coal to Quebec to a maximum of one and a half to two million tons. The coking of a large part of this by a plant situated at Montreal and the intensive development of peat bogs favorably situated at Montreal and the intensive development of peat bogs favorably situated with respect to short rail hauls to points of large consumption would very materially reduce the annual requirements for anthracite coal.

CHILD DIED AS A RESULT OF BURNS

Father Was Sick in Bed and Mother Was Absent at the Time.

EAST EMILY, Dec. 8. — Myrtle Carew, the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Carew, of East Emily, died this morning as a result of burns received last evening while playing around the stove, in the absence of the mother. The father was sick in bed and the mother had gone ou tto do some chores. She was absent a few minutes when her little boy, George, ran out to tell her that something was wrong with Myrtle. When the mother reached the house the child was lying in the doorway and her clothes were on fire. Dr. Earl, of Omemee, was summoned, but the child was so badly burned that she passed away this morning.

The funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon from the family residence at two o'clock.

FAILURE ON STAGE SENT TO BEDFORD

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—When Margaret McGovern, 20, was sentenced yesterday in Special Sessions to an indeterminate term in the Bedford Reformatory on a shoplifting charge, she told the Court that her plight was the result of an unsuccessful attempt at a stage career. She was arrested on Nov. 28 last by store detectives after she had taken a coat valued at $49.50 from McGreery's in Fifth Avenue. Detectives said that she had concealed the coat with articles in a box which she carried and in which the detectives also discovered a .32 calibre automatic pistol. Sentence was suspended by Justices Murphy, Freschi and Moss on a charge of violating the Sullivan law.

After her arraignment several days ago, May Mangan, a probation officer, was assigned to investigate the girl's activities. Miss Mangan reported yesterday that the prisoner was the daughter of respectable parents in a suburb of Boston and that an actress induced the girl to come to this city to obtain a position on the stage. The girl assumed the name of Peggy O'Grady when she was employed as a singer in a vaudeville revue, but her stage career came to a close three weeks later when she was discharged as incompetent. She drifted into bad company, Miss Mangan continued, and on the night before her arrest, the girl said, she met a man in a motion picture theatre who gave her the pistol to mind for him when he saw a detective approaching them on the street. She was to return the pistol to the man the next day and, having no place to conceal it, carried it with her on the day she stole the articles from the stores. A sister of the girl was in court when sentence was imposed.

MUSSOLINI SAYS ITALY AGREES TO PLANS OF ALLIES

Says Proposals Are Perfectly Reasonable But Russians and Turks Continue to Object.

MAY BE WAR.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—"Italy, in the negotiations at Lausanne, is in full agreement with the Allies," said Premier Mussolini to the Italian correspondents before going aboard his train for Paris last night.

"What we propose to the Turks is perfectly reasonable. I hope the negotiations are successful; otherwise there will be war."

Mussolini stopped off at Lausanne last night on his way to London. He dined with Lord Curzon and discussed with him the difficult points of the Near Eastern negotiations. It is understood that the Russian objection to the Allied project for control of the Straits was one of the subjects under consideration.

The Russian delegation, it was reported last night, continues strongly to oppose the Entente plan, and it is even said that the Russians will refuse to sign any agreement relative to the opening of the Straits to the warships of all nations.

The counter-propositions which the Turks are expected to make today, regarding the Straits, will deal, among other things, with Constantinople, and anything calculated to infringe upon Turkish sovereignty over Constantinople will probably lead to strong objections. The Angora spokesman said last night that there was a possibility Turkey would oppose international control there in any form and remonstrate against the Allied plan for a fixed garrison of 10,000 in Constantinople.

Everything, the Turks say, comes back to the question of their sovereignty, and declare their determination to have it respected.

ALLIED PREMIERS WILL GATHER FOR A BIG CONFERENCE

Meeting is Looked Upon As One of the Most Important Held Since the Armistice Was Signed.

MEET IN LONDON.

PARIS, Dec. 8.—(Canadan Press.)—Premier Poincare leaves at noon to-day for London to attend the conference of Allied Premiers which is regarded, by many here as the last great effort of the Entente to reach an agreement on Germany's reparations bill before France sets out independently to collect in her own way.

The meeting is looked upon as in many respects the most important since the armistice, involving as it does the continuance of friendly cooperation between France and Great Britain. A lesser, but none the less important factor, is the prevailing impression that M. Poincare's political existence is at stake in the policy for which the proposed Brussels financial conference stands.

Unless the premiers decide in London to convene the Brussels meeting, many believe M. Poincare will find his usefulness at an end. Others think that the French Premier, in the event of a disagreement at London, would proceed to the execution of his plan for the occupation of the Ruhr Valley and the exploitation of the occupied Rhinealnd before making way for someone else, but faith in the efficiency of this scheme of penalties appears to be decreasing in official quarters, and many say it will never be resorted to.

French optimism over the makeup of the new British Government has given way lately to a feeling of pessimism in view of certain indications that Prime Minister Bonar Law holds to substantially the same views on reparation as did Mr. Lloyd George.

Although the British have disclosed no stated policy since the resignation of Mr. Lloyd George, Premier Bonar Law seems to agree with his predecessor that Germany should be given a long moratorium from cash payments; that the total of the indemnity should be reduced, and that no military measures should be used in attempts to force Germany to pay.

M. Poincare's much-discussed plan of settlement ,although withheld on PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT.

While the administration of the prohibition law in Ontario could not by any stretch of imagination be described as perfect and many critics use almost unparliamentary language in referrign to the operations of the prohibition officials, yet figures as to the enforcement of the dry laws across the line indicate that the Ontario officers are models of efficiency, energy and effectiveness, when compared with the men employed by Uncle Sam.

The United States' battle against violations of the Volstead Act is carried on by an army of 3,800 officials and over $9,000,000 was spent last year attempting to enforce prohibition.

Yet for the year ending June 30, 1922, the noble 3,800 succeeded in securing but 20,483 convictions.

That averages fewer than seven convictions per year for each prohibition officer, a showing that does not earn the dry sleuths any laurels for being alert, if it does not indeed prove that the majority of the prohibition officials must be afflicted with bad vision and poor hearing.

If dry ofifcers across the border cannot average seevn conviction each in twelve months, prohibition must really prohibit in the United States or else the enforcement brigade needs a shaking up—most probably the latter.

YES—IT ALL DEPENDS.

The fact that Henry Ford often drops into a town barber shop for his Saturday night shave is considered of sufficient importance to get into print.

Also, it is recorded that Clemenceau retires about 7.30 each evening.

It all depends on who does these things, says the London Advertiser. There are thousands of men who drop into barber shops on Saturday nights and have their chins scraped for the Sunday dress-up, and there are thousands of people who retire for the night shortly after they have shoved back their chairs from the supper table.

When a Fielding or a Lloyd-George preached the need for national thrift the people of two countries listened and started salting down the stray dollars. The same advice from a homespun financier would bring the retort that the old miser wants to put all our money in the teapot so he can come along and get it.

A local tub-thumper could get on the hustings and talk annexation of Canada to United States, and people would laugh at him; William Howard Taft, when president of the United Stte, turned the phrase "parting the ways," and it was the club that the Conservatives used to batter their way to office in 1911.

Moral: If you want to establish a great truth, or lodge a great fact, whisper it to a big man and let him say it for you.

PERNICIOUS SECTIONAL PRIDE.

The City authorities of New Westminister, B.C., who have sent a request to Ottawa that their City should be made the headquarters of the Canadian National Railways could not have read Sir Henry Thornton's Montreal speech.

Next to interference by the politicians he submitted that the greatest impediment to the success of Canada's railways was the parochial spirit that caused certain districts to regard their own local wants and needs as more important than the success of the enterprise as a whole.

The headquarters of the system should be located where they offered the best advantages for effective management.

The people of Canada as a whole are willing to allow Sir Henry Thornton to decide for himself where that point may be.

They do not care a whit whether Toronto or Ottawa or Montreal or New Westminister, for that matter be chosen, so long as the management of Canada's railways can be most successfully conducted from the city that may be adopted.

Local jealously over a matter of this kind is as much to be deplored as are attempts to play politics with the railway question.

Sir Henry has well described it as a "pernicious sectional pride and his warning that the National Railways as a whole cannot be sacrificed to meet the wishes of any part of the Dominion" is one that should be remembered.

ARCHAIC METHODS.

In several instances the City Council this year has departed and wisely departed from the old practice of accepting the lowest tender in the case of the garbage contract and similiar civic enterprises.

It has always seemed to the Examiner a silly procedure in cases where there is but a smaller difference in the figures to award a contract to a new man who may be a few dollars cheaper when the other contractor or official has given good service during his term.

Indeed the system of asking for tenders in contracts and appointments of this kind seems to be out of joint with the times.

The City should have its own garbage collection department and do its own snow ploughing.

If private contractors can make a living for two or three men out of the garbage collection, why could it not be done by the corporation more cheaply than under the present method?

Similarly the parks should be managed by the City and in charge of a permanent commissioner.

This business of asking for tenders every year for the caretaking of the parks is a farce, especially when there is danger of an experienced man being crowded out by an incompetent applicant whose tender may be $75 or $100 lower.

What chance is there for any continuity of policy under the archaic method now in use?

New aspirants for municipal honours might find these points worth investigating as possible campaign material.

CITY DWELLERS NOT WANTED.

The suggestion made by Venizelos that the United States should absorb the thousands of Greeks who cannot be taken care of in their native land meets with scant approval from the Chicago Tribune.

"Why not Canada? Why not Australia? asks the Tribune. There is more room in either than in the United States. The Greeks are agriculturists and it is workers to open up the land that both these countries are calling for."

And then our Chicago contemporary points out the reason why Canada would not welcome an influx of Greeks on a large scale.

"In the United States" it remarks "the Greeks do not go on the land. They stay in cities where there are already too many people."

Exactly, and the situation in Canada is just as described across the line.

We have no Greek farmers in Canada, at least none that the Examiner has heard of, although there may be a few in the West.

The Greek immigrants that come to us, although they may have been farmers at home, show no inclination to follow agricultural pursuits in this country.

They are found in our cities, operating restaurants and pool rooms and shoe shine parlours and the more humbler type engaged in street vending.

Go on the land? Not for the Greeks that the cities of the East know.

There is no objection to Greeks as such, but at this stage Canada's chief need is more population for her vacant lands, not more city dwellers, no matter whence they come.

Our urban centres are growing fast enough; it is the rural areas that are calling for more people.

THE THORNTON BANQUET.

At the Board of Trade banquet to Sir Henry Thornton last night notable speeches were made.

They should be carefully read by all citizens interested in the welfare of the Dominion.

If the Dominion Government at all times and in every way gives to the new manager of the National Railways unrestricted authority, an authority unhindered by act, suggestion or insinuation, the best that can be done for public ownership will have a chance.

It is not altogether Government ownership as such that has bred widespread indignation and hostility on the part of the Canadian public. It is to a large extent Government operation with its parlyzing patronage system and the consequences of dishonest construction that have helped to blast all prospect of success.

If our Government-owned railways had been created by honest, business-like methods, they would not be weighed down with an insupportable burden.

The Government-owned railways of Canada were built to a large extent by speculating politician-contractors in partnership with conniving and conspiring Governments, Federal, Provincial, and Municipal, to secure all sorts of unreasonable concessions.

Bounties, lands and rights of way were secured by a system of rake-off payments to politicians.

Buccaneers, with unblushing effrontery, bribed the Ministers and bribed Civil Servants to secure their unreasonable franchises and ownership of the public domain.

This blighting system resulted in railways wastefully constructed, and in many of its miles wronely placed though conspiracy to placate designing politicians and land speculators.

If the promise of freedom of action made to Sir Henry Thornton is honorably fulfilled the Government railways will get their first chance.

It will be all to the good of the C.P.R. to have uncontrolled, honest management of the National Railways. Mr. Beatty foreshadowed what might be done for all the railways, public and private, by friendly co-operation and without this co-operation much less than the best for all the roads will be achieved.

Sir Joseph Flavelle made a very effective speech that should have a beneficent influence.

Mr. Beatty was sensible and happy, indicative of good-will.

Sir Henry Thornton's speech is a hopeful augury. Every Canadian should read it and memorize it.

Let us hope the new order of things has for the country some promies of salvation from the impending bankruptcy that seemed to menace the Dominion.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Canada welcomes her new sister Dominion, the Irish Free State.

With the Council's decision that pool rooms must be safe from a fire stand point, there is no quarrel. It is a policy that might be extended to other places frequented by the public.

Speaking of Sunday skating, it is evident that some of the aldermen believe that "the wicked stand in slippery places."

Fire Chief Ten Eyck of Hamilton has retired after many years service. No one man in Canada has been so successful in training firemen, nor has any fire brigade turned out so many chiefs for other departments as Hamilton's. Our own fire chief is an example at hand.

Will the Hearst papers "play up" President Cosgrave's tribute to the scrupulous fairness of the British statesmen in carrying out the Irish agreement?

Los Angeles' "hammer murderess" has made her escape, thus robbing the jury of a chance to acquit her as juries on the other side have a habit of doing when the accused is of the fair sex and blessed with pulchritude.

Hamilton is to be favored with a visit from Mrs. Pankhurst shortly. The good old lady has increased wonderfully in popularity since ceasing to stir the muddy waters of politics and devoting her talents to sociological subjects instead.—Hamilton Spectator.

Washington has erected a memorial to the 97 children killed in the streets during the year. A provision for the addition of further names is necessary if the record is to be of complete service.

A correspondent wants to know if a saxophone is a very difficult instrument to learn to play. It is very difficult—for the neighbors.

DeValera's instructions to Irishmen not to pay taxes are advice that a lot of people would like to take—in Canada as well as in the Emerald Isle.

Northern Ontario has been swept by a blizzard. A sixty-mile gale, accompanied by heavy snow and a sharp drop in temperature will cause the fire sufferers to appreciate Peterborough's generosity.

A small dose at bedtime brings relief and laughter by morning

HOSPITAL and doctor's records prove that 75 per cent of human ills has its origin in the intestinal canal, complicated with what is commonly called constipation. Realizing what that figure means, mothers should contrive methods of handling their children while they still control them that will prevent these future dangers. Teach children regularity of bowel movement, and be especially watchful of young girls. Insist on two passages a day until the age of 18, when one is usually sufficient. Give plenty of oranges and apples, plenty of butter because it lubricates the intestines, and encourage the drinking of water.

If you detect restlessness, belching, gas or wind on the stomach, sleeplessness, or lack of appetite, examine the tongue and you will find it coated, accompanied by unpleasant breath. The child is bilious, constipated. According to age, give from one-half to a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin, which children never object to taking as they like the taste. By morning the youngster will be well again. Likewise if the nostrils are stuffed up or there is persistent sneezing, a dose of Laxative Syrup Pepsin will break up the fever and cold.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try my Laxative Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 23 Caldwell Building, Toronto, Ont. Do it now!

Mr. A. F. Lithgow of Montreal, keeps his family well in that way, and Mrs. E. Whalley of Winnipeg, Man., has been using Laxative Syrup Pepsin for her baby, her mother and herself. Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. The formula, however, is on every package. Druggists have sold it with satisfaction to their customers for over 30 years, and it is now the largest selling family laxative in the world. Buy a bottle today. It will last you for months, and the cost is less than a cent a dose.

IRISH LEADERS

Treaty in the Dail Eireann in January.

Sean Hales' brother, Tom, is one of the chief irregular leaders, and is still fighting against the government. Tom Hales is the man who is reported to have accepted responsibility for the ambush in which Michael Collins met his death. There was a report also that after the killing of Collins Tom Hales offered to throw down his arms and join the National forces, but he never did so.

President Cosgrave, of the Irish Cabinet made the announcement in the Parliament of the assassination, and Richard Mulcahy, Minister of Defence, paid a tribute to the two men. He was deeply affected and his voice was tense with passion, when in a few sentences of bitter irony he declared that these "victims had no priest or benefit of religious comfort, and no reporters were present."

This was aimed at the Labor and other independent members who have frequently urged the presence of representatives of the press at the courtmartials and have criticized the withholding the announcement of executions from relatives until all was over.

The risk to other members of the Parliament is serious, and even the members for Trinity College have received threatening letters. They have not howeevr sought the shelter of the Government Building. Two of them reside in the college and two in their own homes. The members can gain access to the Parliament Chamber without appearing on the street. The Museum of Natural History joins up the College of Science, which is now the government building, with Leinster House in the theatre of which Parliament sits.

THE BEAUTY CONTEST TAKES A NEW TURN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—The heated contest for beauty honors among male students at the Midway has come to an end almost as its very conception. To forestall the jealousies and grievances against the Cap and Gown, University of Chicag annual, which was conducting the contest, Russell Pierce, editor of the Rap and Pound Department of the year book, indicated last night that the contest would be called off and that there would be substituted a parody competition in which caricatures and not actual photographs of candidates would be use. The candidates will be selected for their popularity more than for their pulchritude, he added.

"It would be impossible to conduct a bona fide beauty contest here" Pierce declared. "We couldn't possibly pick the best looking fellow on the campus, and the choice would be bound to create hard feeling. Therefore, we have decided that the competition will be carried out in a farcial manner."

the eve of the last London meeting because of the sensational Balfour note, is expected to be placed before the present meeting, but it appears that he will reveal it only in its broad outlines, reserving the detailed plan for the Brussels conference.

However, it is learned that the following definite propositions, while not constituting the plan, will probably guide the French in their arguments in London:

One—No moratorium to Germany without the surrender of productive guarantees, such as mines and forests.

Two— Reduction of the German indemnity to between 40,000,000,000 to 50,000,000,000 gold marks only on condition that there be a parallel reduction in the French and other Allied debts.

Three—Revision of the percentages of the German payments in favor of France. France at present is entitled to 52 per cent., but would claim Great Britains' 22 per cent. in return for fixing the indemnity at the suggested amount.

Four—When the voluntary default of Germany is definitely established, or when Germany refuses to carry out the financial reform of balancing her budget and stabilizing the mark, penalties would be imposed. These would indicate extension of the Allied occuaption of the Ruhr so as to permit a customs cordon around that teritory, and the economic exploitation and general administration of the Rhineland.

On the other hand, the British, backed by Italy and Belgium, hold that it is useless to convene the Brussels meeting unless there is a clear preliminary understanding on certain points which M. Poincare would leave for consideration at Brussels.

These are the fixing of a reasonable sum of indemnity and the method of its payment; redistribution cancellation of the Allied debts so of the payments among th eAllies, far as possible without affecting the United States' methods by which Germany's finances can be restored under Allied control, and the raising of a loan for Germany.

FIND SLAIN WOMAN IN BRONX ASH PIT; MISSING 8 MONTHS.

Detective and Workmen Uncover Body of Mrs. Abraham Becker in a Vacant Lot — Husband Held For Murder.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Detectives dug up the body of Mrs. Jennie Becker in a vacant lot at 140th street and Southern Boulevard, the Bronx, and changed the charge against her husband, Abraham Becker, now under arrest, to murder.

The discovery of the body and the charge against the husband were due to a report from Mrs. Samuel Martin of 633 Union avenue, the Bronx, a Democratic District Captain, to the office of District Attorney Glennon a week ago, that the whole neighborhood was seething with gossip that Becker had murdered his wife last April and had buried the body.

Reubin Norkin, who has an automobile repair shop a few feet from the lot where the body was found, was arrested as a material witness. Damaging admissions from Norkin caused the police to search in and near the yard of his repair shop. After directing detectives to the wrong place several times, they said, Norkin finally pointed out where the body was buried.

Becker is an auto driver. He had his truck repaired at Norkin's shop and frequently was in Norkin's company. Members of the District Attorney's staff in the Bronx were questioning Becker and Norton to discover what hold Becker had on Norkin. They asserted that Norkin's admissions were equal to a confession that he had helped in disposing of the body of Mrs. Becker. Why Norkin should have helped in a crime of this kind unless he had reason to fear Becker, was one of the puzzling parts of the investigation.

Said Wife Ran Away

Mrs. Becker disappeared April 6. Since then Becker has lived with Miss Anna Elias at 844 Home Avenue, the Bronx. This was frankly admitted by Miss Elias. She said that he had courted her as a single man and that a marriage license had been obtained, though they were not legally married.

In 1920 Becker deserted his wife and four children and ran away to Cleveland with Miss Elias. After three months they returned. He went back to his wife and children, and she returned to her parents.

Becker is alleged to have assured Miss Elias and others that he would "get rid" of his wife and marry her. When his wife disappeared last April, Becker's explanation to strangers was that she had run away to Philadelphia, but the police say he told some of his intimates that he had "got rid of her." After the date in April Becker put his four children in institutions —Alice, 8, and Harry, 7, in the Jewish Orphan Asylum, and Edwin and Elsie, three-year-old twins, in the Hebrew Infants' Orphan Asylum.

It was Becker's alleged confidentia statements that he had "got rid of his wife" that caused the gossip in the neighborhood which finally reached Mrs. Martin, who apparently was the first to decide that it was a matter for the police to investigate.

The strongest witness on this score found by the District Attorney's office was Harry Simonowitz of 635 Home Street, the Bronx, a former close friend of Becker, who said that on April 7, the day after the disappearance, Becker extended a hand to him and said with a grin:

"Congratulate me. I have got rid of my wife."

Forty or more witnesses were examined before the District Attorney's staff and Detective James McCarton of the Morrisania Street Station, began their questioning of Norkin, who revealed little by little until he finally pointed to the spot where the body was buried.

After three or four days of cross-examination, the police say Becker lost his original power to parry and elude, and his answers kept bringing Norkin into the case in a curious manner. Becker had been forced to admit that he and his wife had called on Mrs. Jennie Linder of 17 East 104th Street the night before his wife had disappeared. Becker, it is said, became badly mixed up in explaining the automobile route they took on the way home. He finally said they had stopped at Norkin's repair shop. He could not tell why.

It was also discovered that Becker had been attempting to smuggle out confidential messages from his cell to Norkin. Witnesses were found who told of Norkin and Becker being much together.

Norkin professed ignorance for a long time, but after many severe examinations he began to make the suggestion hesitatingly that it might be well to dig for the body near his repair shop. The police say he gave vague and curious reasons for making the suggestion and insisted that he knew nothing about the crime.

"Where would you dig?" Norkin was asked by Detective McCarton, who with workmen wich picks and shovels went to the yard of the repair shop.

"You know as much about that as I do," said Norkin, who, according to the detective, was in one of the stubborn spells which occurred at intervals between floods of admissions.

"Give us your best idea," said McCarton.

Norkin looked over the yard. The property consists of about two acres, cut off from the view of Southern Boulevard by billboard fences. The repair shop is a one-story sheet-iron building. The yard is pretty well filled with automobile trucks needing repairs. Norkin led them to one corner of the yard.

Tells Them Where to Dig

"You might begin there," he said. Workmen started in at once. From the growth of grass and the condition of the soil it was plain that the earth had not been disturbed. Digging went on apace, however, while McCarton and others reconnoitered the property looking for mounds or evidences of grave-digging.

"Try again," McCarton said to Norkin a little later.

Norkin picked out a new place to dig. Bedrock was found immediately under the soil.

"You know all about this and you can take us right to the place," said the detective. Norkin picked out another spot. Digging again was in vain.

Most of the afternoon was consumed in prospecting at the suggestion of Norkin. When the man's suggestion went wrong repeatedly Detective McCarton and others were somewhat shaken in the conviction that Norkin knew all about the crime and was going to tell all in his own way.

Finally the detective walked outside of the lot to the vacant lot north of the repair shop. There are no billboards there. The property is all visible from the street. It was once a junk yard and the ground is covered with scraps of iron, broken beams, twisted axles, fragments of wheels, bits of tin roofing and junk of all sorts. Thick grass is growing in tufts through the rusty junk. There is a large sign which says "Montuori & Son, Monumental Granite Works," but there are no granite blocks or signs of stone-cutting there now.

This looked like an unpromising prospect for the search, but McCarton began to study the ground. About twenty feet from the sidewalk of Southern Boulevard, he saw a slight eminence. The ground was clear from junk. The detective walked over and sounded it with a stick. He asserted later that he was conscious of a slight odor from the ground. Norkin, he said, turned deathly pale.

"You can tell me more about this," said McCarton to him.

"That is where you'll find it," said Norkin. The detective called the workman to the spot. There was not only a slight rise in the ground, but the soil, when prodded by a sharp stick, appeared looser than the adjoining soil.

Body Finally Discovered

The diggers were set to work. Their picks struck brick and cement. There were three well defined walls of brick and mortar, the fourth being soil. When some of the earth had been removed, there was sufficient odor to convince all that they were digging at the right place.

The ash pit, which was an old boiler vault, said to belong to a building which formerly occupied the site, was unearthed to a depth of four feet, when the shovel was turned aside by canvas.

Digging proceeded carefully. A mattress ticking was disclosed, and under it was found the body. Lime had been thrown over it, but in insufficient quantities to kill the odor of decomposition. Two shoes were then disclosed. They were laced and covered the feet. When the ticking was removed, the remains of a fully dressed body were found. There was a coat sweater and dress, falling to pieces. They had lost all color except the appearance they had taken from the clay and lime.

The skull apparently had been crushed with the blows of a hammer. The condition of the rest of the body made it impossible to ascertain whether other wounds had been inflicted.

The old boiler vault had apparently served as a ready-made grave. No tell-tale digging was necessary. The body could easily have been buried at night, the neighborhood being so lonely that there was little fear of detection.

Becker was alleged by some of the forty witnesses to have boasted, in advance of the deed, that he was going to get rid of his wife, and the theory is held that the burial place had been selected and the concealment all planned before the crime actually had been committed.

A DELICATE QUESTION FOR WOMEN JURORS.

Evidence Not Nice For Fair Sex to Listen to.

LONDON, Dec. 8. — (Canadian Press).—A delicate question with reference to women jurors came up in a recent trial in the King's Bench Division here. The action was for damages for alleged slander and there were three women on the jury when the case was called for trial.

The counsel for the plaintiff said it was a case that it was not desirable that women should have to hear if they did not wish to do so and he and counsel for the defendant had agreed that the women should be discharged from the jury if they wished it. Justice McCardie, the presiding Judge, said that a question of principle had been raised as to whether women were to be jurors only when a case was pleasant.

Counsel for the plaintiff said he did not think the women could claim to be released as a right, but if the parties in the case regarded it as desirable, and the presiding Judge agreed, they could be excused as a matter of grace.

Addressing the three women of the jury, the Judge said: "The question at issue in this case involves relations between two men. It will involve sexual points of the gravest indelicacy —questions which even men would hesitate to discuss among themselves If the ladies of the jury, or any one of them, desires to remain in that body so be it, but if the ladies prefer that their places be taken by men I will assent to their request."

One woman at once left the jury box, but the other two remained. His Lordship remarked: "I have a very high respect for the courage of these two ladies." The Court then showed the two women portions of the pleadings in the case that he had marked in pencil, and then one of them remarked: "We think that if we are called at all we ought to sit whatever the case is."

Justice McCardie—"I shall not express a view either way. I know it raises a very serious question, not only as to the privileges but as to the duty of a juror. On the other hand, there is a question as to how far it is wise to maintain the ideal of many men that women are purer and more dignified in the eyes of men if they are ignorant of the grim facts to which I have referred."

Then again addressing the two women jurors, his Lordship said: "If you desire to remain do not think that I wish you to do otherwise than as your conscience dictates. Do you both desire to remain, whatever the consequences?"

One of the two replied, "Yes, my Lord."

Thereupon the Judge remarked that there were other women in Court, and they would have gathered that the case was of an extremely unpleasant character. Those who did not wish to remain would be free to leave. "If they feel it their duty to remain," he added, "they will do so without my disapproval." There were three women in Court. Two of them left, but one remained.

Then the trial was begun.

New-features that make MUTUAL POLICIES even more attractive.

MUTUAL LIFE of Canada policies will now include, if the applicant so desires, the double indemnity feature as well as a more liberal provision in case of total disability. By these new clauses, for a very small additional premium, the Mutual Life now gives accident insurance and also provides against lapsation, in the event of serious illness.

Total and Permanent Disability

The Mutual Life has made more liberal the conditions dealing with Disability. If satisfactory evidence of the total and permanent disability of a policyholder, whether from illness or injury, is submitted to this Company, the Company will not only waive payment of further premiums, but will pay an allowance of $10.00 per month per $1,000 of insurance, beginning with the date such disability was first admitted. This privilege will be inserted in old or new policies if the assured be over 15 and under 55 years of age.

Double Indemnity Feature

Under the new provision of the Dominion Insurance Law, the Mutual Life is prepared to pay twice the amount of the policy in the event of the death of the assured from accident, if satisfactory evidence is furnished that the assured is eligible for this additional benefit.

Write for further information, which will be cheerfully given.

The Player You Can Really Play

The Power of Personal Expression

(Supplied with Every Gulbransen Player Piano)

YOU have possibly seen some expert demonstrator produce remarkable results with a Player-Piano. Or you may have been in a home where some one member of the family could produce real music on a Player—but the great majority of Player owners never learn to play the Player well, so many people have come to look upon Players as mechanical, and are prejudiced against them.

The fault lies partly in the limitations of oridinary players and partly because no effort is made to help you master it.

Not so with the

GULBRANSEN The Player-Piano

Gulbransen Instruction Rolls on the Gulbransen Players lead you, step by step, surely and steadily, to where the whole world of music is yours to command!

Knowledge of music is not necessary; previous experience is not necessary—nothing but the desire and love for music. And we will positively prove to you, in ten minutes at the Gulbransen, that you have within you the power to do as you will with music—almost as you would by hand.

Until you have acquired this capacity—until you have experienced the thrill of this power—you will never appreciate the boundless measure of pleasure and happiness that lies within a Player-Piano, and the Gulbransen is one instrument on which you can acquire this art quickly, easily and satisfactorily.

The Gulbransen is not only the easiest pumping Player in the world—not only the simplest Player made—not only the most fool-proof Player on the market—not only the most fully guaranteed Player in Canada—but it is the ONLY Player that will teach you, right in your own home, exactly how to acquire absolute Control of the instrument and give you the power of personal expression that will enable you to put your very self into the music—just as a pianist, violinist or any artist can do.

Not Expensive

Despite its exclusive superiority, the Gulbransen is not expensive. There is a model for every purse—$598, $695 to $960—and, moreover, the Gulbransen is Nationally Priced. It sells at one price everywhere. You can send your child to purchase it.

JAIL SUCCEEDS MORAL SUASION

Works to Better Advantage in the Case of Automobile Killers.

Jail alone will check increasing motor mortality.

With this conviction and this remedy, Los Angeles, first of large American cities in traffic deaths per 100,000 population, has initiated a campaign of imprisonment for speeding and careless drivers. Penalties range from one to 100 days, and women violators have been placed on a par with men.

During the first week the jail was jammed, with a corresponding decrease in the disregard for life and property. Officials, at the end of patience with "don't give a darn" autoists, are determined to keep up drastic action until fear shall have accomplished what pleading failed to do.

Auto accidents have mounted alarmingly in Los Angeles, congested, by almost one-third of California's) machines and thousands of tourists' autos. Fatalities, more than one-third greater than last year, threatened during the approaching holiday season to number of accidents surpassed last year's by more than 10,000. The consistent monthly increase was practically calculable.

Accident Causes

Factors in the problem here are: Narrow down-town streets and comparatively few radial boulevards to the residential districts; more pedestrians passing metropolitn key coners than in any city in the world; 175,000 machines in the main business district per day, and impatience at time lost due to all these complications.

Comparatively few fatalities, however, occur in the congested downtown district. They result from speeding, carelessness and deliberate violation of traffic regulations along the residential boulevards.

"Admonishing and fining the violator is the bunk," declares Captain James McDowell, head of the police traffic bureau. "The only thing he respects is the speed cop and a yawning cell."

Speed cops, disheartened by easy fines and dismissals of captives, have shown renewed zeal as a result of the jail campaign.

Plan Stringent Laws

In addition to immediate drastic measures, and the employment of more traffic officers, Los Angeles will go to the next state legislature demanding, in conformity with the National Traffic Officers' Association program:

(1)) Universal traffic regulations for all states, lack of which is now held accountable for a good many acidents by tourists.

(2) The same laws and penalties for all intrastate communities.

(3) Adequate and standard examination of drivers.

(4) No driver's license issued to anyone under 21.

"The last is very important," commented Captain McDowell, "if we're to free American cities from the menace of the juggernaut. In Los Angeles fully 25 per cent of our total driving population are brainless kids who cause most of the trouble—brainless kids often abetted by senseless parents.

WANAMAKER GAMBLING SUIT NOW UNDER WAY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—A judgment for $2,206.02 was entered yesterday in the County Clerk's Office against John Wanamaker Jr., son of Special Deputy Police Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker, in favor of the Societe Anonyme des Casino de Deauville et Cannes. According to Hyacinthe Ringrose, counsel for the organization, the claim was based on the failure of the American Express Company to honor three checks issued by Mr. Wanamaker to cover alleged losses aggregating 1,000,000 francs while playing baccarat at the French resort.

"The amount of the judgment, however, does not represent a gambling debt," said Mr. Ringrose. "It represents, instead the sum of three checks which were cashed at the Casino in Deauville by Mr. Wanamaker, but which were not paid when submitted to the American Express Company's office in Paris. The society which I represent does not gamble. French law does not permit it to. It owns places in which gaming takes place—also places for the production of plays and grand rendezvous where beer and other refreshing potations may be had. As far as its interest in gambling is concerned. It doesn't gamble, but gets 10 per cent. of the kitty. In that respect Deauville and Cannes(differ from Monte Carlo."

Baby Marshall.

"When my little son was three months old he broke out in sores on his chest and arms. We did all we could to heal those terrible sores, but nothing did him much good. Finally I ventured on a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment and kept on using it. At last we were rewarded by the steady healing of the sores, and finally he was completely relieved of them. He is now three years old, and has had no return of the trouble since."

VETERAN RAILROADER SERVES HALF CENTURY.

Lost An Arm Saving the Life of a 70-Year-Old Passenger.

NEWARK, N.J., Dec 7.—Staying out of divorce courts has been the hardest job Thomas McDonald, station master here, has been called on to perform in his 53 years of service with the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad—a term of service that probably entitles McDonald to the title of father of the world's railway veterans.

Incidentally McDonald has lost an arm saving a life, has saved many other lives at the expense of less severe injuries to himself has passed through some of the country's worst wrecks and has watched railroading develop from an infant into a powerful industry.

McDonald, now 64, became a "railroad man" at 12, when locomotives were burning wood and operating with hand brakes.

In 1873 he was promoted from brakeman to drill master and in 1885 to station policeman here.

"There I met both millionaires and paupers," he says. "Many millionaires wanted me to act as a divorce detective and spy on their spouses. But I wouldn't.

"On Christmas eve in 1886 I lost my righ arm saving the life of a 70-year-old passenger. I held his body away from the wheels with my arm and that member was crushed. Later I got three ribs fractured saving a woman.

"I've met many distinguished persons including President Grant and so many governors I can't count them. As station policeman I've arrested many notorious crooks.

"I've seen several of the larger railway wrecks— one when a trolley car rammed an engine, killing 11 schoolchildhren and another, the Meadows wreck, when 13 were killed

"But I've never been in a divorce court!"

PRAISE FOR GRAND TRUNK

In the Grand Trunk Railway System, employers and employees work together to reach the highest possible standard of efficiency. The result of this splendid spirit of cooperation is a railway service as near perfection as modern methods can make it. That the travelling public appreciates this effort on their behalf is shown by numberless letters to the G.T.R. officials, expressive of their pleasure and approbation. Here is an extract from an unsolicited letter written to the management by a prominent New Yorker: "Had a most comfortable ride from Montreal to Toronto. The train went at a uniform speed and the road-bed was better, it seems to me, than any road I have been on of late, and you know I travel more or less on the crack roads of this country. What was most noticeable was the braking —the absence of awful shocks and jars, and the smooth running of the train. You are to be congragulated on the manner in which passenger trains are handled—seemingly a distinctive feature with you."

Birthday Celebration — Presentation to Sunday School Superintendent— News of Interest.

A Presentation

Castleton Methodist Sunday School has suffered a severe loss in the removing of their superintendent C. L. Cryderman to Toronto, where he has purchased a business. Mr. Cryderman was presented with a handsome library table as token of the church's appreciation of his services.

A Birthday Event

An interesting event took place at the home of John Montgomery of Murray township to mark the 78th anniversary of his birth. When his children and grandchildren assembled to spend the day with him, Edward Montgomery read an address and Mrs. Albert Ross presented their father with a purse.

The experience of Colborne School Board in advertising for a teacher to fill a position in the Public School after the Christmas holidays seems to indicate that there is no dearth of teachers. Twenty one applictions were received. Miss May Weatherill of Brighton, was engaged.

SELLING WARES THROUGH RADIO

Innovation in the Business of a Nation — Large Stations Going Up.

WASHINGTON — The United States is selling its wares by radio.

This innovation in the business of the nation is being made not only in domestic but in foreign trade. Foreign trade notes are being exchanged and the demand is growing for additional opportunities to sell to foreign consumers through the air.

Officials of the Department of Commerce, under which this "sell-it-by-air" plan has grown, say it is developing rapidly. The first attempts to sell goods by air was made from a broadcasting station in Boston. The department's trade news was broadcast throughout New England, with the result that manufacturers around Boston felt a greater demand for their goods.

Many chambers of commerce of the country have asked for similar service. It is a new way to let the country know of goods on hand and under production.

Now this zeal of manufacturers has reached across the Atlantic. The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce has offered its aid to manufacturers and exporters by means of the radiophone. The plan is to gather information on the world's markets for the benefit of the business men in the United States.

Large broadcasting stations have offered their services to help in this new method of making public the trade opportunities in foreign lands. The broadcasting station in Ridgewood, N.J., is anxious to serve the exporters of New York. In Dayton a station has requested information on foreign trade for the benefit of the exporters in the Miami Valley.

A broadcasting station in St. Louis is already sending out foreign trade notes, with the co-operation of the Department of Commerce. Others have applied for similar service.

BOY RECOVERS FROM EFFECTS BROKEN NECK.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—After volunteer aids had worked over him for three days Simon Schlum, a 16-year-old patient in the Orthopedic Hospital, began to breathe naturally at the West Side Young Men's Christian Association. Schlum, who is suffering from a broken neck, sustained while diving at Coney Island last July, and complete paralysis incident to an operation for spine fusion, drew his first natural breath when at the direction of the physicians, the artificial respiration ceased for a few minutes. He continued breathing, and although in great pain, thanked the men who have constantly attended him since the operation last Friday. The weights which have been holding the spine in place have been greatly lightened and the boy slept for a brief period. With the resumption of natural breathing, a rapid recovery is expected.

The last rites of the Catholic Church have been administered to the patient three times, the last time Friday morning before an operation. His father, Albert Schlum, of 301 Berry Street, has despaired of his son's life and regards his predicted recovery as a miracle, and was profuse in his thanks to the volunteers who relieved the worn-out hospital internes last Friday at midnight. If the condition of the patient continues to improve as expected, he will bear no mark of the ordeal he has been through.

A TRUST FUND ISSUE HINGED ON THE WAR.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 7.—(Canadian Press.— For the first time since the cessation of hostilites a Canadian court has been called upon to declare officially when the war came to a close and this decision was given yesterday by Mr. Justice Dysart, in directing how a trust fund transferred from the 90th (Winnipeg) Battallon, on active sevice, to trustees here should be disbursed. His Lordship declared that as the 90th was a Canadian battalion, fighting on the western front and that as war with Germany ceased January 10, 1920, this date should be taken as the time when Canada was at peace with Germany.

The fund amounted to $4,500 and by the terms of agreement was to be handed over to the officer command ing the battalion three years after the war was over.

BAY OF CHALEUR.

Q.—Why was the Bay of Chaleur on the Gulf of St. Lawrence, so named?

TELEPHONE IN CANADA.

Q.—Was the telephone invented in Canada?

A.—The first experimental telephone line was erected in Brantford, three miles long, over which conversations were successfully had, and later over a regular telegraph wire, to Paris, eight miles away, in 1875. BOYS HOLD UP AND ROB BOYS IN CENTRAL PARK.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—A band of boy bandits, who have been preying on the children of prosperous parents in Central Park for the last month and have robbed them of small amounts of money as well as of marbles, tops and other toys, is believed by the police to have been broken up as the result of four arrests yesterday. The round-up of youthful offenders followed the arrest of two of them after the robbery of a boy in the East Drive. One of the prisoners confessed to robbing a boy two weeks ago and implicated two companions, who were also arrested.

Robert Stewart, 14, of 522 West 161st Street, was the victim of yesterday's juvenile hold-up. While walking in the East Drive at 107th street. Robert was set upon by two lads of about his own age. While one of them held his arms and stifled his cries, the other went through pockets and took from them 30 cents and a pocketful of foreign postage stamps.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7—A chain of boys' clubs throughout the Catholic archdiocese of New York and a supply of "big brothers" so great that no boy in trouble shall be without a counsellor and friend, are features of a social welfare program presented to the New York Chapter of the Knights of Columbus by Judge Cornelius F. Collins of the Court of Special Sessions, and ratified by that body at its meeting in the Hotel Astor here.

The plan provides also for a non-denominational employment bureau and a room registry that it is hoped may develop into a home for working boys.

FLIRT WITH HUSBANDS SAYS MRS. MacDOUGALL

Marriage is the Biggest Business to Engage Attention Of a Woman.

"Flirt with your husband to keep him," advises Mrs. Alice Foote Mac Dougall.

When the last rice grain has been swept up, Mrs. MacDougall says, the average woman inclines to put courtship's gaiety away and settle down to humdrum housekeeping, thus not only limiting the happiness of her wedded life but actually condemning herself to premature age.

Mrs. MacDougall, at 56, not only is active head of a large wholesale coffee business she founded herself but mother of three children.

Woman's Biggest Business

"Marriage," she says, "really is a woman's biggest business. It begins not ends, after the ceremony. Girls neglect no detail that will add to their charms before marriage; afterward they are not always so careful.

"This is a mistake. Marriage is not only relationship; for the woman ,at least, it is a vocation. She would be, and is, her husband's inspiration. A dowdy wife takes the pep and ambition out of a business man.

"If I were running a school for wives I should prescribe five rulse:

"1 Study your husband's habits and adapt yourself to them.

Flirt With Him

"2 Flirt with him. Flirtation is man's daily bread and he really likes it better with his wife than another.

"3 Have the same good manners for him that you have for others.

4. Put yourself in his place. When things go wrong at the office and he comes home cross, make allowances.

"5 Love him with a sense of humor. After all, he is only a boy who never will stop growing up.

"Of course, these rules ought to be reciprocal but as the woman is the center of the home it is up to her to take the initiative."

"DEATH DINNER" HOST DIES AS EXPECTED.

G. P. Evans, Who Gave Farewell Party When End Was Near, Succumbs to Consumption.

Had Been Gassed in the War.

EAST ORANGE, N.J., Dec. 7.—George Percy Evans, soldier in the war, who, when he learned that he had only a few weeks to live, gave a dinner to boyhood friends in October, died here last Monday at his home, 478 Main Street. With him were a few friends he had asked to remain until he had "gone west."

Evans served with the 502nd Engineers in France and was badly gassed. He returned to his country an invalid and developed consumption. As he became worse, his friends, with whom he had gone to school and grown up, used to drop in to help him pass the time, for he had no relatives except a brother. On October 26 he gave a dinner for them at the Washington Society Club, at which they joked about their boyhood days, sang war songs and told stories. Evans, who had got out of bed for the first time in weeks to attend the dinner, even made a short speech, telling of his gratitude for their friendship.

Last Sunday night there were a number of friends in his room, and at 10 o'clock they prepared to go home.

"Don't leave me, boys," said Evans. "I don't think I will last long. Stay till I have gone."

They did so, and Evans who had grown steadily weaker, died soon after midnight, holding the hands of two of them.

While Evans was talking at the dinner the bells in the Church of Our Lady Help of Christians, which was Evans' church, began to ring, and he said that it wouldn't be long before the bells rang for him.

Evans had made all the arrangements for his funeral. Joseph Finneran of East Orange, a friend with whom he played in school, and now an undertaker, was asked by Evans to take charge of the funeral. Evans selected his own coffin, and also selected a plot in the cemetery of the Holy Sepulchre in Newark.

SECRETARY CAN EXPLAIN DEFICIT.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Claiming that the alleged deficiency in club finances was the result of unauthorized expenditures made last year and sanctioned by the executive in office at that time, Don old Sinclair, counsel for David Roy former secretary of the Dominion Football Association, who is charged with the theft of $4,127 from the association, yesterday declared in a statement to the press that the charge against his client was a mistake.

Mr. Sinclair said Roy's work was inspected and approved by the executive in office last year, but that this year's executive, questioning the validity of some of the entries and expenditures, subsequently found an alleged deficit which was followed up by the issuance of a warrant for Roy's arrest.

A CHILD RECOVERED WITH USE OF SERUM.

Eight-Year-Old Girl Was in a State of Diabetic Coma.

EDMONTON, Dec. 7.—A child in a state of diabetic coma, practically at death's door, is reported to have been brought back to life at the University of Alberta. This wonderful recovery was made possible through the use of insulin serum, manufactured in the University of Alberta Laboratory by Dr. J. E. Collip, Professor of Biochemistry, at that institution. Some two weeks ago a girl, eight years old, was brought to the University hospital from her home near Vulcan, in southern Alberta. When she arrived, the child was in a state of diabetic coma, a condition from which, as far as was then known, there had never been a recovery.

This information was secured from Dr. E. H. Tory, President of the University following the receipt of a despatch from New York which reported what was believed to have the first case of diabetic coma to be successfully treated in the annals of medicine in that city. The Edmonton cure apparently pre-dates that recorded in the despatch from New York City.

GERMAN PROSPERITY NOTHING BUT SHAM

Foreign Countries Blinded by High Dividends in Stock Concerns

BERLIN, Dec. 8. — (Canadian Press).—Dr. Andreas Hermes, Minister of Finance, in expounding Germany's finances to the Budget Committee of the Reichstag, cited figures showing that Germany in reality is undergoing only sham prosperity. He declared that foreign countries were permitting themselves to be blinded by apparently high dividends paid by German stock companies, but that these paper dividends, when translated into the gold equivalent, were quite insignificant.

Meanwhile, the cost of operating factories had increased enormously and industrial concerns were merely subsisting on their actual physical properties.

LARGEST MASONIC GATHERING EVER

When Prince of Wales Invested as Senior Grand Warden.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—(By Canadian Press).—In a setting of great splendor and in the midst of what is believed to have been the largest Masonic assembly ever gathered under one roof, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was recently invested in Albert Hall here as Senior Grand Warden of the United Grand Lodge of England. Nine thousand Freemasons, drawn from all parts of the English jurisdiction, embracing lodges all over the world, as well as of representative deputations from the sister Grand Lodges of England and Scotland and of some of the Dominions beyond the seas, were present at the investiture. Over 13,000 applicants for tickets of admission had to be disappointed, and more than 1,000 of those favored had to stand throughout the ceremony, which was conducted by the Duke of Connaught as Grand Master.

There was a stately procession of High Officers, whose approach was heralded by a silvery fanfare of trumpets from unseen musicians of the Grenadier Guards' Band, followed by a distant roll of drums. The High Officers escorted the Deputy Grand Master Right Hon. Sir Thomas Halsey, towards the Great Throne. It was a scene of splendor. Purple and gold predominated on the dias and in the front belt of seats in the arena. Behind was a further belt in which crimson was the prevailing tone, and in the vast background were the pale blue and white regalia of the rank and file of the Masonic craft.

When the Grand Lodge had been opened the trumpets sounded again, and a second procession was formed, this time conducting the Grand Master, with Lord Ampthill, pro-Grand Master, and Viscount Birkenhead, Junior Grand Warden, to the dias. The Duke of Connaught was greeted with cheer after cheer.

While the enthusiasm was at its height a slim young man in morning dress, with a simple blue collar of the Masonic order, slipped unobtrusively in, and sat in the front row of the body of the hall—the Prince of Wales, looking unusually grave, but in no wise nervous. He was accompanied by the Duke of York.

After reading a message sent to the King expressing the assembly's loyal devotion to the Throne, and his Majesty's acknowledgement of "another proof of the close association between Freemasonry and my House," the Grand Master began the investiture of the Prince. The Duke recalled that this was the second time in the course of about fifty years that the Heir to the Throne had taken upon himself high office in the Grand Lodge of England. The Grand Master placed around the Prince's neck a collar of Royal blue with an edging of gold—the badge of his office as Senior Grand Warden.

There was tremendous cheering, and then followed the Prince's reply, which was a brief expression of his gratitude for the honor conferred upon him and for the warm welcome he had received. When the new Senior Grand Warden was conducted to his appointed place the assembly sprang to its feet and cheered again and again. This was followed by the unveiling, by Lord Ampthill, of a portrait of the Grand Master, painted by Sir Arthur Cope.

The Prince of Wales entered the Masonic order through the Household Brigade Lodge, No. 2,614, which he joined in May, 1919. He was then an officer in the Brigade of Guards. Shortly afterwards his brother the Duke of York also became a Mason, he being initiated in the Navy Lodge, No. 2,612. Both brothers became in turn Warden and Master of their respective mother lodges.

The investiture of the Prince of Wales as Senior Grand Warden was the first occasion on which an Heir-Apparent accepted a position in the Grand Lodge other than that of Grand Master. The Prince, in being a keen Mason, is following the example of his grandfather Edward VII., who, during his Masonic reign of a quarter of a century showed great zeal for the craft. The first Prince of Wales to become a member of the Masonic Order was the eldest son of George II. who was "a Master Mason and Master of a Lodge," according to the records. That Prince's grandson, known to us as George IV., was for many years Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England, as was also his great-great-grandson, Edward VII.

To see the healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside bathing every morning for a week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a fine appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges or whose skin is sallow or pallid, that one week of inside bathing will have them looking and feeling better every way.

Best Cough Mixture Is Home Made

Fine for Chest Colds Too and Is Cheaply Made at Home.

When you can make, in two minutes, a world beating remedy that acts directly on the membrane and often overnight causes stubborn coughs and even hard chest colds to disappear, why trifle with things that will probably disappoint?

Hawking and snuffling and also soreness of the muscous membrane go and you will feel fine in almost no time.

Just get one ounce of Parmint (double strength) add to it a little sugar and enough hot water to make a half pint and you've got an inexpensive remedy better than you can buy ready mixed.

Its soothing, healing action on the membrane is the reason so many people use it for Catarrh and acute nasal colds.

Buried With Military Honors.

It was a military and Masonic funeral, attended by veterans of the Great War, officers and men of the 35th Regiment, and Masonic brethren. The remains were laid to rest in the Union cemetery, Barrie. Last Coal Boat.

The barge Warrenco arrived at the port of Belleville this week with 750 tons of hard coal, consigned to Allen and Downey. She left Oswego N.Y., on Sunday last and encountered a very rough passage, taking shelter at Kingston and reguiring one of the Weddell tugs to tow her up from Deseronto, as all the buoys and navigation signals have been removed for the winter. Her arrival has relieved the firm of a lot of anxiety, as she was heavily laden, and at present is aground in the harbor.

High Winds Caused Trouble.

During the terrific wind storm on Tuesday generators in both Hydro and town power houses were put out of commission. While the Hydro trouble did not effect Campbellford people, the town power, which was off from about 5 a.m. till nearly noon, caused a lot of anxiety to housewives who were depending on their electric ranges, and in many cases the old coal oil stove was back on the job, and saved the day. Wires becoming crossed, causing a short circuit, appears to have been the cause of burn-outs, but fortunately this does not happen very often.

Changed His Mind.

The other evening a well known farmer with one of the most up-to-date farms in the vicintiy of Campbellford, drove to town in his big six-cycle car, looking for a hired man. He got one alright, a big husky chap, made all arrangements, suit case and belongings were placed in the car and as the farmer had a little shopping to do, they were to start the journey homeward in the course of an hour. When the new boss came back both man and baggage had disappeared, nobody knew where, so there is still a good job

Parker Predicts Peace For Ireland Within Five Years

Sir Gilbert Believes That Ultimately a Powerful Loyal and Patriotic Government Will Be Formed —De Valera Faction Described As Robbers and Murderers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—A prediction that Ireland, within five years, will become as peaceful and prosperous under the British flag as South Africa is today, summed up the opinion expressed by Sir Gilbert Parket, noted author, regarding the recent events which have established the Irish Free State. Sir Gilbert is on a lecture tour in the United States, with his headquarters in New York.

In an interview published yesterday, he states that though the Irish people, both those in southern Ireland and those in Ulster, have committed many crimes that ultimately they will established "a powerful, loyal and patriotic government."

Sir Gilbert had nothing but praise for Timothy Healy, the first Governor-General of the Free State. Referring to Mr. Healy as "an old friend," he said that without doubt he would make a most effective Governor-General. Sir Gilbert said that the new Governor-General was one of the wittiest men in the House of Commons, and during his service there gained the reputation of being one of the most agreeable of men, and at the same time, one of the most vitriolic.

The trouble with Ireland, according to Sir Gilbert, is that men that worked with De Valera, Michael Collins, Griffiths, Cosgrave and Mulcahy for a republic, are now playing the part, not of war, but of bandits, robbers, incendiaries and murderers.

"There is nothing to be said for them at all," he said. "While the world stands England will never give her assent to a republic in Ireland."

MARRIAGE A LA MODE.

Among the Albanian beys, or chieftains, children frequently are bethrothed before they are 10 years old and occasionally while still in the cradle.

In such cases the arrangements is kept secret from the couple until the young man is in a position to marry. His refusal would result not only in a vendetta but also in social ostracism. Such cases are rare, however, for never having seen the bride he cannot decline to marry her.

STRINGENT BILL INTRODUCED BY GOVT. HUNGARY

New Bill Surpasses Even the Notorious "Suspect Law" of the French Revolution.

GOVT. NEWSPAPERS.

VIENNA, Dec. 8. (Canadian Press).—The notorious "Suspect Law", of the French Revolution is surpassed by a bill just introduced in the Hungarian Parliament by the Bethlen Government, calling for "greater protection of the public order."

Under the bill the Government would receive power to banish, intern or send to the workhouse, any person "whose attitude or activities are doubtful from the point of view of Hungary's foreign policy or public order, any suspected of being in sympathy with attempts to overthrow the constitution or menace the national unity, or who offends religious feelings or undermines the authority of public officials."

The law would also apply to individuals who "describe conditions in Hungary in an unfavorable way."

The Minister of the Interior would receive power to suppress all the newspapers, if he deemed the state's interest called for such action. Should the law be passed, newspaper work for journalists not connected with the Government will become impossible.

THE REDSKIN WAS LINDSAY BOOSTER.

Directors of the Fair Board Had a Chance to Pay All the Bills.

MONTREAL, December 8. — White Elk, the noted Indian lecturer and head of the Cherokee Indian tribe in British Columbia, passed through the city recently en route to Halifax, where he will sail for England on the White Star Dominion Liner, Regina, on Sunday, for the purpose of laying the grievances of his people before His Majesty the King.

The question of education figures largely in the list of complaints and the chief has been deputized by the varidus tribes to present a list of suggested reforms to His Majesty for his approval.

White Elk made Lindsay his headquarters during September and pretty nearly owned the town. He was hailed with open arms by the directors of the Central Fair, who practically gave him a free hand in boosting the annual event. When the bills came in however the directors had a different opinion of the Indian. Those who know him best will not be surprised to hear that he attempted to tell King George how to run the British Empire—that is if he gets within speaking distance.

DETROIT SETS SAFETY RECORD

Strenuous Campaign Cuts Traffic Death Toll Almost in Half.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 8.—While automobile fatalities and accidents are increasing appallingly in most American cities, in Detroit, the number is steadily being decreased.

This in spite of Detroit's narrow streets, with their 10,000 intersections offering many natural hazards, including those of irregularly shaped corners and turns. This, too, in spite of the fact that the city has quadrupled in size since the automobile came into general use, and that every seventh person in Detroit owns and operates an automobile—one of the highest ownership proportions in the country.

Detroit's cure for traffic evils? Efficient traffic regulation, including many effective innovations, and greatest of all, education.

Traffic safety education in Detroit is decidedly intensive. The whole town is "sold" on the idea. You hear it discussed wherever you go. Traffic and police department chiefs cannot walk more than a block without being stopped by some citizen with an idea for reducing traffic jams or accidents.

The women's clubs discuss traffic safety. Much of the time of the Detroit Safety Council is given to it. In the schools, the safety idea is so connected with school work that there are safety games, safety drills and contests between schools with prizes for those having the lowest percentage of automobile accidents.

Cryptic Warning

"A B C" in huge letters stares up from the pavement as you step from the curb. You ask a Detroit person what it means, and he'll tell you, "Always be Careful" "Don't YOU Get Hurt" warns a pavement sign at another point. And there are more of them, too—until the pedestrian instinctively stops, looks and listens before he hustles into the traffic-glutted streets.

Detroit is getting results. In 1920, there were 240 street traffic killings. Last year the total was 134, or a saving of 108 lives during the period most cities suffered an appalling increase. Auto fatalities have dropped from one death for every 265 machines in 1916 to one death for every 110 machines in 1922.

Bringing this about caused many police department innovations, which the rest of the country is beginning to adopt. Among these are the following:

1.—Accident Investigation Bureau. A separate department of the Detroit traffic division, which specializes in the handling of accidents. Trained investigating officers comprise the force.

Every automobile accident is investigated, regardless of whether there were injuries or whether property settlement was made. Civil phases are disregarded and the persons at fault are prosecuted in the interest of public safety.

Citizens Report

2.—A Citizens' Complaint Service, whereby every resident of Detroit is a traffic policeman. Blank postcards giving instructions for reporting traffic violations or careless driving are in all Detroit drug stores. Any person noting such an occurrence jots down the number of the car and the incident. It is not necessary for the complainant to sign the card and appear as a witness, for the autoist is summoned to traffic headquarters, rather than to court, and is cautioned.

"We receive about 125 such cards a day," declares Inspector Jackson. "The result is that the drivers feel there is a mark against their record and they must be careful or get a stiff sentence if they ever get into trouble."

3.—A Safety Educational Division, operated by the police, holds several meetings every day in schools, factories and women's clubs, lecturing and using motion pictures to teach safety. Leaflets of many types are constantly being distributed. Accounts of all accidents involving children are read to the pupils.

Older pupils are trained to care for younger ones in crossing streets. School janitors use semaphores at crossings when pupils are approaching or leaving the schools.

Lectures on traffic conditions are broadcast by traffic experts, through the radio.

Judge Is Strict

Judge Charles Bartlett of the traffic court, whose jailing of speeders has attracted nation-wide attention, is another powerful factor in Detroit's safety progress. Appointed to office, he began giving jail terms and heavy fines to traffic violators. He has sentenced more than 700 to jail. Detroit showed its approval by overwhelmingly re-electing him this fall.

Recently, Bartlett began escorting speeders through the hospitals and morgue, where they could see the victims of the careless driver. The lesson had a far-reaching effect.

Incompetent drivers have been eliminated through the police conducting a written or oral examination and a practical demonstration of driving ability before a driver's license can be secured.

"Traffic regulation and methods are 50 years behind the times and a lot of us will never catch up with them," says Dr. J. W. Inches, Detroit's police commissioner. "But if we can't catch up, we must see that our children can."

SPENT MILLION A MONTH—NOW BROKE.

Owner of Baku Oil Fields Is Termed King of Wasters.

PARIS, Dec. 3. — Announcement of the forthcoming auction of Leon Mantacheff's racing stable, one of the largest in France, has revealed the story of a man who, for five months, regularly wasted a $1,000,000 a month, with the result that he is now flat broke.

Mantacheff, before the war, was the largest proprietor of oil lands in the world. Practically all of Baku belonged to him. Only two men in Russia—the Czar and Prince Narichkine, the latter of whom is now eking out a precarious living as a dressmaker in Paris—could rival his wealth.

The revolution came and his Baku lands were confiscated. For five years Mantacheff was in poverty and then at Genoa, Tchitcherin announced that the rights of the previous owners of the Baku oil lands would be recognized and respected. Following that decision the Royal Dutch handed Mantacheff $5,000,000 in cash for a three months' option for the purchase of the properties.

Mantacheff immediately plunged into tremendous expenditures, purchasing a magnificent racing stable and becoming known as the "king of spendthrifts." He used to boast that no horse of his ran in a race without a bet of $50,000.

He became an assiduous purchaser of diamonds and pearls, as well as one of the prominent gamblers at the fashionable clubs and casinoes.

Interviewed by a Paris newspaper, Mantacheff said:

"A stable of horses, a few diamonds and fewer pearls, one or two banks at baccara—and all my Royal Dutch millions are gone."

Meanwhile the Royal Dutch has not taken up the option, with the result that Mantacheff is still the owner of the Baku properties, although the Soviet is in possession.

Eugene Cornishet, manager of Deauville, it is said, has offered the former millionaire a job as a money changer at the Casino.

BEST EQUIPPED SHIP WITH RADIO OUTFIT

Marconi's famous "Elettra" is beginning to lose its prestige as the most thoroughly equipped radio ship afloat. W. K. Vanderbilt, the New York millionaire, comes forth with his entry, the "Ara," and claims this yacht is more fully equipped with radio apparatus than the "Elettra." It is ready for a cruise in the South Pacific.

THE OTHER SIDE.

"You must realize the evils of child labor?"

"I never had 'em brought home to me," said Farmer Corntossel. "Our only child is Josh an' his extravagance calls fur some way to keep an offspring from overworkin' his parents."—Washington Star.

GROWTH OF SCHOOL OF ART IN AUSTRALIA.

Distinct National Movement Is Evident on All Hands.

LONDON, Eng., Dec. 8.—(Associated Press).—During the past few years there has been a distinct national movement in Australia towards the growth of an Australian school of art. It was not until Australia's prophets had gained honor in other countries that the Australian people awoke to the true worth of their art, and now the people of the Antipodes have become appreciative. Their appreciation has been stimulated by men like Tom Roberts, George Lambert, Arthur Streeton and others.

A definite school has sprung up in the past decade. Australian painters find inspiration in the beauties of their own country, and, incidentally, ready buyers among their own countrymen. It is a school which, with a few exceptions, has confined its energies towards translating the spirit of the bush onto canvas, and a certain monotony of Australian landscape is reflected in a certain sameness about the works of modern Australian painters.

One of the handicaps under which both the artists and the general public of the Commonwealth labor is the lack of opportunity of studying the variety of method and art in the Old World. Certainly in the many excellent galleries throughout Australia there are examples of contemporary art, but financial and other considerations place a necessary limit on their number, and Australians must follow the progress of painting in the great art centres of the world at a distance of several thousand miles.

With a view to giving the people of Australia the opportunity of enjoying the samples of the work of modern European painters and Australian artists the chance of studying their methods, an interesting scheme has been launched. Several public-spirited Australians have subsidized a project to obtain a loan exhibition for Australia. Their representative, Penleigh Boyd, who is himself one of the most promising of the younger school of Australian painters, is now in London in connection with the project. He proposes to approach artists, both in this country and on the continent, for the loan of samples of their work, and he hopes that they will give their assistance to what will be a fresh means of stimulating the artistic growth of Australia. It is a new form of artistic propaganda on a large scale, and by this means it is hoped to familiarize Australians with the recent products of European artistic development.

The Federal Government of Australia and the Governments of the several Australian States have promised their active co-operation in the project. The exhibition will visit Sydney, Melbourne and Aldelaide next year, according to Mr. Boyd, who expects to obtain about 1,500 pictures for it.

Black Duck Hunting on Emily Creek

(By J. A. MacKenzie).

An Architect, Who is Also a Hunter, Reports Something of the Joys of Shooting in the Kawartha Waters.

(FROM OUTING)

The black duck, swift courser of our eastern marshes, is to the Ontario gunner all that the mallard is to his western brother, and by all reports the dusky fowl is slowly working westward, displacing on some waters its highly-colored and more confiding cousin. The native cunning and keener brain, combined with good protective coloring, enables the black to better survive its numerous enemies. In Ontario it has held its own for years and since the Spring shooting has stopped in the South, a dry hot summer, congenial to the young ducklings, produces a very noticeable increase in the number of fowl and on the opening day our marshes were fairly well stocked with good-sized birds.

In the late fall, when, from constant gunning, these ducks became too highly educated to afford good shooting, a cold snap with its flurry of snow brought down from the North a goodly flight of big, red-legged blacks, swift, care-free aviators, the whip of whose wings was audible long before they came within range. The way those high four-pounders knocked holes in the bog after colliding with a charge of five sure does gladden the heart of a gunner.

On the eve of the opening day the author of this article arrived at Tom Moon's, on Emily Creek, about 11 P.M., and while the woodman's cheerful little woman prepared a hasty meal, Tom answered my eager inquiries about the ducks. Stray shooting has been heard on the creek about a week or two before my arrival, and he was not optimistic about the prospects. However, experience on these marshes made me confident that the army of shooters on the first would stir up the fowl and keep them moving for the early flight, at least, and without delay preparations were commenced for an early start to the island bogs some four miles away.

Emily Creek rises near Pigeon Creek and is the fly-way for fowl between the Pigeon Creek and Sturgeon Lake marshes. It winds for a dozen miles in a northerly direction to Sturgeon Lake through flooded Creek bottoms and tangled drowned lands from one half to two miles wide and now grown over with rice and bushes, a ribbon of black water through green sedges between swampy, wooded lowlands and farm-clad hills.

Ideal Punt For Hunting

The little duck punt, designed and built by the author, and brought to these waters on the car, is eleven feet six inches long, with three feet three inch beam, and while steady to shoot from is easy to turn and twist through the stumpy drowned lands, and easy to hide, but a boat so short will drag and swing to every stroke of the paddle and is much slower than a canoe.

In the late fall, when much hunting has driven the fowl back to the more in accessible pond holes and the shallow head waters of the creeks, a longer, narrower boat and a ten-foot push paddle will make the long journey from the camp site on the island less strenuous, and I am having built a fourteen-feet six inches by two feet eleven inches punt with full body and flat floor to slip through the clinging lily pads and ooze of the upper mucky bogs. Graceful runner-like bows will ride down the drift and part the rushes, while a seven-foot cockpit, a tarp tent and a sterno stove will house and feed her skipper close to those cunning blacks. In the swampy wooded lowlands along this marshland there are no camp sites, and a good boat adds so much to sport and is so often your home for a night or two that it becomes a part of the gunner.

The First Flights

While the punt worked back and forth, he selected a bend between thin rice beds where the birds could be easily gathered, and with a convenient rush clump to hide the boat. By this time it was breaking day and the fowl were streaming over on their way to Sturgeon Lake. Quickly tethering the decoys along the rice to show up against the channel, the skipper jammed a couple of shells into the Parker and crumpled up the leader of the next flock. From almost directly overhead that big black shot down breast forward, head falling over back, and plunged into the rice not ten feet from the tickled gunner, who, in the joy of that moment, forgot to use his remaining barrel on the fleeting flock. With barely time to re-load the gun, he pulled on a bird passing swiftly to the right and dropped it beyond the rice in the rushes. Though crouching low, the gunner noticed that the birds were shying at the punt in the thin rice and swerving out of range, and made a hurried retreat to the rush clump across the channel, tucking the little craft away among the flags. This daylight biding always spoils some chances and is apt to flurry the gunner, who, in this case, becomes overcautious, crouching low until the next flock was nearly overhead and then, fearing that the game would escape, swung up the gun and threw it ahead, sending the shot in front of the game, which flared up as it passed. A couple of such misses steadied him down to applying a little reason and taking the incomers farther out, the gun being brought up steadily from beneath and pulled as it covered, killing clean in the air. A long, stringing flock, passing about twenty yards above the stool, contributed a pretty double. The first fowl, an incomer, dropped among the decoys, while the Parker chased and overtook the second bird well behind the punt.

Mark east a pair of blacks have seen the decoys and are coming straight in, lowering as they near the stool. The first barrel overshot at about forty yards, but the gun, swinging with the second fowl as he made a mighty effort to climb out of danger, sent the shot with audible chuck through bone and feathers. The lowering incomer is hard to hit with a rising gun and next time covering the bird and following it down may avoid over-shooting. During a lull in the flight, a black, skimming along the channel, stole among the decoys and, at the sight of the gunner, burst into the air with a mighty jump, rattling the fowler into making two ineffectual snap-shots, although he knew perfectly well he should get on the dusky's climbing line,—the splash and speed of that bird's taking off upset all his calculations.

Getting The Stragglers

As the morning advanced the shooting on the upper creek died away and the much harried fowl flew higher and higher as they passed down to the lake, their only sure haven of safety. A few stragglers, however, sought food and company on the creek. The gunner swung with one of these stray birds coming in from the right, and dropped it near the decoys, flushing at the same time a little green winged teal, which somehow was among the stool. This feathered bolt went into the air as if shot out of a gun, climbing back right over the punt, and escaped unhurt.

Started at 4 A.M., by eight-thirty the morning flight of the best opening day the skipper had yet experienced was nearly over. His success was owing more to good luck than good management, his late start having placed him about a mile below the next gunner at the island, giving the fowl time to recover from being shot at before seeing the decoys. The little grey-green punt was well hid when it took to the rush clump, and the crew kept perfectly still until the birds were close in, but had the army of gunners been on the creek, as in other years, firing their coarse shot at birds two and three gun shots away, he would have been lucky to have bagged a couple of brace. The big shoot of the year before was at Clancey's Pond, at the mouth of Pigeon Creek, where Matt Nicols killed thirty-five blacks, and this, no doubt, attracted many guns from Emily Creek. Fowl were more plentiful than they had been in years, and some of the farmers found shooting on their home marshes, leaving the creek less overrun than in former years.

With no game in sight the skipper continued picking up the dead fowl, working the punt towards the various landmarks in tracing the fallen birds. An hour's strenuous effort gathered ten of the fourteen blacks marked down, and while back of the hide, a single black, making down the marsh, passed within reach of the crouching gunner and was crumpled up in a satisfying manner, a fitting termination to a wonderful morning's sport.

Evening Flights

All evening flights are brief, but this one was lively while it lasted and, with barely time to reload, the skipper swung with another black around to the right and left it drifting in the open lake. A little teal, skimming in along the surface, lit beyond the stool, and tore away like a flash as the gunner sat up and threw away a shot at the vanishing streak. The fowler consoled himself by cutting down a black, which suddenly appeared in the gathering dusk right over the decoys, but his joy was not complete until a high incomer folded up against the sky and landed in the rice with a gratifying splash, a cherished ending to this snappy little shoot on Little Lake.

The autumn night comes on with a rush, and the skipper hurried after the drifting duck, tacking to leeward until he discovered the floating from towards the western sky, and turned back for the birds in the rice. Stowing the decoys and fowl, he started for camp through that jungle of rice, groping his way round the island in the dark.

After the long day on the marsh he enjoyed to the full the cheerful camp fire, the luscious hand and eggs and steaming cocoa, and as he lay on the soft blankets on a cedar couch and gazed at a silver fairy land in the moonlit marsh, how very marshy was the splashing of feeding rats Thus musing, and half dreaming, he lay in great content until lulled to sleep by the gabble of sociable blacks in the near rice bed, and the weird quavering laughter of a pair of loons on Little Lake.

It was breaking day next morning before the stool were out off a neighboring bog, and the little punt pushed under the dense growth. Few fowl were on the creek and the shoot was soon over with five birds down. The weather had been so warm that the big problem now was to save the game. Camp was quickly broken and he hurried down the creek to stow the punt and equipment at Moon's and catch the afternoon train. Packed in ice the game arrived safely in Toronto, and was rushed into cold storage. While a brace of choice fowl graced the skipper's table, the remaining blacks were distributed among his friends.

The line companies, as distinct from the independents, Mr. Hicks explained, were, broadly speaking, companies that have been subsidiaries of those United States railways that had owned mines. In normal times all the dealers obtained their coal from these companies, but in emergencies such as the present scarcity and that of 1918, the independents have their innings. Because of the peculiar conditions under which they operated they had to get a higher price, and Mr. Hicks said that those in close touch with the trade acknowledged that these companies were entitled to fix their price higher.

One circumstance he mentioned seemed obvious. Suppose that of 100 tons coming from the mine, 60 are of domestic sizes and 40 tons are of small. The line companies can use the small sizes in locomotives of their kindred railway and otherwise utilize it profitably. If the percentages are the same for an independent company, these forty tons are ordinarily so much loss, and the company's profit comes from the remaining 60 tons. But in extremities when the trade is bidding for any and all kinds of coal, these smaller sizes take on a value. Costs of marketing and other expenses, in addition to the effect of the pressure of demand, result in premiums that in some instances reach five dollars a ton.

Mr. Hicks said that the situation to him had been a question of getting coal, even if it was independent, or of waiting for the line companies to forward their supplies. It had been generally announced that about 60 per cent. of the usual quota would be forthcoming, but Mr. Hicks doubted whether even fifty per cent. would be shipped into Canada, and the quantity might possibly not be more than 40 per cent.

Must Economize.

Against the shortage there was, however, the partly compensating factor of prolonged mild weather. "Heaven has smiled on the people of this country," said Mr. Hicks, in reference to the long, pleasant fall. "I believe the people will have to learn to economize in their coal this winter. That is the movement all over the country, and by the use of good substitutes we should be able to eke out the supply of regular sizes. The best substitute is No. 1 buckwheat. It has never been advocated by the Fuel Controller as it should be under the existing conditions. It is entirely satisfactory, especially for banking down a fire at nigth, and can be used in much the same way during the day. Too many persons are not trying to help themselves. They want a certain size of coal, and are unwilling to accept anything else. Personally, I believe in doing all I can for the man who is trying to co-operate."

As an illustration of this, the reporter listened to one transaction in which a customer asked for nut coal, but was told that the supply on hand was all sold. Pea and buckwheat sizes were recommended to him, with instructions as to how to use them, and he bought a quantity of the smaller coal.

"I had kept half a ton of nut for my own house, but I'll let you have five hundred pounds of it," he told the customer, and afterwards remarked that that was an instance of what he meant by a man being willing to help out the situation. "Personally I'd be satisfied with good buckwheat," he added. "I use it myself and I know I can recommend it."

Future Obscure.

Mr. Hicks hesitated to express an opinion of the future supplies. Observations in wholesale and retail coal yards in Oswego, N.Y., had not impressed him as being hopeful, but he did not wish to create any feeling of alarm.

Speaking of experiences in buying wood, he said that on some of the railway lines north of here, men who had cut wood to sell for $5 and $6 a cord had turned it over at $9 and $10 a cord. Mr. Hicks remarked that the public would discover to what extent the Fuel Controller had provided for coal supplies while giving so much attention to the retail price.

Had An Awful Cold and Cough

Was Confined to Bed

Some coughs and colds seem hard to shake off—stick right to you in spite of all you do to get rid of them. These are the kind that are dangerous—the kind that weaken the lungs so that the germs of consumption find a ready foothold.

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful soothing properties of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

It soothes and heals the irritated lungs and bronchial tubes, cuts the phlegm, and aids nature clear away the morbid accumulations.

Mrs. Geo. D. Langdale, Barton, N. S., Writes:—"In the year of 1920 I was taken with an awful cold and cough, and was confined to my bed for some time. I thought I was going into consumption. I commenced to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and found it to be an excellent remedy. I can highly recommend it to every sufferer from coughs and colds."

AGREEMENT WITH CANADA

By Imperial House Passing Bill To Lift Embargo on Cattle

LONDON, Dec. 8. — (Canadian Press).—In moving the second reading of the bill to remove the Canadian cattle embargo in the House of Commons yesterday, Sir Herbert Sanders, Minister of Agriculture, said the measure was necessary in order to carry out the agreement reached with Canada. There was, however, the question of animals landed from Ireland, which he explained.

IT'S HERE AGAIN

Harry Zacks Annual Xmas Sale—A Welcome Event

People who have profited in former years by the special offers at Harry Zacks annual Christmas Furniture Sale will welcome his big announcement in today's paper. It will also be noted that the prices are much blow last year's offerings and the selection greater. People who have missed this sale in other seasons, will do well to investigate the possibilities for working out the gift problem on a real utility basis that this year affords.

PREPARING FOR CHRISTMAS.

The Home Furnishing Company Make an Attractive Display on Charlotte Street.

This early display is arranged and intended to make the selection of gifts this year a source of real pleasure, free from the usual hustle and worry of pressing too much into the last few days before Christmas.

The stock purchased is enormous, delightful in charm of variety and novelty and it should be an easy matter to find something "just perfect" for everyone, young and old. And Toys- well get the kiddies verdict. Bring them to see them. These alone are enough to transport the small folk into ecstasies. You may store your gifts to be delivered at any given date before Christmas if you so desire.

Read the half page advertisement on another page and the list of some of the many astonishing low prices arranged for by the Charlotte street store.

HASTINGS PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Reg. Warner, of Huntsville, are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. I. Doonan.

Mrs. W. Fowlds and daughter Mary spent Thursday in Campbellford.

Mrs. A. Knight spent Thursday in Peterborough.

THE PRODIGAL JUDGE, at the Royal to-night.

"Give all you can for what you get, rather than get all you can for what you give," is a precept which if generally practised would forever banish strikes. Think this over.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

The Women's Missionary Auxiliary Held Meeting--The Proposed Addition to the Millbrook School.

MILLBROOK, December 8. — The December meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the Methodist church was held on Wednesday at 3 p.m., at the home of Mrs. W. Lowes, Princess street. As this was the Christmas meeting a suitable responsive reading was used during the opening devotional period, the president, Mrs. S. T. Tucker, being the leader. The service, which was entitled, "Jesus, the Revealer of the Father," contained not only appropriate Scripture passages, but hymns and missionary information as well. A duet, "Oh, how He Loves Me," was sung by Mrs. P. Stinson and Miss A. Stewart, and many interesting items of news from the various mission fields at home and abroad, were given by the "Heralds" in response to the "Watch Tower."

Miss M. E. Hetherington took up the chapter from the study book, "The Missionary as an Educator," in a very capable manner, and a reading describing the labors of Dr. Cyrus Hamlin, a great missionary teacher amongst the Armenians, was given by Miss Burnham. Dr. Hamlin, who was obliged to do so many things besides peaching the gospel, that he was said to have 17 professions, including running a bakery, which supplied the hospitals where Florence Nightingale labored during the Crimean War, with twelve thousand loaves per day, and a laundry where the filthy clothes of the wounded soldiers were washed and repaired. The famous "Robert College," which has for many years been shedding the light of Christian education over the whole Near East, is a lasting memorial to the life work of Dr. Hamlin, who never ceased his prayers and labors until this splendid project was an acomplished fact. It is situated on the heights of one of the loveliest spots on the Bosphorus above Constantinople, and is named after a wealthy American, Christopher Robert, who supplied the needed money for its erection and its equipment.

Mrs. Lowes, assisted by Mrs. M. Sutton and Miss A. Hampton, served a dainty but substantial tea at the close and before the social hour was concluded a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Lowes and those associated with her as hostesses was moved by Miss S. Hetherington, seconded by Mrs. A. J. Brown, and unanimously carried amidst warm applause.

The first meeting in the New Year will be held on the second Wednesday in January at the home of Mrs. P. Stinson, Centre street.

Final Meeting.

The "Sunshine Mission Band" held their last meeting for 1922 on Wednesday evening, the Superintendent, Mrs. B. R. Raper, giving an interesting talk on "The New Canadians," as our foreign settlers are now called. Rev. G. I. Campbell when here recently laid particular emphasis upon the new title stating emphatically, "No one with a title of discernment speaks nowadays of immigrants—they are all "New Canadians." As this was the Christmas meeting the Scripture lesson was on the birth of Christ — the "First Christmas," and was read alternately from the 2nd chapter of Matthew's Gospel, the hymns also bearing on the same subject. Dicken's "Christmas Carol," in abbreviated form was read by Marjorie Sayles, and a missionary selection, "Jim's Chum," was given by Jean Burnham. The gifts for the box to be sent to Miss Hawken's Ruthenian pupils at Kolokdeeka, Smoky aLke, Alta., were received; also personal gifts for Miss Hawkens herself. The members of "Golden Links" Mission Circle are putting in a bag of homemade candy for each pupil and the contents of the box will be used on the Christmas tree annually given at the school. Mrs. Raper provided a treat of candy for the band at the close of the meeting. The first meeting in the New Year will be held on the second Wednesday in January at 7.30 p.m.

A Public Meeting.

Owing to the visit of Mr. Haog of Toronto, the Continuation School Inspector, being arranged for next Tuesday, Dec. 12th, at 8 p.m., in the town hall, when a public meeting will be held, and after Mr. Haog's address an opportunity gi en for a thorough discussion of the proposed addition to the school here, and the entire school question generally, the elocutionary contest by the Continuation School pupils, which was to have been held on Tuesday evening, has been postponed until Monday, December 18th. As those interested have been preparing for some time, and the programme is sure t. be an interesting one, there will doubtless be a large attendance of parents and friends at the contest.

An Old Resident.

The many friends of Mrs. H. Argue will regret to learn that her mother, Mrs. Charles Throop, one of the oldest residents of Port Hope, passed away suddenly following an attack of pneumonia, on Tuesday, December 5th in her 88th year. The late Mrs. Throop, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Jamelson, was born at Quay's Crosing, but spent the major part of her life in Port Hope; she is survived by her husband, now in his 94th year, two sons, Cyrus of Port Hope, and Dr. D. C. Throop of Rochester, N.Y., and three daughters, Mrs. Thomas C. McNeillie of Toronto, Mrs. Emma Argue, formerly of Millbrook, but residing with her par s since her husband's death; and Miss Alma at home. Mr. and Mrs. Throop celebrated the 68th anniversary of their wedding last September. The funeral will take place on Thursday, Dec. 7th, at 2.30 p.m., interment being in the Port Hope Union Cemetery.

Girls Will Help.

The Wideawakes group of Canadain Girls in Training, will serve afternoon tea at the bazaar, under the auspices of the missionary department of the Young Peoples Leagu , which is to be held in the Waverly Parlors on Saturday, December 9th, beginning at 3 p.m. The girls will be prepared to serve tea from 3.45 p.m., until 6 o'clock and will provide a special lunch for any of the business men who may come in at the regular tea hour.

PROTESTED AGAINST GREEKS' EXPULSION.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—The United States Government took a strong position in the Near East conference yesterday in protesting against the expulsion of the Greek population from Constantinople. When the Turkish representative announced that the departure of all Greeks was one of the features of the Turkish programme concerning the adjustment of the populations, the United States representative read a statement expressing strong disapproval of the removal of the Greeks.

IT'S TIME TO LAY CARDS ON TABLE

And Decide to What Extent Progressives Shall Co-operate With Old Parties.

ANCASTER, Ont., Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—Without mentioning Premier Drury or referring directly to the "broadening out" controversy, J. J. Morrison, in an address to the local Farmers' Club last night, declared that the time had come to end the uncertainty surrounding political activities of the U.F.O. and definitely decide to what extent farmers' representatives should co-operate with old line parties. He expressed his own willingness to lay all his cards on the table and called on others to do the same.

"Broadening out" will be debated at the U.F.O. convention in Toronto, with Premier Drury and Mr. Morrison leading the discussion. Mr. Morrison's speech last night cleared the decks for the long awaited debate. It was a frank invitation to all contending forces in the movement to settle their disputes and unite in carrying out the purposes of the Association.

Mr. Morrison boldly outlined the difficulties confronting organized agriculture at the present time. Farmers weer faced with the disaffection of men who should be their leaders and misdirection of efforts of their representatives.

IMPRESSED BY PROSPECT FROM ARMOUR'S HILL

Prof. E. J. Zavitz Gives Assurance of Government Aid if Citizens Adopt It as a Park.

tle expense," remarked E. J. Zavitz, Chief of the Forestry Department, Provincial Government, to the committee representing various civic organizations yesterday afternoon, after walking to the top of Armour's Hill, and after it had been explained that a bylaw was to be voted on by the city on January 1st, authorizing the city council to purchase it for park purposes.

Mr. Zavitz assured the representatives of the City Council, Chamber of Commerce, G.W.V.A., Horticultural Society, Patriotic League of Ashburnham, that in the event of the city purchasing this property for park purposes, the Provincial government would be prepared to supply sufficient evergreens, spruce,pine etc., free of charge to the city, to plant the entire hill, and would arrange to send a man down for a short period to supervise the planting, and also that the services of H. J. Moore, of the Department of Public Highways, who laid out the plan of Victoria Park at Niagara Falls, could also be secured for the definite planning of Armour's Hill.

School Children Help.

He stated that the planting should be done in groups of 30 to 40 trees within a radius of about 15 feet, which when full grown would give the effect from a distance of a verdure clad hill. The suggestion was made that the cooperation of the senior classes of the public schools, and the Collegiate Institute might be secured to plant each group, one group to each class, and naming them by the school, such as King George, Queen Mary, etc.

Mr. Zavitz agreed that this suggestion would serve to interest the children and would also assist in the protection of the trees, but in the event of so doing must be under capable and close supervision. He said although he was not an engineer he though it quite possible and practicable with very little expense to lay out a small system of driveways, one of which at least could be used as a toboggan and sleigh slide, which could be so arranged to end near the starting point, and not run into any of the adjoining roads, or in other words taking the form of a large curve.

A Wonderful Prospect.

Owing to the wonderful view, North, South, East and West, which is secured when on the hill, he stated that the citizens would no doubt regret it if they did not secure it as city property.

He stated that in the event of the passing of the bylaw the city should secure the services of Mr. H. J. Moore, landscape gardener, so as to enable a definite plan to be made, and ready for planting of the striplings between the middle of April and the middle of May. The striplings would be very small, and would not create a very attractive appearance to start off with, but after two seasons the trees would grow on an average of two feet per year.

On behalf of the committee, Mr. Tooms, M.L.A., expressed their appreciation to Mr. Zavitz for coming to Peterboro, and also for the promised assistance in connection with the proposed park.

Mr. Zavitz requested that a large scale map of the property be forwarded to him as soon as possible so that he might arrange for the necessary supply of evergreens.

INFORMAL DANCE.

An informal dance and at home for the members of the G.W.V.A. and their wives, families and friends will be held in the G.W.V.A. hall to-morrow evening. This is one of a series of similar affairs which will be given by the association throughout the witner for the purpose of bringing the members into closer contact with one another.

CARD OF THANKS.

Capt. E. Massey Cooke and daughters wish to publicly thank Drs. Moir and Cameron, the matron and staff of Nicholls Hospital, especially Nurse Simpson, for their care and attention to the late Mrs. Massey-Cooke during and after her recent operation. Also to thank [illegible] friends and associations who sent flowers to her memory and in many ways showed expressions of sympathy.

INVESTIGATED FIRE AT 230 GEORGE STREET.

The Deputy Fire Marshal of the province of Ontario, L. J. Bishop, has made investigations into the fire at the home of Mrs. Gordon Elliott, 230 George. The fire, which was at first thought to have been of incendiary origin, occurred on the evening of December 4 at 6.45. Mrs. Elliott explained to Mr. Bishop that she had just been in the room, had struck several matches to light a lamp and had carelessly thrown the matches on the floor. She lighted the lamp in order to see to dress her children for the evening. She had just left the room and the house when the fire broke out. The reason of this, alleges Mrs. Elliot, was that a match had lodged in the mattress and had eventually set it on fire. The damage was estimated to be around $100.

Yesterday afternoon at 4.05 the brigade were called out on a false alarm to Box 12, at the corner of Brock and Rubidge streets.

UNIQUE TOURNEY LAKEFIELD VILLAGE

But Cold Weather Affected Attendance—Good Sports

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 8.—A splendid programme of indoor sports was staged for the Athletic Tournament in the rink here last night; but the attendance was not so large as it would have been had the weather not been so bitterly cold.

The following events proved of keen interest and evoked considerable enthusiasm from the spectators:

Baseball Game

A baseball clash between the Bear Cats and Wild Cats, teams composed of both sex, in which the former won by a score of 9 to 4. Only five innings were played. The line-ups were:

Bear Cats—H. Northey, (pitcher); Jack Ridpath, (catcher); Braden Blewett (1b); Jean Ridpath (2b); Bell Watson (3b) C. W. Weaver, (s.s.) Gladys Manning and Helen Burgess in the field.

Wild Cats—E. Grier (pitcher); A. H. Clarke, (catcher); T. B. Marling (1b); Mrs. Grier (2b); Mrs. Blewett, (3b); Mrs. Millage (s.s.); K. Nixon and Dr. Kennedy in the field.

Dr. S. J. Gibson umpired the game to the satisfaction of all.

Foot Races

The following sprinting events were keenly contested:

Ladies (50 yards open).—1 Helen Burgess, 2 Jean Ridpath.

Girls (10 and under).—Ione Sanderson being the only entry was awarded the prize.

Boys (50 yards, 10 and under)—1 Johnnie McFadden, 2 Elwood Northey.

Tug of War

This was contested by two teams of ten men each from the concrete gang of the Canada Cement Co., and the Business men —Trude Waldon, captained the concrete team, while John Sabatino captained the business men's aggregation.

The prize went to the Business Men, who pulled their opponents over the line twice out of three pulls.

Shuttle Race

Pillow Fight

This amusing combat brought the tournament to an end. It was run off in two sections—for boys 16 and under and for boys over 16 years. The first event was won by Lionel Lawless, the second by Elwood Pearson.

Cobb Gets a Hit

CHICAGO, Dec. 8. — (Canadian Press).—The disputed hit by Ty Cobb in a game at New York last May finally declared in Cobb's favor yesterday by President Ban Johnson of the American League. Dispatches from New York that the Baseball Writers' Association there were preparing a protest and requests from New York for a formal ruling, brought an announcement from the American League Executive's office that "Cobb will be credited with the hit."

Many Players Out For Hockey

An exceptionally good number of players are showing up for the indoor hockey practices which are being held in the Y.M.C.A. twice a week. The boys are working under the direction of Coach Walter Jackson and are rapidly rounding into shape. It will need but very little extra practice to put a fast team in the rink within a very few days after they get some ice.

Among the players who were on hand last evening were: Carey, Shorty Burgess, Lou LeBarr, Ranger, J. Murray, O'Toole, Doug Miller, L. Collins, Art. Kingdon, Bob Miller, H. Wellwood, eBn Sims, "Red" Edgar, Alf Johnson, C. Bradley, Jack LeBarr, Mahood and several others.

Here and There in Sportdom

George N. Graham will be third man in the ring for the boxing bouts at the P.A.A.A. smoker in Victoria Hall next Tuesday night. Harold Follis' orchestra of four pieces will provide the music. Eight bouts are carded, and boxing fans will see a lot of action. The boxing committee has another "screamer" that promises to get more laughs than did the comic number at the opening show last spring. Something for everybody is the policy of the Athletic Association, and Tuesday night's show should draw those interested in the sport of the squared ring.

Greetings to Tom Shields, who is willing to lend a hand in the big task of promoting sport in this city. Mr. Shields will coach the girls who will play hockey this coming winter. The local team in the Ontario Ladies' Hockey Association will probably be grouped with Lakefield and Campbellford, with which clubs the Peterborough girls had some interesting contests last winter.

Toronto athletes are roaring because the prizes at a show held at Cleveland didn't suit them. Toronto athletes will roar, no matter what comes their way. Peterborough youngsters are not hilarious because of the magnitude of the gifts bestowed on them by the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association, which has the reputation of being lop-sided, with Toronto on the big side.

If you don't believe this one, send a radio to Battling Siki. Since our old friend "Mickey" Murray did not appear on the Aura Lee line-up the other night, it is stated that the one and only Kevin will return this way and put in the winter with one of the City Hockey League teams.

The Lindsay Post has had the last word. Jack Oulette will not reside in Belleville. He will stay in Lindsay, and continue to provide batting practices for the other Central League teams. Well, if Lindsay is satisfied, nobody else will kick.

The basketeers are away again, the opening games in the City League, played at the Y.M.C.A. Gym., going to "Hip" Hardill's young associates, who defeated the Belmonts, and the Rotarians, who put one over the Kiwanians. These league games are played on Wednesday night.

Hand it to the Raybestos crowd. Their newest venture is an open-air rink on the property of the company. Enthusiasm for athletics and recreation starts at the fountain head of the company, and extends all down the line. They are a good bunch at the Raybestos plant, and their athletic activities are taking a prominent place in local sport.

ROTARY-KIWANIS PLAY A TIE GAME

Game Had to Be Called at the End of the Eighth Inning With Each Side Boasting Eleven Runs.

Rotary and Kiwanis had the opening number on the schedule for the soft ball league at the armoury last evening and battled through eight innings to a 11 to 11 tie. The game had to be called at the end of the eigth frame because their time was up. Kiwanis made a great start when they gathered five runs in the second session which made them look like a million dollars till Rotary duplicated the performance in the fifth frame and showed signs of strength from them on. The Kiwanis went to bat for the final half of the last inning just four runs to the bad. They went at it with a will and plied the willow to such good advantage that the necessary four runs to tie up the game crossed the plate before the third man was retired.

The players were:

Rotary — Young 2,b; MacDonald, 1b; Matthews, 6; Primeau, ss; Dobbin, lf; Graham, c; Lawrie, 3b; Bellegham, ss; McPherson, rf.

Kiwanis — Phalen, p; Widdifield, c; Webber, 1b; McLean, 2b; Neil ss; Cummer, b3; Dick, lf; Lacey, ss; Craig, lf.

Score by innings:

Rotary .. ..002052—11
Kiwanis .. .. 05001014—11

RAYBESTOS WON BY LONE TALLY

Engineers Put Up a Great Battle But Needed One More Run For Safety.

The Engineers and Raybestos clashed in the third and biggest game of the evening in last night's soft ball league schedule and the Engineers were nosed out by one run.

The engineers started out strong with three runs in the first and four in the third innings but from then till the ninth they failed to master Holyman's curves with any degree of success. In the final frame they went to bat three runs behind their opponents and staged a rally that had all the earmarks of a victory. Two runs resulted but the side was retired before another could be brought in to tie the score.

The Raybestos gang had their big inning in the fourth when four runs were marked up on the wall. They, however, showed a steady strength all through, yielding the willow to advantage and in a manner that in the end brought them victory.

The players were:

Raybestos — Ranger c; J. Russell 3b; Holyman p; Coursey ss; Curvin 1b; Abbott lf; Wolfe ss; Byers rf; G. Russell 2b.

Engineers — McCarney rf; Metheral ss; Carruthers lf; Helson c; Frost 2b; Batten ss; Langley p; Jackson 3b; Munro 1b.

Score by innings:

Raybestos .. ..200411101—10
Engineers .. ..304000002— 9

FIREMEN-GUNNERS FAILED TO DECIDE.

The Firemen and Gunners followed the Rotary-Kiwanis game on last last night's soft ball league schedule and also followed their lead in the matter of a tie game, the final score being 9 to 9. This game only went to the end of the fifth innings when it had to be called because the time allotted for it had flown. The teams were very evenly matched and at the end of the second, fourth and fifth innings the score was tied:

The players were:

Score by innings:

Gunners .. ..13131—9
Firemen .. .. 22041—9

Senega ese Akceps Carpentiers' Defi

PARIS, Dec 8—Battling Siki, bete noir of Parisian boxingdom, to-day accepted a challenge to meet Georges Carpentier in a return battle for the world's light-weight title.

As Siki has been disqualified the bout could not be staged in the ordinary way, so Georges defied the black to fight privately, receipts, if any, to go to charity. Carpentier's challenge was to a fight anywhere and under any conditions the Senegalese wishes, and carried a rider to the effect he could whip the black decisively in three rounds.

This being conveyed to Siki, whose charges that the fight in which he won the title from Carpentier was "fixed" have raised a furore and threatens to disrupt the whole boxing game in France, the Senegalese retortedhe would fight any place any at any tme, and "beat up Georges worse than before."

To Take Part in the Dedication Services at the Salvation Army Temple.

The annual Christmas bazaar under the auspices of the Women's Guild of All Saints' Church was opened yesterday afternoon, in the rooms over the Curling Rink on Charlotte Street, and will be continued to-day. The anticipated attendance for the afternoon was greatly reduced on account of the unfavorable weather, but the evening attendance far surpassed what was expected, and to-day is expected to be the biggest day of the two.

A number of booths on the second floor display numerous and beautiful Christmas gifts for both young and old. Though the articles of needlework, candy, cooking and many other lines of activity which go to make up a successful bazaar are numerous and well displayed, in no case has the quality of the article been sacrificed for quantity, and the beautiful and artistic work displayed is a credit to the activity of the members of the Guild. It is quite evident that a great deal of time has been spent in preparing the bazaar, which is under the convenorship of Mrs. Joseph Crowe, and her many helpers are to be congratulated on their work and planning of the various booths. Those in charge of some of the booths are:

Mrs. J. E. Johnson in charge of the home-made cooking booth.

Mrs. T. Pitchford and Mrs. J. D. McLeod in charge of the fish pond.

The fancy work booth, including dresses, quilts, table linen, knitted articles and children's clothing, was in charge of Mrs. T. Sabin.

Afternoon tea was served under the supervision of Mrs. Bert. Cranfield.

The supper served by the ladies at 5.30 last evening on the top floor proved especially popular, so much so that it required stresnuous efforts on the part of the ladies to serve all the guests who came. In spite of their numbers, the patrons were supplied, and additional facilities will be provided this evening that all-comers may be conveniently taken care of. This branch of the bazaar was in the capable hands of Mrs. Worboy, and the tea was poured by Mrs. N. H. Sutton.

This evening will be the last opportunity to take advantage of the many tempting purchases the ladies have to offer.

Harwood Man Charged With Breaking Into a Summer Home at Idyl Wyld.

COBOURG, December 8. — Considerable interest centred around the appearance of Clarence Weatherup, of Harwood, before Police Magistrate W. H. Floyd here in connection with the alleged theft of a quantity of household furniture and other goods from the summer home at Idylwyld, Rice Lake, of Mr. A. W. Carrick, Toronto.

Evidence was adduced which showed that between the fall of 1919 and the spring of 1922, Mr. Carrick's place had been broken into and various articles, including chairs and a lamp, had disappeared.

Six chairs corresponding to those belonging to Mr. Carrick are stated to have been found upon the premises of the accused, and similar chairs at another place.

The accused, through his counsel, elected not to be tried by the Magistrate, and applied for renewal of bail, which was granted. He will come up before Judge Ward upon a date to be fixed.

W. F. Kerr appeared for the Crown and A. C. Wilmot for the accused.

Capitol Entertainment

It is an age old story, "Everything For Sale", which is running for the rest of the week at the Capitol with the bright little screen artist, May McAvoy, as the star. Miss McAvoy is already well known to all motion picture patrons who have seen her take the leading role in the well known picture 'Sentimental Tommy' and "A Private Scandal". The part of Helen Wainwright in 'Everything For Sale", calls for a different characterization but Miss McAvoy has proved equal to all the various calls made upon her during her brief but successful career. Helen Wainwright has been reared by a mercenary aunt and has no more idea of the world than an infant, when she leaves boarding school and is put up for auction to the highest bidder in the matrimonial market. Her only ally is her uncle, whose many business failures has brought his family to the verge of ruin. It is either a wealthy marriage by the niece or poverty for her relatives. The girl is as so much clay in the hands of her scheming aunt and as usual money wins. Just on the eve of the wedding the discarded lover, rejected on account of his lack of means, returns and renews his suit, The bride-to-be meets him by stealth and is prevented by an accident from returning in time for the wedding. The guests and minister wait in vain and the suitor leaves the house in a rage and all is off. There is a wedding later in which the young man rejected at first is one of the contracting parties It is a typical society drama with every character represented true to life.

Short stories by Conan Doyle are to be presented at the Capitol every week. The first of these, now running, reveals a new trick by Sherlock Holmes by which he runs a criminal to earth. The great detective feigns illness and calls in the doctor who had infected a man with a mysterious and fatal disease and who tries the same means to get Sherlock Holmes out of the way. Under the belief that the detective is really dying the doctor answers a call to his bedside and in the presence of hidden witnesses boasts of the success of his scheme. This is one of Conan Doyle's best stories and the new feature of the Capitol's weekly programme cannot fail prove popular with its patrons.

AT THE GRAND.

"YELLOW MEN AND GOLD."

There are few people who do not thrill to a story of a search after hidden treasure, so that it is not surprising to find that the Goldwyn picture, "Yellow Men and Gold," adapted from Gouverneur Morris' novel of the same name, shown at the Grand last night, kept the spectators on the qui vive from start to finish.

"Yellow Men and Gold" contains all the ingredients for a spectacular and exciting adventure film. There is buried Spanish treasure on a lonely island, a mysterious map, a manly hero, a gang of unscrupulous crooks, some splendid sea scapes, a heroine who is under the wing of a crew of Chinese sailors, a thrilling fight between two rival expeditions, and then as a climax a most surprising ending. Those who have read the story know its possibilities and it may be added that the producer has made a splendid job of transferring the story to the silver sheet, while the others who have not followed Mr. Morris' characters on the printed page will find it a thriller in film form.

The cast, which is headed by Helen Chadwick and Richard Dix, gives a capital performance. There are no weak spots anywhere and "Yellow Men and Gold" can be said to stand out in the list of pictures Peterborough has seen recently. It is full of action, beautifully photographed, and the interest never wavers.

The vaudeville numbers on the Grand's bill adds variety to the programme. Vincent and Davey have a smooth working comedy, singing and talking act that is clean as well as classy. The woman member of the team sings "Alice Bluegown" in fine style and the two score in their closing duet, "Sometime May Be Too Late." The other act is contributed by "Happ" Simpson, billed as a comedian and acrobat. The latter he is, for he gives a clever exhibition of barrel jumping and acrobatic work, but if his stunts with the barrels were as poorly executed as his comedy, he'd break his neck trying them. However, the acrobatic end of his act makes up for the falling down of the comedy and gets a big hand to finish up with.

The Grand is providing a great bill for its patrons these nights for the feature picture alone is worth the admission price.

Was in Cremona's workshops made,
By a great master of the past,
Ere yet was lost the art divine;
Fashioned of maple and of pine
That in Tyrolean Forest vast
Had rocked and wrestled with the blast;
Exquisite was it in design,
Perfect in each minutest part,
A marvel of the Lutist's art;
And in its hollow chamber thus,
The maker from whose hands it came
Had written his unrivalled name,—

A CLUB BAG FOR MISS SANDERSON.

Has Been Organist of Murray Street Church Eight Years.

At a supper given in honor of Miss Sanderson in Murray street church, last evening, the presentation of a club bag with French ivory fittings and cut glass vase in recognition of Miss Sanderson's very acceptable services as organist of the church for eight years was accompanied by the following address:

"Dear Miss Sanderson,—

"During the eight years you have been associated with us as organist of the Murray Street Baptist Church choir your exceptional talent in chorus work as solo accompanist and organ soloist, has been recognized and appreciated, not only by the choir, but by all who have known you and have enjoyed your exceedingly clever work. Prompt, faithful efficient, and at all times willing, no matter what calls were made on your time and talent, you have filled a place in our esteem, respect and love which cannot be replaced.

"But it is not only in your professional capacity that you have endeared yourself to every member of the Murray Street Choir, but also, and perhaps more so in your splendid personality entering at all times whole heartedly into our social life, our pleasures, and frolics.

"Therefore we ask you to accept on behalf of the members of the Choir and the Murray Street Church this Club Bag and vase, that no matter where the fortunes of life may cause you to travel, you may have with you a remembrance of your friends here.

"We are pleased to know we are still to have you amongst us occasionally and trust that this happy relationship may indefinitely continue.

Signed on behalf of the choir,

"Walter H. Kidd, president,
"Mrs. Edith M. Sage, Pansy L. Westbrook."

Miss Sanderson was not present for the occasion and consequently the gift and address from the choir were forwarded her.

HUNDREDS TO GUARD THE VISITING PREMIERS DURING CONFERENCE

A MEETING TODAY

(By Charles M. McCann.)

LONDON, Dec. 9. — (United Press.) — Hundreds of detectives from Scotland yard, some disguised as waiters and cooks, guarded Premier Poincare of France and Premier Mussolini of Italy at Claridge's Hotel to-day, as the conference of Allied Premiers opened.

French Secret Service men were also on the job hovering about Poincare, while Mussolini had brought with him a Fascisti bodyguard.

The meeting of the heads of governments of Britain, France, Italy and Belgium, described by American Ambassador Harvey as the most important since Versailles, was started by Premier Bonar Law, when he invited Mussolini to a twenty minute chat. Afterwards Bonar Law saw Poincare.

All eyes fired on the conference focus Mussolini, the Fascisti Premier, who has caught the world's imagination as a statesman of a school all his own. He is hailed as the "X of Allied Algebra."

The conference was formally opened at noon when Poincare, Mussolini and Theunis of Belgium went together to 10 Downing street.

American observers were to be present and it had been reported the United States intended to make its voice heard here as at Lausanne, although not particitaing actively in the work of the parley.

American Ambassador to Germany Houghton and American Ambassador to Belgium Fletcher are in London, conferring with Ambassador Harvey.

The British are more optimistic than the French regarding the conference. Hope is expressed by today's papers that France has "lost her illusion that Bonar Law is less mindful of British interest than Lloyd George, because he was supposedly more friendly towards France than his predecessor."

It was understood that Poincare had a brief conference with Lloyd George before the opening of the conference although the ex-Premier has no connection whatever with the present parley. The French Premier is doing his best to exclude concrete discussion of France's reparations scheme until the Brussels conferenec, to which American observers have not been invited.

The intial programme for the present conference was abandoned and the first session opened with the Premier Poincare holding the floor position," hoping to reach a general agreement.

LONDON, Dec. 9. — (Canadian Press.) — Premiers of Britain, France, Italy and Belgium met here this afternoon to sketch the latest and perhaps the most important chapter in the long story of German reparations.

Details, it is expected, will be filled in at forthcoming Brussels conference, to which conversations beginning to-day are preliminary. Heads of delegations addressed gathering, Premier Poincare holdiig the floor the longest. They adjourned at two o'clock for luncheon, after a two hours' session.

CLOSED DOORS.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Behind closed doors at 10 Downing Street, closely guarded by scores of secret service operatives from their respective countries and Scotland Yard, the Prime Ministers of Britain, France, Italy and Belgium met this afternoon and got down to actual business of their conference.

A session this morning, attended by the Premiers and their Ambassadors was secret, but it was stated there was no discussion of policy, the four statesmen, Bonar Law, Poincare, Mussolini and Theunis, of Belgium, merely seeking mutual viewpoints towards the subject under discussion, Germany's debts to the Allies.

Preparation Proposals.

Considerable importance was attached to the arrival in London this afternoon of Dr. Burgmann, of Berlin, a noted economist, understood to have come here in connection with the reparations proposals. Dr. Burgmann, it was stated, does not officially represent the present German Government.

AUGUSTA, Maine, December 9. — Maine was out in front among all the States of the Union in its Prohibition law, and continues to set the pace in matters having to do with drinks.

Ice cannot now be legally served in—or for—any drinks in the hotels or public eating-places of the State—not even for water. Under the new law the ice cannot legally come in contact with any fluid that is to be drunk.

The keynote of this law is health. Officials point out that there is danger of the existence of harmful bacteria in ice, and that, while some of it is all right, a great portion of it comes from rivers and streams that are subject to pollution.

WINCH WHISKEY CASE ON DOCKET

Charge of Fraud in Sale to Solomon Segel is Due For Hearing.

Solomon Segel's charge of fraud against Reginald Winch in connection with an illicit whiskey deal, is one of two criminal cases that will be tried in the county court which opens next week. It was alleged in the preliminary hearing that Segel bought a quantity of what he believed to be whiskey, after sampling a bottle of it, and that when he opened the cargo on his way home he discovered that he only had so many bottles of water, and some of the bottles were not even honest water. Winch is out on bail of $1500.

Crown Attorney Hatton wasn't sure this morning whether the other case of Rex vs. Wickson would go to trial. In this action the late Byron Lederer of the Birmingham Motors Limited, acused L. W. Wickson of taking from the company's office some photographs of the Birmingham car, lists of subscribers, and some other papers.

WIFE ACCUSED PLOTTING HER HUBBY'S DEATH

Mrs. Ney J. Ford Offered $20,000 to Kill Husband, a Detective Charges.

POSED AS A GUNMAN

DETROIT Dec. 9.—Mrs. Mae Blenn Ford, 35 years old, is held at the Woman's Detention Home on a charge of attempted homicide, following an accusation by Lieut. Edward Kunath, headquarters detective, that she had hired him, under the impression that he was a gunman from Kansas, to kill her husband, Ney J. Ford, wealthy farmer of Dearborn.

Ford claims he is related to Henry Ford and in Circuit Court before Judge Ormond F. Hunt recently, when proceedings in connection with a divorce suit Mrs. Ford had instituted were in progress, he explained this relationship by asserting that his father and Henry Ford are cousins. Ernest . Liebold, Henry Ford's private secretary, to-day denied there was any relationship.

The story told by Lieut. Kunath, of how he had trapped Mrs. Ford, is without parallel in local police annals. He said he learned through underworld channels that she had gone to Toledo to hire a gunman to slay her husband so that she could inherit his estate, which she said was worth $350,000.

TAKES GUNMAN'S PART

The Toledo man, according to Kunath, was unwilling to undertake the killing, but suggested a Detroit gunman, known as "Eddie the Gun" When this information reached Kunath, the detective said to-day, he conceived the idea of himself posing as "Eddie the Gun".

Kunath said he saw Mrs. Ford some days ago and suggested they meet Wednesday night to discuss plans at an apartment at Park boulevard and Charlotte avenue. Police prepared the rendezvous by cutting a hole in a wall next to the kitchen, and concealing the aperture by newspapers and cooking utensils. Then Sergt. Ovid Straith, also a detective from headquarters, and another detective took places in the "listening room."

When Kunath arrived to keep the appointment, he was dressed in an old suit, a blue flannel shirt and had of three days' growth of beard. Into his belt was stuck an old 44 calibre army revolver.

DETAILS OF PLOT

Mrs. Ford, police say, then outlined plans for the killing. She told Kumath, they say, that the best way to get to the Ford farm was by proceeding out Grand River avenue to Plymouth road, along Plymouth road to the Town Line—and by a lane to the rear of the farm house, where he could park his automobile. Kunath, according to the details of the alleged plot, was to hide in a barn where Ford came early in the morning to work in his hay mow.

When Ford came into his barn, Kunath was to strike him on the head, and then carry the body by automobile to another hay barn on the farm. Here the body was to be placed under a pile of hay and the heap lighted. Kunath said Mrs. Ford told him the barn would burn several days and destroy all evidence of the crime. She suggested, he says,

Are Blackmailed By Ghosts Engaged Couple Pay $2,000

NEW YORK, December 9. — Evil spirits would make her and her fiance walk up and down Broadway naked, without realizing they were nude, unless they gave $2000 to the fiendish spooks through a certain medium, Miss Katherine Deodatti and her fiance, Edward Stoppiello, were told.

The couple listened in fear and trembling as the girl's stepmother Mrs. Maria Aquaro, told them of the threats of the evil wraiths. So they pawned her engagement ring and depleted their bank accounts to make the first payment to the ghosts through two mediums, Mrs. Rosa Santora and Mrs. Clementina Corbo.

They were admonished to say nothing to anybody and to sprinkle their footsteps with salt, which they did. Then the spirits demanded that the girl burn all her clothes. She burned them. The spooks demanded the second payment on the $2000 in an eerie voice over the telephone, and they visited the girl's home, making the night hideous with the creak and thud of toppling furniture and the crash of dishes.

The couple borrowed more money to pay to the spooks, but when they demanded that Stoppiello sell his business and turn over all the proceeds to them under penalty of death, he took up the matter with a friend, who turned the case over to the police. The mediums were put in jail under $25,000 bail each on charges of grand larceny, the engaged couple smiled for the first time since the spirits got after them.

SAYS REPORTS ARE CALUMNY

OTTAWA, Dec. 9.— (Canadian Press).—"The report that the Catholic church in France is faced with a split in the priesthood on the question of the marriage of priests is an abominable calumny", declared Rev. Father Louis Le Jeune of the University of Ottawa, before congregation of the Blessed Sacrament Church yesterday.

"I, as a native of Brittany can stand up and say that their is no split."

DISTINGUISHED MEN COMING PETERBOROUGH.

A group of distinguished people arrived in Peterborough this morning ,and have been spending the day visiting some of our local business institutions.

It is composed of representatives of foreign countries, who attended the recent World Temperance Congress held in Toronto.

The party is in charge of Rev. C. W. Lee, of Toronto, and includes Willem Ernits, of Esthonia. Mr. Ernits is a member of the Esthonian Parliament, and is a professor of philosophy in the Esthonia University. Otto Forkerk, of Switzerland, is a leader of the Young People's Temperance Movement in that country, and a Grand Deputy of the International Order of Good Templars.

Other members of the party include Rev. T. M. Harwood, of New Mexico, Rev. Wilson Stewart, of London, England, and Rev. Franklin Albrecias, of Spain.

Among the places visited was the Quaker Oats, which was visited this morning.

To-morrow several members of the party will speak briefly at the morning services of some of the city churches, and in the evening a mass public meeting will be held, after the church services, in the George Street Methodist Church, when further addresses will be given.

OPTIMISTIC NOW AT CONFERENCE

hought That Parley Has Weathered Its Most Difficult Session.

LAUSANNE, eDc. 9.—(Canadian Press).—Optimism reigned here today, for the conference had weathered what was probably it's most diffcult session to date. Ismet Pasha's statement yesteday of Turkish views on the Dardanelles and the reply of Lord Curzon resulted in a general clearing of conference atmosphere.

Turkey has apparently broken away from Russian control. Details of the Dardanelles settlement are being threshed out to-day by military and naval experts in informal meetings.

DENIES REPORT SPLIT THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

OTTOWA, December 9 (Canadian Press). — "The report that the Catholic Church in France is faced with a split in the priesthood on the question of the marriage of priests is an abominable calumny," declared Rev. Father Louis LeJeune, O. M.I., of the University of Ottawa, before the congregation of the Blessed Sacrament Church at the 8, 10, and 11 o'clock masses yesterday.

Among Roman Catholics yesterday was the Feast of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mother.

"I am sending a clipping to L'Action Francaise of Paris, and I am sure they will investigate this matter, and find it untrue. It is base calumny, and I, as a native of Brittany, in constant touch with the affairs of my country, can stand up and assert that there is no split in the Catholic Church in France," added Father LeJeune.

Sayings by Billy Matheson

Wrong can not be made right, either by legislation or popularity.

God never casts a man off until that man casts God off.

You say you are a Christian, but not active; has God granted you a vacation?

Plain preaching cannot offend real Christians. It only offends those who make a pretense of religion.

Bless God for the men who are in the church, who are millionaires, and are still going strong for God.

People don't think, if they did they would stop serving the devil. What fools we mortals are. What dupes men are to believe the devil.

Some Christians sing, "O for a thousand tongues to sing, My Great Redeemer's praise," and yet do not praise him with the tongue they have.

TURKEYS SOLD UP TO 50 CTS. ON THE MARKET

POTATOES 80 CENTS

The price of fifty cents a pound tended to discourage interest in the comparatively few turkeys that straggled in ahead of Christmas on the market this morning. It also stimulated some satirical comments such as that overheard at one of the tables where a prominent grocer bumped against the half dollar mark.

"Why stop there lady," he answered. "Seventy-five cents is a nice round figure, just as handy and you can say it nearly as quick."

As a matter of fact the public was merely giving the few turkeys a curious once over, although the supply was gradually taken up. Some of the prices were 45c. and even 40c. a pound was quoted at quite a few stalls by eleven o'clock.

Chickens were plentiful at 25c. up to 28c., eggs ranged from 65c. to 75c. and butter from 35c. to 38c. The market was crowded upstairs and down, and to the credit of the men who have habitually congregated about the stoves it may be remarked that they purposely gave them a wide berth this morning, leaving plenty of parking space for the farmers' wives. Perhaps the weather had something to do with this little amenity, but the old habit had evidently been jolted and may soon be regarded as permanently broken. Possibly this gesture to the women from the country may have some effect on prices, reflecting the mood of the women who may have the thermal zone around the stove to themselves after their long drives from the country, even if some of them may come in closed cars. Why shouldn't they?

Downstairs potatoes were holding out for 85c. a bag, but easing off to 80c. ,beef was 9 and 10 cents for front and hind quarters respectively, and pork 18 and 20c.

On Sunday, December 17, the local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association will parade to the Salvation Army Temple to take part in the special serswices for the unveiling of the memorial windows erected in memory of the members of the Salvation Army who gave their lives for the Empire. These windows were presented to the Salvation Army by the association and are now being erected in the main auditorium of the building. The services will be held at 3 o'clock, and the members of the G.W.V.A. and all returned soldiers in the city, regardless of whether they belong to the organization or not, are asked to assemble at the G.W.V.A. Hall at 2 o'clock, in uniform if possible, from where they will march to the Temple to take part in the services.

DESERTER HUSBAND WILLED $5 BY WIFE

She Wished Him to Purchase Memento of Her

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—In order that her husband, from whom she had been living apart for 12 years, might always have something to remind him of her estimate of him, Mrs. Herman Amsel left him $5 in her will.

The paragraph relating to her husband reads:

"I bequeath to my husband, Herman Amsel, who has deserted me for over 12 years, and whose whereabout are unknown to me, the sum of $5, with which to purchase some memento, which will ever recall to his mind this remembrance of him."

The residue of the estate was left to Mrs. Amsel's two daughters.

MRS. PHILLIPS LEAVING ONLY GHOST TRAILS

Escaped Murderess is Still at Large-.Trains Being Searched -- Clews Run Down.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., December 9. —A report that Clara Phillips, the escaped "hammer murderess," was seen at the St. Francis Hotel, at Tiajuana, Lower California, on her way into the interior of Mexico, led Sheriff William I. Trager and his posse of deputy sheriffs and newspaper men on a new chase across the border in an effort to apprehend the fugitive.

All other clues to her whereabouts had been run down and proved to be worthless.

Another Clue Falls Down.

During the afternoon Sheriff Traeger was investigating any possible connection that E. T. Johnson, sporting man, who became acquainted with Mrs. Phillips while both were prisoners here, might have been the case. But Johnston was released from custody after the sheriff sent word that no trace had been found of the woman in or near a bungalow said to have been owned by Johnson near Tiajuana.

Later in the day Mrs. Peggy Caffee, a principal witness for the prosecution in the Phillips case, advised the sheriff's office she believed the missing woman was hiding in or near Los Angeles. She said however she had no particular reason for that belief.

Scores of messages were received during the day from persons who claimed to have seen Mrs. Phillips, but the deputies said undoubtedly all arose from mistaken identity.

Question Woman at Cheyenne.

Cheyenne, Wyo., December 9. — Search here of the Union Pacific train on which Mrs. Clara Phillips was supposed to be a passenger, failed to show that she was on board. One passenger somewhat resembled the description of Mrs. Phillips but after questioning her the police did not detain her.

Err in Holding Two Here.

The Chicago detectives no longer believe that Mrs. Clara Phillips is fleeing eastward. Yesterday a number of the trains from the Pacific Coast were thoroughly searched on arrival.

The nation-wide search for Mrs. Phillips had switched momentarily to Chicago early yesterday morning when Chief of Police Delhanty of Omaha informed Chief of Detectives Hughes that one of two women on board an east bound Northwestern flyer, greatly resembled the "tiger woman." Detectives were rushed to meet the flyer at Maywood and two women on board the train who answered in a general way the description of Mrs. Phillips, were taken into custody and questioned at the detective bureau.

The women who took their detention as a huge joke, readily answered questions and soon convinced the officers that a mistake had been made.

GOLD PLATED KEY FOR COMMISSIONER

The re-opening of the re-constructed Salvation Army temple and the dedication of the Young People's Temple, an important and recently constructed adjunct to the Temple itself, was celebrated last evening with fitting ceremonies. Commissioner C. Sowton, who has charge of all Salvation Army activities for Eastern Canada, Newfoundland and Bermuda, was present for this important occasion.

At 7.30 the member of the local corps and their friends gathered at the door of the Young People's Temple, facing on Aylmer street, where a short service of prayer and song was held. The keys of the two doors were then handed by Mrs. H. Naish, the oldest Salvationist in the city to Commissioner Sowton. Before opening the door, Commissioner Sowton spoke briefly about the work of the Peterboro Corps among the young people of the city. Wonderful work, he said had been done in the past, but the members and officers, in whose immediate charge this effort had been rested found that they were handicapped by lack of sufficient accommodation, and so the present splendid building is the result. Commissioner Sowton then opened the door and an inspection of the building followed.

A Special Meeting

After the inspection a special meeting was held in the main auditorium of the newly constructed Temple. After the prayer of dedication by Commissioner Sowton bugle calls were sounded by members of the band and the building declared open.

Brigadier Moore, formerly connected with the Peterboro Corps, then introduced G. N. Gordon, K.C, M.P., as chairman for the remainder of the service. Mr. Gordon spoke briefly on the deep obligation the city owes the Army for the work it has done in caring for the friendless and afflicted, as well as the wonderful work that is being carried on among the young people of the city for the building up of a greater and a better young manhood and young womanhood, The Young People's Temple, was he said, the finest building of its kind that the Salvation Army had in Canada, and it was a building that the city might well be proud of. He also told of the tremendous efforts made by R. C. and William Braund who had given a great deal of thought, time and work to make the new temple what it is. The Salvation Army, he said, is one of the best business propositions in the city, and the people should stand behind it in all its efforts.

Gold Plated Key

R. C. Braund, also spoke briefly and extended a cordial invitation to one and all to come to any time and

TO-DAY'S BLUNDER CORRECTED

No matter how dirty the house-cat becomes, she should never be washed with soap and water. Once a week she should be rubbed with a little dry boracic acid which can be brushed out again. When she is very dirty, her fur can easily be cleaned with a little warm bran, which is applied in the same manner as boracic acid.

B. C. WILL HAVE BD. OF CONTROL TO SELL FRUIT

Will Operate Next Year and a Central Agency Will Be Organized to Sell the 1924 Crop.

REGULATE MARKET.

KELOWNA, B.C., Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press.)—All fruit grown in the interior of British Columbia next year will be governed in its sale by a board of control composed of shippers and growers with a balance of power in the growers' hands. This was the plan decided upon following meetings of representative shippers and growers yesterday, as many growers thought a central agency could not be oragnized in time for the 1923 crop. It was decided to support the board of control measure, but it was agreed that a central selling agency should be established for the spring of 1924.

Under the new arrangement, shipping firms will find buyers as in the past, but all sales contracts, shipments, credits and general policies will be regulated to prevent glutting flow of fruit to consuming centres wil lre regulated to prevent glutting of the market and consequent lowering of prices.

DAIL EIREANN DEFENDS EXECUTION OF REBELS

Protests of Labor Members Only Brought Out the Fact that the Dail Was Behind Movement to Wipe Out Anarchy.

MUST MEET CRISIS.

DUBLIN, December 9 (Canadian Press). — The execution of Rory O'Connor, Liam Mellowes, and two other rebels as a form of reprisal brought the Government into conflict with the Labour members of the Dail Eireann at yesterday afternoon's session.

While defeated for the moment in their attempt to bring about a debate on the executions, the Labourites served notice that they were not done with the question, and warned the Government that such acts would tarnish the good name of the Irish Free State before the world.

President Cosgrave peremptorily refused, but Mr. Johnson pressed his demand, whereupon the president appealed to the chairman to proceed with the scheduled business, the election of a committee for the appointment of members.

The Labour member retorted that executions such as these were far more important than the election of any committee, and that they might end in there being no need for such election. He moved the suspension of the standing orders to allow the matter to be debated, but President Cosgrave objected, a division was taken, and the Labour motion was rejected by a vote of 34 to 14.

Mr. Johnson then gave formal notice that he would raise the question later, declaring it needed urgent attention, and the Labourites withdrew their nominations for the committee to appoint Ministers, so that it would not be representative of all Parties, as prescribed by the constitution.

To this move President Cosgrave replied that the election would proceed as scheduled, and that if any of the members neglected their duty it was their own affair.

Johnson Accuses.

Mr. Johnson found his opportunity to make the Labour position clear at adjournment. He strongly denounced the Government for indulging in reprisal executions, and pointed out that the men executed not have been engaged in any confined in prison for an offence dating back to last July. The fact that they had been incarcerated since that time showed that they could not ave been engaged in any conspiracy as alleged by the Government; in fact, any other four prisoners might as well have been taken out and shot.

Had the Government no regard, he asked, for the good name of the Irish State, or for the honour of Ireland, that they should make their first act one to destroy in the public mind the association of Government with the idea of law? He was afost forced to say that the Government had killed the new State at its birth.

George Gavan Duffy seconded Mr. Johnson's protest, asking: "When is this Corsican vendetta to end?" He declared the Ministers seemed to forget that they were a Government and that all forms of vengeance should cease.

Mulcahy Replies.

Minister of Defence Mulcahy, replying, said the men had not been executed because of the assassination of a man whom the Government honoured (Sean Hales), but because there were forces working around them more vicious and insidious than Great Britain had ever employed against a representative Government in Ireland.

The Government was conducted by about ninety men and was most vulnerable if it tolerated an armed band intent simply upon the assassination of every member of Parliament. The Army Council, therefore, had recommended the drastic action, wich was carried out not as a punishment or as vengeance, but as a deterrent.

They had not executed men unresponsible for the policy which faced them; the Speaker of the Dail had been threatened by the leader of the destruction forces, and the assassination of their members had already begun.

General Mulcahy's speech was loudly applauded.

Cathal O'Shannon followed with a severe indictment of the Government. He declared the executions would shock the conscience of the world; they were nothing sort of murders, and the whole affair proved the incompetence of the Government.

The debate was continued by Deputy John Milroy and Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Home Affairs.

The latter stated that the executions were coldly and deliberately decided upon by the Government as necessary, both as a punishment and a deterrent. War was anarchy, and the law was inapplicable in such cases.

Crisis Exists.

Men with "doll's house" minds were out of place in this crisis. He had not observed similar indignation when Michael Collins was killed. Eamonn DeValera, who claimed to be president, had no army save a body of men who had degenerated into Apaches. The Governor-General, he said, did not come into the question while a state of war existed. The Cabinet stood by the Army Council in the step taken.

Mr. O'Higgins continued that fate had placed the Ministers in the positions they held while other people were trying to garrote the nation, and they knew no better means of prevention than those they had employed.

Darrell Figgis, while declaring himself an opponent of the Irregulars, condemned the execution of men without trial. The killing of Sean Hales was murder because the man who shot him had no legal sanction, but neither was there legal sanction for yesterday's executions.

Professor MacNeill, Minister of Education, challenged this proposition, and contended that the extreme emergency had given the Government full authority. Despite the timid croakings now heard, he believed the action of the Government would have the backing of the Irish people. He challenged the Government's opponents to indict him for murder if they believed he was guilty of murder by sanctioning these executions.

President Cosgrave, in an impassioned speech closing the debate, said there recently had been a dastardly attempt on the guards. There was a diabolical conspiracy afoot—and the Irregular leaders had met and discussed it—for the assassination of the members of the Dail; but the leaders turned it down on paper, while gangs took it up so that the people at the top could disclaim responsibility. The only way to meet the situation was to crush it, and strike terror in those responsible.

Mr. Johnson challenged the division on the formal motion for adjournment to show how many supporters the Government had.

A vote was taken and 39 members supported the Government and 14 opposed it.

The House then adjourned until next Tuesday.

Large Wheat Sales Agency is Found

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press.)—The largest co-operative wheat sales agency in the world, which, according to its organizers, will handle 10,000,000 bushels in its first year, was formed here yesterday at a meeting of six co-operative organizations, representing ten States.

The new organization is known as the American Wheat Growers' Association and was formed at a meeting of trustees of the Northwest Wheat Growers Associated, representing five States, and the trustees of five other co-operative bodies representing five other States. Headquarters of the new association probably will be located in either Minneapolis or Kansas City, it was said.

SHIPWRECKED CREW IS BACK TO SAFETY.

CURLING, Nf., Dec. 9.— (Canadian Press.)—A shipwrecked crew—the captain and 31 men of the Norwegian steamer Nordfjeld— arrived here yesterday after a trip by dog team and costal steamer from Flowers Cove, in the Straits of Belle sle. Their steamer was wrecked there two weeks ago while bound from Sunderland, England, for Gaspe, P. Q. The captain said his vessel was a total wreck, high on the rocks, her bottom broken in. The crew is on the way to Halifax, N.S.

CONFLAGRATION SWEPT OVER A WESTERN CITY

RELIEF MEASURES.

ASTORIA, Oregon, December 9 (Canadian Press). — The business district of Astoria, the oldest city in Oregon, is in ruins, two are dead, hundreds of persons are homeless, and property loss estimated at $15,000,000 was caused by a fire here yesterday.

For ten hours the fire held sway, eating an ever-widening path through the city until shortly after noon, when dynamite stayed the flames.

Banks, newspaper plants, hotels, stores, theatres, and numerous other buildings were destroyed.

According to Fire Chief E. B. Foster, the fire got out of control because it burned the piling beneath the buildings, upon which the business section of th city was built. He attributed the disaster to failure to fill in the space beneath the piling.

Norris Staples, president of the Bank of Commerce, dropped dead of heart failure while the fire was at its height.

The body of C. J. Smith, a transient, was found hanging under the sidewalk of the waterfront, but whether he had ended his life because of the fire or for other reasons, the police were unable to determine. He had spent the night in a cheap lodging-house on the waterfront.

Thirty blocks were wiped out by the flames. Many homes in the oldest residence district were destroyed, and about fifty families living in an apartment house were made homeless by the destruction of that building.

In addition to these, many persons occupying rooms in the destroyed area lost everything they had except the clothing on their backs.

A committee of citizens met at the call of Mayor James Bremmer, and planned immediate relief measures. They were assured of help from Portland and Seaside. Every restaurant and hotel in the city had been destroyed, as well as the stocks of goods in the stores, and there is prospect of immediate want.

A detachment of the Oregon National Guard was due to arrive last night to aid the local police. Orders were issued to keep every person out of the burned district last night.

A meeting of all merchants was called for to-day to discuss plans for re-building.

Murderer of Hales May Be Identified

DUBLIN, Dec. 9. — (Canadian Perss.)—The coroner's inquest into the death of Sean Hales, Representative in the Dail, who was assassinated Thursday, resulted in a verdict of murder against persons unknown.

A British soldier, who testified at the inquest, said he would be able to identify one of the members of the attacking party as he had seen the man daily in the streets of Dublin.

Official Opposition Not to Be Changed

WINNIPEG, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press.)—"I don't see any reason why the official opposition in the federal house should be changed," declared Robert Forke, M.P., Progressive leader in a long distance telephone conversation from Pipestone, Man., with a local paper yesterday regarding a Toronto report that Right Hon. Arthur Meighen was in danger of losing the official leadership of the federal opposition with the annual stipend of $10,000 attached thereto."

"We can and always could have claimed this title, our majority over the Conservatives at the last division of the House being 15," Mr. Forke said.

Asked whether a meeting of the Progressives would be called to consider the proposed change, Mr. Forke said no meeting was contemplated prior to the session.

GERMANY CAN AND MUST PAY

So Declares Premier Mussolini of Italy to Newspapermen — Reaches London.

PARIS, Dec. 9. — (Canadian Press)—"Germany can pay", declared Premier Mussolini of Italy to the newspaperman yesterday just before his train pulled out of the station for Boulogne.

"I am going to London in the hope that we will pass from words to facts," continued the Premier, en-route through Paris to the Premier's conference. "Italy, like France, has suffered. We also have our ruins to rebuild, and we are not prosperous enough to make generous presents to Germany.

"I am persuaded," he added, "that the Allies at London will reach a common accord."

BRITAIN'S WELCOME

LONDON, Dec. 9—Premier Mussolini of Italy was nearly mobbed by a band of sixty shouting, singing, black-shirted Fascisti, and huudreds of others, including many women, when he arrived at Victoria Station late last night, for to-morrow's conference of Allied Premiers. Black Fascisti fezzes and diplomatic top hats were smashed and police helmets lost when the crowds surged about the diminutive figure of the Fascisti leader. A monocled official had the greatest difficulty extending Britain's hand of welcome to the Italian representative.

Ministers Declined To Pledge Themselves

LONDON, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press Cable)—When Premier Bonar Law was questioned in the House of Commons yesterday regarding the position of the former postmaster-general F. G. Kellaway, who as such negotiated with the Marconi Company and has since joined the directorate of that concern, he declined to extract from his ministers a pledge that they would not, within five years of leaving office, ally them selves with any private concern with which they had bargained in their ministerial capacity.

ASQUITH DENIES CHARGES MADE BY P. JOHNSON

Labor Member Made Insinuations Regarding the Sudanese Loan — No Notice Given.

STRONG REPLY.

London, December 9. (Canadian Press.) — The House of Commons listened fittingly yesterday to the dignified statement by former premier H. H. Asquith repelling the insinuation contained in a speech by the labor member for Stirling and Clackmannan, P. Johnston at a late hour on Thursday night to the effect that Asquith's participation in the strong deputation to the late government in regard to the Sudan loan guarantee, was associable with the fact that one of the Bonham-Carters the, family into which one of Asquith's daughters married, held a Sudanese appointment.

The ex-Liberal Premier, amid loud and continuous cheers, said that during his forty years of public life he had never known anybody on the floor of the House to have the courage to make that insinuation.

Mr. Asquith drew attention to the fact that the usual notice that such a charge was to be made was not given him so that he might have dealt with it immediately.

Mr. Asquith explained that he participated in the deputation contrary to the usual rule because his government had passed earlier legislation on the subject and he was convinced that further financial assistance was necessary. Also he did so at the request of his constituents in Paisley whose welfare depended on the development of cotton-growing in the Sudan.

The ex-Premier made play of the fact that the deputation included J. R. Clynes, the labor leader and, the Earl of Derby, "a curious trinity of conspirators to impose on a government, and parliament a corrupt bargain in the interest of a selected set of capitalists and profiteers."

Johnston replying expressed regret for not having fulfilled parliamentary etiquette by giving Mr. Asquith previous notice, but raised a commotion by emitting to withdraw the insinuation.

Ramsay Macdonald, leader of the Labor forces, endeavored to persuade Johnston to withdraw. Johnston then rose and said "In response to my leader's appeal———" but the remainder of the sentence was interrupted by the general clamor.

The Trades Facilities Bill which was the subject of the debate, was then read the third time whereupon Mr. Asquith left the chamber amid loud and prolonged ministerial and Liberal cheers.

Representative World Prohibition Delegates Are Given a Rousing Reception—News of Interest

The Temperance delegates who have been attending the World Convention in Toronto, Dr. Hercod of Switzerland, Dr. Stewart of England Mr. Ernst of Ehthonia, Mr. Albusci of Spain and Mr. Harwood of United States were met upon their arrival yesterday by prominent local temperance workers and taken on a tour of inspection through the various industries including Weston Shoe Co., Trent Valley Woollen Mfg Co's and the new Hydro plant at Ranney Falls.

At 3.30 a round table conference was held in the Public Library, Mr. J. A. Irwin occupying the chair and attended by the delegates and local workers which included some ladies After the customary introduction, Rev. Dr. Stewart of London, England opened the Conference by a series of question relative to date and steps leading up to the present prohibition in town.

In the evening a mass meeting was held in the Opera House, which was filled. On the platform with the chairman Mr. J. A. Irwin, were Rev. Dr. Stewart, London England, Dr. Hercod, of Switzerland, Mr. Albusci of Spain, Mr. Ernst of Esthonia and Mr. Harwood of the New Mexico, also Revs. C. F. Mc. Intosh and H. B. Kenny.

An excellent musical programme was also rendered consisting of a solo by Miss Cherrie Turner, duet Misses Emma Meiklejohn and Faye Ketcheson, solos Mr. George Lucy and Rev. Robert Fry all of which were much enjoyed.

The first speaker, Mr. Albusci of Spain, spoke through Mr. Harwood as interpreter and stated that he was ashamed of his country because of its unclean politics. The Spanish Government required heavy duty on export of wine because it has great interests in export of wine. Spain sells fish to Iceland and forces her to buy Spanish wine. When a law prohibits something in Spain, it is prohibited to all save the great companies.

The second speaker Mr. Ernst of Esthonia read an excellent paper on condition of the liquor traffic in Esthonia.

Dr. Hercod, the third speaker, representing Switzerland, in a fluent manner contrasted Canada and Switzerland, with their vast mountains, the only difference being Canadian mountains and Canadian people are free while the Swiss people are not. In that country six different languages are spoken and referred to the great international society which is against prohibition In France there are 5,000,000 saloons saloons in cellars in ground floors, in fact everywhere. France, Portugal and Spain are forcing Switzerland to buy her liquor. Dr. Hercod urged his hearers to keep their prohibition laws, and their happiness and as an example to his country.

Rev. Dr. Stewart in an address that kept his hearers in rapt attention, told of conditions as they existed in England and told how prohibition in Canada and the United States had effected England by waking up the liquor interests so they were sending out anti-prohibition literature and speakers. The speaker asserted that 400,000,000 pounds sterling are spent every year in the British Isles for drink, or a pound per week in every home and he predicted England would go under unless she combats this gigantic evil. In England the society for prevention of cruelty to children in the last 25 years had discovered one and one half million children starved, abused, because of liquor; 11,000 blind children in London before the war; over 55.6 per cent traceable to vices of parents that spring from the liquor traffic. Reference was also made to the fact that liquor is not a stimuliant but a dimisher of power. There are too many liquor shops and not

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1922.

A CHRISTMAS PROBLEM.

Organizations and individuals in Peterborough are already planning for Christmas activities that include the bringing of Yuletide cheer into homes that otherwise would be devoid of anything that savours of Christmas.

It is splendid work, that brings its own reward.

But what a pity that it could not be systematized to prevent overlapping, and what is much more necessary, to ensure that no destitute family is overlooked.

The churches, organizations like the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, and many other agencies, are all ready to do their part in this fine responsibility.

There will be plenty for everybody if they can all be reached.

That is the difficulty.

Some families will get more than they require — others, unfortunately, may get nothing.

The overlapping does not matter very much. It is better that a dozen households should be over-supplied with Christmas cheer than that one family should see Christmas pass without any of the good things that more fortunate people regard as a matter of course, or perhaps indeed without the mere necessaries of life.

The problem of securing a proper list of the families who should be helped, and of dividing up the names among the organizations who want to assist, is one that deserves serious consideration at the present time.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

The formal opening and dedication of the Senior and Junior Young People's Temple is an event upon which the local corps of the Salvation Army and which unmistakably indicates the great growth achieved by the organization since it was first launched in Peterborough.

The Salvation Army commenced operations in this city in a very modest way, and vast strides have been made since the first few Salvationists conducted their little meetings.

The corps has been blessed not only by the fact that it has always included in its local membership men of energy and business ability, but because the commanding officers supplied by headquarters have proved themselves capable executive officers for their own organization and useful citizens as well.

As the work of the Salvation Army has grown in Peterborough, so has the position of commanding officer become more and more important, and his relations with the community generally become more significant.

Such leaders as Adjutant McElhiney, Adjutant Wallace Buntin, who recently was transferred to Ottawa, and Adjutant Smith, now in charge, have not only seen the corps under their command grow and flourish, but they have found time to do valuable community service in various capacities.

The new Young People's Temple will be of great benefit to the Salvation Army. Its erection was made necessary by the rapid growth in membership which made the existing accommodation, once thought ample for many years to come, inadequate for the work that is being carried on.

WHAT ABOUT LABOR?

An interesting question in connection with the Provincial elections next year is what part Labor will play in the campaign.

In the turnover which tossed the Hearst Government into the discard, a number of representatives of organized Labor found themselves members of the Legislature when the smoke of battle cleared away.

Later, when Ernest C. Drury was induced to leave his activities at Crown Hill to form a Government, it became necessary for the Farmer members to take Labor into an alliance that has been maintained ever since.

It is idle to pretend that the Farmers would not have preferred to have enough U.F.O. members in the House to make such an alliance unnecessary.

In many questions of policy the two wings hold diametrically opposite views and the arrangement has only hung to-day through a series of compromises.

What will happen at the next election?

The Labor party is not as strong to-day as it was when the last appeal to the people was made.

In municipal campaigns throughout the provinces it has fared badly, so badly, indeed, that Labor candidates as such are not numerous.

Some of the members elected to the present Legislature under the Labor banner are already preparing to offer themselves in the next fight simply as supporters of the present Government rather than as Labor candidates.

That does not indicate very much faith in the power of Labor as an influence at election times.

If it does, former Labor members in urban ridings will be found billed as Druryites, the same goods under a new name.

THE FARMERS' CONVENTION.

From an Ontario standpoint, the "battle of the century" will be the fight at the United Farmers of Ontario convention next week, when Premier Drury and Secretary J. J. Morrison are expected to lead in the debate over the vexed question of "broadening out."

The tone of the speech delivered by the nestor of the Farmers' movement at Ancaster leaves no doubt that Mr. Morrison believes that the time for the final show-down has arrived.

What will happen is not clear at this writing.

The U.F.O. secretary declares that there must be closer co-operation between the U.F.O. members of Parliament and the association, and intimated that members who switched their allegiance soon after election made it reasonable to doubt their original security.

The former is convinced that if the Farmers' political movement is to succeed it must include not only Farmers but all other people who endorse the U.F.O. policies and doctrine.

Mr. Morrison is opposed to any broadening out along lines that would bring about a Provincial political organization.

There is a sharp conflict in opinion, and the coming convention may clear the air, either by causing the contending forces to settle their disputes and uniting upon a policy or by splitting the Farmers' organization wide apart.

In view of the fact that there is to be a Provincial election next year, the result of the coming convention will be watched with the greatest interest, not only by the Farmers but by members of the two old parties.

THINGS THAT WILL NOT WORK.

Some people tell us that prohibition will not work. And most of us will admit up to date it has not been found to work quite perfectly in any one single case. But this also surely can be said, no other method of getting rid of the admitted liquor evil has been found to work quite so well.

We say "admitted liquor evil," because there is no intelligent person left anywhere who will not freely admit that the liquor traffic has been the prolific cause of alcoholism, vice, crime, inhumanity, political corruption, and a host of other evils in the body social and political. And there surely is not left any man in any civilized community who would not agree that these evils ought to be curbed and curtailed and got rid of in every way reasonably possible.

But prohibition will not effectively curb and curtail and get rid of these evils, they tell us, and besides it introduces a number of evil and hurtful factors itself. For these reasons some people, so they say, favor other methods and policies not quite so drastic.

In a general way there have been just two such methods and policies suggested and attempted, and there has been already quite sufficient experiment and trial in them to furnish evidence for judgment and conclusion. Some people have said that the great source of the evils of drinking lay in the hard liquors, and that, therefore, the way to reform lay in the licensing of beer and light wines. Others have said, that the liquor traffic was a great evil because it was carried on for private gain, and government control and sale was their remedy. These two experiments have been tried in many places, in fact they are both on trial in the two Provinces of Canada that have not adopted prohibitory legislation, and on trial long enough for the real results to begin to appear.

But what are the results of these experiments, not only in Canada, but all the world over? In the first instance the beautiful picture of people who drink being satisfied with beers and light wines—nobody drinking to excess and all the greater evils of drink disappearing—has not been realized. These supposedly less harmful drinks could not be had only in saloons where they were sold, and in every instance, without any exception, in the end these places of sale became nothing but the old-fashioned grog shop with all its evils. In not one instance has the beautiful picture been realized. And Government control and sale has over and over and over again been proven to be even more completely demoralizing as a method. That is the honest testimony of reliable men everywhere.

Of course, it might seem as if such results are not inevitable. Men will still argue that an altogether different end may be attained, and their arguments can be made to carry a certain measure of plausibility. But the facts in the end are always of the one sort.

The British Columbia situation is one of the most striking illustrations of the failure of the government control and sale system to be found in all the world. And that failure is not only claimed by the friends of prohibition, but admitted by the advocates of the present system. The striking editorial appearing in The Vancouver World recently is an evidence of that. The World is a supporter of the Government and was an advocate of the Moderation Act when it was being voted on, and yet the following is a typical paragraph from the editorial in question:

"Calculations show that bootleggers in this Province handle as much liquor as the Government stores. Where do they get it from? The answer is obvious. While our own law enforcement officials are helping bootleggers defy the prohibition laws of Alberta and United States, they open the way to supply our own whiskey peddlers and rum hounds. Order and good government is set at nought and the profits which ought to go to the Government to be expended for public purposes go to enrich the bank accounts of the bootleggers and their friends."

And this situation against which the World complains so bitterly, and which it demands shall be improved, has been growing steadily worse, and there seems very little likelihood of any radical improvement. This may not be the inevitable result, but it looks very much as if it were.

Yes, prohibition may have its limitations, or even its evils, but everything would seem to indicate that as a method of getting rid of the wrongs and crimes and follies of liquor drinking it hasn't anything like either the limitations or the evils of any other system. Admitting, as many modern reformers are quite willing to do, that prohibition is not a matter of abstract morals, it can be claimed, and is claimed in the most positive way, that as a matter of social welfare and the elimination of social evil, it has every possible argument in its favor.—Christian Guardian.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The fact that the pound sterling is now $4.56 in New York should give Americans some cause for thought. It indicates the great decline of the United States export trade.

It is nice to know that Canada has enough fuel for 50,000 years, but most Ontario folks would be satisfied if they had enough to last them three months.

The secretary of the Ontario Motor League declares that at least five per cent. of the drivers in this province are not fit to be at the wheel. At least he cannot be accused of extravagant statements.

Canadian members of Parliament must feel grateful that nothing more deadly than the newspapers takes a shot at them.

J. J. Morrison's statement that Ontario is trying to enforce prohibition with a club rather than by the use of moral suasion may not be welcomed in some quarters, but the U. F. O. secretary was dead on the target nevertheless.

Gabrielle D'Annunzio is reported critically ill. Judging from his recent attack upon the British Empire, the trouble must be a mental condition.

The Los Angeles "hammer murderess" is reported to be headed for Mexico. They should let her go, for they have their own method of dealing with such people there.

HER HEART SKIPPED EVERY THIRD BEAT

Mrs. James Burleigh, 248 King St. E., Chatham Ont., writes:—"I think it my duty to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me.

I suffered for years with palpitation of the heart, my nerves were very bad, and I could not be left alone at any time. I doctored for over a year, and the doctor said my heart was very bad as it skipped every third beat.

I gave up, just at this time, and then my mother advised me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, saying my eldest brother had been relieved by using them when he was very bad with his heart and nerves. I got a box and started to take them, and when I had used it I felt a lot better; could sleep a little and felt stronger. I continued taking them for about three months, and felt better than I had for years.

When I think of the misery and suffering I went through before I started Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I feel like letting everyone know what they did for me."

BRITAIN PROFITS BY EXPERIENCE OF U.S.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Great Britain has gained in broadcasting experience through the lessons brought to her by the United States.

So says A. P. M. Fleming, manager of the research and educational department of a Manchester broadcaster, who has come to this country to study the radio situation here.

"We have learned many valuable lessons from the broadcasting experience of the United States," says Fleming. "One of the things we have learned is to avoid the establishment of innumerable radio stations, with no plan of co-operation between them. Eight stations will be located in the principal cities of the British Isles and will be operated so as to eliminate the chaos usually found where no rules are in force.

"Great Britain will solve the interference problem and regulation. Manufacturers of radio apparatus have co-operated with the government in working out plans for the proper control of broadcasting."

THERE MAY BE LIFE ON VENUS

Scientist Declares Planet is Comparable to the Earth.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—(Associated Press)—The existence of life on the planet of Venus may be considered highly probable, Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Observatory, said in a recent lecture here. He added that the question of life on Mars was controversial, but that its small mass and its great distance from the sun counted heavily against the probability of life there.

"Venus," he said, "is comparable to the earth in many ways, and if, as is likely, living organisms develop wherever conditions are suitable over a sufficient interval of time, then it may be considered that life on Venus is highly probable. On no other bodies in the solar system, however, are conditions at all favorable for the existence of protoplasm."

Dr. Shapley said that accepting the tidal evolution theory of a planetary system even for stars otherwise favorably located, an encounter of just the right sort with another star was necessary for the birth of a planetary system.

"And once such a family is born" he continued, "other stars must not disturb the family, and the star's light intensity must remain essentially uniform for the enormous interval of time required for the crustal evolution which must precede animate origins.

"Nevertheless, it appears probable that among the thousands of millions of stars there are here and there planets that conform to the requirements. Although the animal man is probably not duplicated in the universe, there are doubtless numerous other living earths, and the chance that their life phenomena surpass in intricacy and 'highness' those on the earth is as good as the chance that they fall below our level."

The search for habitable worlds, he said, was largely a search for conditions suitable for the existence of water in a liquid form. This, he added, was an absolute necessity for the development of life such as that on the earth, and a definite chemical constitution for air, land and water was necessary. A planet's days and nights, therefore, must not be so long as to prevent the existence of water in a liquid form.

"It seems certain" he said "that some water exists on Mars at times in a liquid form. The average astronomical opinion is that low forms of organisms may exist on Mars, that high forms are very improbable and that beings physically comparable with man are absolutely impossible."

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A. A. MILNE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Who had shot and killed the ne'er-do-well

ROBERT ABLETT, within two minutes after his arrival at The Red House, the country estate of his wealthy bachelor brother,

MARK ABLETT? Robert's body was on the floor of the locked office, Mark was missing and, in the opinion of Inspector Birch, it was clear that Mark, who had looked forward with annoyance to the return of his brother from Australia, had shot Robert and then disappeared.

But there were mysterious circumstances. The shot was fired a few moments before

ANTONY GILLINGHAM, gentleman adventurer and friend of

BILL BEVERLEY, one of Mark's guests, had entered the hall where he found

MATT CAYLEY, Mark's constant companion, pounding on the door and demanding admittance. The two men enter the room through a window and find the body.

Antony and Bill have decided that Cayley knows more of the crime than he will disclose. They discover a secret passage from the bowling green to the house and, in Cayley's absence, try to find an opening to it in the library.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"We shall have to take every blessed book down," Bill said, "before we can be certain that we haven't missed it."

Antony's pipe was now going satisfactorily, and he got up and walked leisurely to the end of the wall opposite the door.

"Well, let's have a look," he said, "and see if they are so very frightful. Hallo, here's your 'Badminton.' You often read that, you say?"

"If I read anything."

"Yes." He looked down and up the shelf. "I like books of travel, don't you?"

"They're pretty dull as a rule."

"Well, anyhow, some people like them very much," said Antony reproachfully. He moved on to the next row of shelves. "The Drama. The Restoration dramatists. You can have most of them. Still, as you well remark, many people seem to love them. Shaw, Wilde, Robertson—I like reading plays, Bill. There are not many people who do, but those who do are usually very keen. Let us pass on."

He went to the next shelf, and then gave a sudden whistle. "Hallo, hallo!"

"What's the matter?" said Bill rather peevishly.

"Stand back there. Keep the crowd back, Bill. We are getting amongst it. Sermons, as I live. Sermons. Was Mark's father a clergyman, or does Mark take to them naturally?"

"His father was a parson, I believe. Oh, yes, I know he was."

"Ah, then these are Father's books. 'Half-Hours with the Infinite'—I must order that from the library when I get back. 'The Lost Sheep,' 'Jones on the Trinity,' 'The Narrow Way, being Sermons by the Rev. Theodore Ussher'—hal-lo!"

"What is the matter?"

"William, I am inspired. Stand by." He took down the Reverend Theodore Ussher's classic work, looked at it with a happy smile for a moment, and then gave it to Bill. "Here, hold Ussher for a bit."

Bill took the book obediently.

"No, give it me back. Just go out into the hall, and see if you can hear Cayley anywhere. Say 'Hallo' loudly, if you do."

Bill went out quickly, listened, and came back.

"It's all right."

"Good." He took the book out of its shelf again. "Now then, you can hold Ussher. Hold him in the left hand—so. With the right or dexter hand, grasp this shelf firmly—so. Now, when I say 'Pull,' pull gradually. Got that?"

Bill nodded, his face alight with excitement.

Bill pulled.

"Now just go on pulling like that. I shall get it directly. Not hard, you know, but just keeping up the strain." His fingers went at it again busily. . . .

Antony pushed the shelves back, extracted Ussher from Bill's fingers, replaced him, and then, taking Bill by the arm, led him to the sofa and deposited him in it. Standing in front of him, he bowed gravely.

"Child's play, Watson," he said; "child's play."

"How on earth—"

"Oh, my dear Bill!" He smoked silently for a little, and then went on. "This passage has been here for years, with an opening at one end into the library, and at the other end into the shed. Then Mark discovered it, and immediately he felt that everybody else must discover it. So he made the shed end more difficult by putting the croquet-box there, and this end more difficult by—" he stopped and looked at the other—"by what, Bill?"

THE WHOLE ROW OF SHELVES SWUNG GENTLY OPEN TOWARD THEM.

But Bill was being Watsonish.

"What?"

"Obviously by re-arranging his books. He happened to take out 'The Life of Nelson' or 'Three Men in a Boat,' or whatever it was, and by the merest chance discovered the secret. Naturally he felt that everybody else would be taking down 'The Life of Nelson or 'Three Men in a Boat.' Naturally he felt that the secret would be safer if nobody ever interfered with that shelf at all. When you said that the books had been rearranged a year ago—just about the time the croquet-box came into existence—of course I guessed why. So I looked about for the dullest books I could find, the bookes nobody ever read. Obviously the collection of sermon-books of a mid-Victorian clergyman was the shelf we wanted."

"Yes, I see. But why were you so certain of the particular plade?"

"Well, he had to mark the particular place by some book. I thought that the joke of putting 'The Narrow Way' just over the entrance to the passage might appeal to him. Apparently it did."

Bill nodded to himself thoughtfully several times. "Yes, that's very neat," he said. "You're a clever devil, Tony."

"Well, come on, then," said Bill, and he got up.

"Come on where?"

"To explore the passage, of course."

"Suppose we find Mark?" said Antony quietly.

"I say, do you really think he's there?"

"Suppose he is?"

"Well, then, there we are."

Antony walked over to the fireplace, knocked out the ashes of his pipe, and turned back to Bill. He looked at him gravely without speaking.

"What are you going to say to him?" he said at last.

"How do you mean?"

"Are you going to arrest him, or help him to escape?"

"I—I—well, of course, I—" began Bill, stammering, and then ended lamely, "Well, I don't know."

"Exactly. We've got to make up our minds, haven't we?"

Bill didn't answer.

"You know, you can't just say, 'Oh—er—hallo!' to him," said Antony, breaking rather appropriately into his thoughts.

Bill looked up at him with a start.

"Nor," went on Antony, "can you say, 'This is my friend Mr. Gillingham, who is staying with you. We were just going to have a game of bowls.'"

"Yes, it's dashed difficult. I don't know what to say. I've been rather forgetting about Mark." He wandered over to the window and then turned back to his friend.

"All the same," he said, "you wanted to find the passage, and now you've found it. Aren't you going into it at all?"

Antony took his arm.

"Let's go outside again," he said. "We can't go into it now, anyhow. It's too risky, with Cayley about. Bill, I feel like you—just a little bit frightened. But what I'm frightened of I don't quite know. Anyway, you want to go on with it, don't you?"

"Yes," said Bill firmly. "We must."

"Then we'll explore the passage this afternoon, if we get the chance. And if we don't get the chance, then we'll try it tonight."

"Do you really think we might find Mark hiding there?" asked Bill.

"It's possible," said Antony. "Either Mark or—" He pulled himself up quickly. "No," he murmured to himself, "I won't let myself think that—not yet, anyway. It's too horrible."

CHAPTER XVI

IN the twenty hours or so at his disposal Inspector Birch had been busy.

The discovery of Mark was all that mattered immediately. Dragging the pond might not help toward this, but it would certainly give the impression in court tomorrow that Inspector Birch was handling the case with zeal.

He was feeling well-satisfied with himself, therefore, as he walked to the pond, where his men were waiting for him, and quite in the mood for a little pleasant talk with Mr. Gillingham and his friend, Mr. Beverley. He gave them a cheerful "Good afternoon," and added with a smile, "Coming to help us?"

"I wish you luck. But I don't think you'll find much at the pond. It's rather out of the way, isn't it, for anybody running away?"

"That's just what I told Mr. Cayley, when he called my attention to the pond. However, we shan't do any harm by looking. It's the unexpected that's the most likely in this sort of case."

"You're quite right, Inspector. Well, we mustn't keep you. Good afternoon," and Antony smiled pleasantly at him.

"Good afternoon, sir."

"Good afternoon," said Bill.

Antony stood looking after the inspector as he strode off, silent for so long that Bill shook him by the arm at last, and asked him rather crossly what was the matter.

Antony shook his head slowly from side to side.

"I don't know; really I don't know. It's too devilish what I keep thinking. He can't be as cold-blooded as that."

"Who?"

Without answering, Antony led the way back to the garden-seat on which they had been sitting. He sat there with his head in his hands.

"Oh, I hope they find something," he murmured. "Oh, I hope they do."

"In the pond?"

"Yes."

"But what?"

"Anything, Bill; anything."

Bill was annoyed.

"I say, Tony, this won't do. You really mustn't be so damn mysterious. What's happened to you suddenly?"

NEWS LAKEFIELD AND DISTRICT

Fire Marshal Bishop Inspects Protection Apparatus—Davis-Nicholls Nuptials-Personal News

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 9.—Fire Marshal Bishop of the Provincial House, Toronto, spent a day in Lakefield inspecting the fire protection system and public buildings. On Wednesday afternoon he visited the Public School, and found some changes necessary to ensure better protection. He has allowed a limited time for these alterations to be made, and has so notified the Board of Education. He went over the entire building from basement to attic. He met the village Council at 10 a.m. on Thursday and inspected the fire apparatus and pump under Moore's Mill. He turned in the fire alarm at 11.26 a.m., stating that the fire was in the location of the Rink. At 11.35 min. 46 sec. the engine was placed at the station well, and a one-inch stream 300 feet long was in action, the time from the turning in of the larm being 9 minutes 45 seconds.

Mr. Bishop made several nozle tests in the following order: 1st stream, 1 inch at 90 lbs. pressure; 2nd stream, 1 1-8 inch at 100 lbs. pressure. He then split the 300 feet line, making one 200 and the other 100 feet long, each throwing a three-quarter inch stream testing at 100 lbs. and at 50 lbs. pressure. The time of pumping was 35 minutes. He was well satisfied with the fire brigade and their work, but urged that a proper fire alarm be installed. W. J. Charlton kindly loaned one of his motor trucks to draw the engine up to the station, and was of material assistance to the fire brigade.

On Thursday afternoon, Mr. Bishop visited the Grove School and suggested a few minor improvements.

Fire Chief W. L. Webster, who for the past two years has occupied this position, deserves a great deal of credit for his work. He has had regular practice for the brigade, tests the engine every 24 hours, and sees personally to the fitness for service of the whole equipment. This work is voluntary, is done in the best interests of the village, and is well worth recording, as it means much to every man, woman and child in Lakefield.

Davis—Nicholls.

On Wednesday, Nov. 22, at 8 p.m., the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Nicholls was the scene of a quiet wedding, when their daughter Gertrude was united in marriage to Mr. T. H. Davis, Rev. J. L. MacDonald, of Burke's Falls, officiating.

The bride, who wore taupe Canton crepe and a string of pearls, the gift of the groom, entered the tastefully decorated room on the arm of her father. Immediately after the ceremony a dainty supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Davis will reside at Young's Point.

Miscellaneous Shower.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Garbutt, Lakefield, was the scene of a very pretty event on Nov. 30, when about twenty-five young people gathered for a miscellaneous shower to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis (nee Gertrude Nicholls), of Smith. A beautifully decorated waggon was drawn into the living-room by Master W. Garbutt, nephew of the bride, and presented to the bride. Mr. Davis responded on behalf of himself and his wife, and thanked the young people for the many pretty and useful gifts. An enjoyable evening was spent in games and music, after which light refreshments were served.

COPY OF LOST WILL ORDERED PROBATED.

Original Was Lost During Funeral of Testatrix.

A copy of the last will of Mrs. Margaret Walsh of Douro was accepted and ordered to be probated by Judge Huycke in a recent Surrogate Court action. The original was accounted for up to the time of the funeral of Mrs. Walsh. When the executor, Mr. Richard Walsh, returned from the Indian River Station after the funeral the will could not be found. This necessitated the Surrogate Court action to establish the will from a copy that had been made by Col. Greer of Toronto, son-in-law of the deceased. Judge Huycke upheld the contention of the executor and beneficiaries deciding that the will was lost, and that the copy truly set forth the contents of the orignal. His Honour made an order directing that the copy be probated in lieu of the original. Mr. J. A. O'Brien represented the executor and beneficiaries and Mr. W. F. Huycke appeared for the rest of the family.

PORT HOPE SECURES COAL FOR EMERGENCY

Falls Heir to Seven Tons Originally Consigned to Millbrook.

PORT HOPE, Dec. 9.—This town fell heir to seventy tons of stove coal recently. This coal was sold by a Toronto firm to a Millbrook dealer, but owing to its weight, it could not be taken over the Midland Division. Mayor Curtis arranged for the purchase of the cargo and has turned it over to J. M. Rosevear & Co., to be disposed of in half ton lots for emergency cases only. Having been purchased from an independent company the cost price is much higher and in order to come out even, the price has been fixed at ten dollars per half ton lot.

THE indomitable folk of Northern Ontario deserve your practical sympathy. Remember, eighteen hundred families have been burned out—and must start all over again. These wonderfully rich farms, mines and aggressive young towns will re-build and come back to their own—but it takes time. And in the meanwhile they must live, they must have temporary shelter and there's nobody to give it to them if we don't.

Make Christmas come back again

Picture a Christmas in a nearly bare shack in a burned out town in a Northern winter. Hundreds of children up there, remember. Make a money contribution now and show your northern fellow citizens that the Christmas spirit lives and has a real meaning in Ontario. All they ask is bare necessities—they deserve at least that much.

Now it is up to you—every public spirited citizen and charitable organization. Spare one dollar, five dollars, one hundred dollars or whatever you can. Spare something from your Christmas cheer. Make Christmas up there a little less than a grim tragedy. Remember, not comforts, but bare necessities in the grip of a northern winter, is all that they ask. Send today? Make cheques payable to—

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

One Drop of This Poison Would Depopulate the Earth!

SCIENTISTS have just discovered what, they say, is the most powerful of poisons, a substance of such life-destroying strength that one drop of it is sufficient to kill the entire population of the earth—one billion seven hundred million souls. This toxin is from the bacillus botulinus, which is found in certain spoiled foods.

Drs. Jacques Bronfenbrenner and M. J. Schlesinger of Harvard University announce that they have found that the strength of the botulinus toxin is so great that the infinitesimal dose of 0.00000000000000001 of a cubic centimeter is sufficient to kill the average man. These scientists also estimate that one cubic centimeter is sufficient to kill everybody on earth, with 999,999 parts left over.

Poison produced by the bacillus of botulism is about a million times as deadly as prussic acid, although not so quick in its operation, according to the results of experiments at Harvard Medical School, in which it has been found that a single molecule of the poison may suffice to kill a mouse.

The poison occurs very rarely, but when it does, several persons usually eat it and are killed, so that killings by this poison frequently attract wide attention. Its total mortality in a year is small. The proper heating of food after it is canned kills the germ. If the can does develop the bacillus of botulism, the poison loses much of its deadliness if the food is thoroughly cooked before it is eaten.

"The symptoms of botulism poisoning," says Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner of New York City, "usually take 18 hours to develop, and bear some resemblance to infantile paralysis. There is a paralysis of facial muscles in both diseases. Death follows usually in four or five days. I understand that an anti-toxin against botulism has been developed in Ohio, but it is difficult to use, because the symptoms do not develop until the poison has progressed. The bacillus is not pathogenic; that is, it does not grow up in the human system, but the poison which it has already produced causes death."

While the victims frequently show the symptoms in from 16 to 18 hours, they do not always develop before 36 hours. Weakness, dizziness, headache and nausea first make their appearance. There is difficulty of vision. Patients sometimes see double. The eyelids often droop, and control over them is lost, so that the sufferer can see only by lifting them with his fingers. These effects flow from the attack of the poison on a particular brain centre. Other brain centres become involved. Swallowing becomes difficult. The muscles controlling the voice become paralyzed. The paralysis spreads to the lips, tongue and respiration, and the victim gasps for breath. In the end paralysis of the respiratory organs and the heart becomes complete and there is death.

The Harvard experiments indicate that a single molecule may attack and destroy small groups of cells in the body of a living creature, the destruction of one cell being sufficient to cause death. The experimenters have expressed unwillingness to believe their own results, though apparently verified by the results on many mice.

Previously it had been reported that one-twentieth of a drop of the poison caused death. A single molecule is as small compared to a drop as a drop is compared to the water of New York harbor. If one molecule has the power attributed to it, it would mean that if a gallon of the poison were uniformly mixed in the waters of the ocean, a few drops of water taken from any part of the ocean and injected into the mouse might kill it. It was found that when the solution was so diluted many of the doses contained no molecules of the poison at all, and it was unlikely that any dose contained more than one or two molecules, yet 5 per cent. of the mice injected with the solution developed symptoms of botulism and died.

The germ that produces the poison was discovered by a Belgian investigator, Van Emengem, in 1896. Twenty-three persons had been taken ill after eating ham that had been preserved in brine, and three of them died from the tainted food. Van Emengem was able to isolate the bacillus botulinus, and by using cultures of the germ he was able to produce the same symptoms in animals.

As will be seen from the diagram (multiplied 1000 times), the botulinus bacillus is a large type. Its official description, as given by Dr. Tanner Hewlett, Professor of Bacteriology at King's College, in his book on that subject, is thus: "The organism is a large gram positive sporing anaerobic, slightly motile bacillus, often occurring in pairs or small chains. The spores are small and oval, and generally subterminal. Van Ermengem isolated this anaerobic bacillus in cases of poisoning associated with the consumption of sausages. It has also been met with in forage poisoning—mules—and in certain vegetable products. The symptoms are caused by the absorption of toxin which has a special effect on the nerve centres.

"This bacillus, like others of its kind," according to a writer in The London Sphere, "can only develop in material from which oxygen is excluded, so that a hermetically sealed tin of meat paste is really a happy hunting ground for it to develop in, should some of the spores survive the heating process to which such tins are subjected. One of the difficulties of dealing with the complete sterilization of such tinned commodities is that where the heat of ordinary boiling, or 20 degrees Centigrade for a period of 20 minutes, is considered ample for the destruction of bacilli, the spores or eggs are much harder to destroy, and heat up to 120 degrees Centigrade would be required for the complete destruction of bacillus and spores. Such heating might spoil the foodstuff, however.

"In the process of the growth and development of the bacillus, changes are induced in the media in which they are growing. The product of such changes is called the 'toxin,' the poisonous properties of which constitute the danger to animal life.

"Formerly it was thought that in the process of decomposition foodstuffs developed certain poisons, and these supposed poisons were given the name of 'ptomaines.' This, however, was proved later not to be so, but that instances of poisoning from food were directly due to the presence of some specific bacillus previously affecting the animal before slaughter, which had escaped destruction in the process of cooking or preparation.

"When a human being or an animal is infected by the toxin of a bacillus, such as the botulinus, the blood instantly mobilizes its forces of resistance, and produces in a short time a serum which is inimical to the particular bacillus. This serum is called 'anti-toxin.' It is really to speed up Nature's work that anti-toxin produced in a horse or other animal is introduced into the system of the patient suffering from toxic poisoning. Besides saving time, it reinforces the natural powers of resistance.

"As to the chances of poisoning by this deadly bacillus, they are at present so few compared with the quantity of preserved food consumed as to be quite negligible as against the widely distributed powers of mischief of the bacillus of influenza or diphtheria, for example."

Dr. M. J. Rosenau of Harvard, in a recent article on botulism, said:

"The high mortality, the distressing symptoms and the relation to food have dramatic news value, and the disease has recently caused concern and alarm out of all proportion to its prevalence. A disease which during its period of 22 years has made only about 150 persons ill and caused the death of 111 among approximately 100,000,000 of people cannot be compared in magnitude to tuberculosis and other public health problems."

Sausages formerly were supposed to be the chief cause of botulism. In the cases of the last few years other foods have been involved, including string beans, cottage cheese, corn, asparagus, ripe olives and spinach. It also has been attributed to turkey, chicken and fish.

HOLLOW LOGS the FIRST RADIO

AS men multiplied, and roving tribes came into being, necessity grew for communication over distances. The original means of communication that nature had provided for man became inadequate, since they were effective only over comparatively short ranges. Although men were separated, they still wanted to express their thoughts to each other. Probably the early uncivilized tribesmen did find some method of "talking" over considerable distances. What these methods may have been is a matter of conjecture. It is known, however, that many of the uncivilized tribes of today have developed ingenious methods of what might be called "wireless" communication.

A traveler returning from the wilds of South America tells how the natives along the Amazon were apprised of his coming several hours before he reached the various villages. This extremely novel method of relaying is described by Raymond Francis Yates and Louis Gerard Pacent in The Complete Radio Book published by The Century Company.

The receiving and transmitting stations of these South American savages are simply large hollow logs. One end of a log is placed in the water and the other end beaten with a club. The vibrations that are set up in the log are imparted to the water, and, since water is a good conductor of sound, they are carried up and down the river for a distance of several miles. The receiving is done with a similar log used as a resonator. The "operator" holds his ear to one end of the log with the other end resting in the water. In this way the delicate vibrations transmitted through the water became audible. By the use of a code, the natives are able to "talk" with each other when they become separated miles beyond the range of the voice.

The American Indians communicated from hilltop to hilltop by the use of smoke. A blanket was placed over a smoldering fire, which allowed a red man to release volumes of smoke at suitable intervals. The smoke clouds produced formed characters of a crude code which carried intelligence to another red man on a hilltop several miles away.

The Indians used another system which was equally ingenious. By beating upon the ground in a certain fashion they were able to set up vibrations that could be detected by trained ears over considerable distances. In receiving such messages the Indian lay perfectly quiet with one ear close to the ground. Each tribe had its own particular code, so that its secrets could not be betrayed to the enemy during war.

HOW the SHARP EDGE of a TOOL CUTS

THE action of cutting tools is a field that has been but little investigated by scientists, notwithstanding the fact that so much of human activity is dependent upon such instruments. However, there are at present in England two committees actively pursuing researches in this field, in addition to private investigators. At the suggestion of the Cutting Tool Research Committee of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, of which Sir John Dewrance is chairman, some experimental studies of a preliminary character have been made recently at University College, London, on transparent bodies subjected to the action of cutting tools, and the double refraction produced by stress has been used to measure the stress distribution in the cut material. These experiments are described in Nature (London) by Prof. E. G. Coker, F. R. S. Similar experiments have also been carried out on some glass-cutting tools used for turning and planing operations.

The photo-elastic method has many advantages over direct experiment on metals, as up to and, in fact, well beyond the elastic limit of the transparent nitro-cellulose used, the stress distribution produced can be measured with considerable accuracy at all points in a disk or flat plate under the action of a tool. The optical effects give, at once, a measure of the difference of the principal stresses at a point, the lateral contractions afford a measure of their sum, and the isoclinic lines map out the directions of the stresses. Existing literature shows how very difficult it is to obtain similar information from the metal itself when under the action of a tool. Since the distributions are similar up to the elastic limit of each material . . . there are obvious advantages in a study of the characteristics of cutting tools by these means.

The general phenomena observed when a tool is cutting is shown when a steel tool is planing a plate of nitro-cellulose in a circularly polarised field of light. It will be observed that color bands spring from the cutting edge of the tool and curve round in approximately circular arcs to meet the boundary, indicating the existence of variable radial compression stress in the area in front of the tool, and a similar state of tensional stress behind it. Measurements of the principal stresses and their inclinations show that this is approximately what obtains, and a very fair idea of the stress conditions in the material can be obtained from the photograph if radial lines are drawn in all directions from the point of the tool to intersect the color bands. The outer bands pass through all points at which the stress is 1150 pounds per square inch, for the sharply defined boundary between the purple and the blue, and the succeeding ones reckoning inwardly mark stresses of twice and three times this value. The fourth band indicates possibly a somewhat different stress intensity than its numerical order warrants, owing to its close proximity to the black area in which intense plastic stress is developed at and near the cutting edge of the tool. An interesting feature is the partial recovery of the material, for the black area is met with only at this place. The shaving again shows brilliant color effects after it has finally left the tools, but later becomes obscured, again owing to the further curl developed due to contact with the parent material.

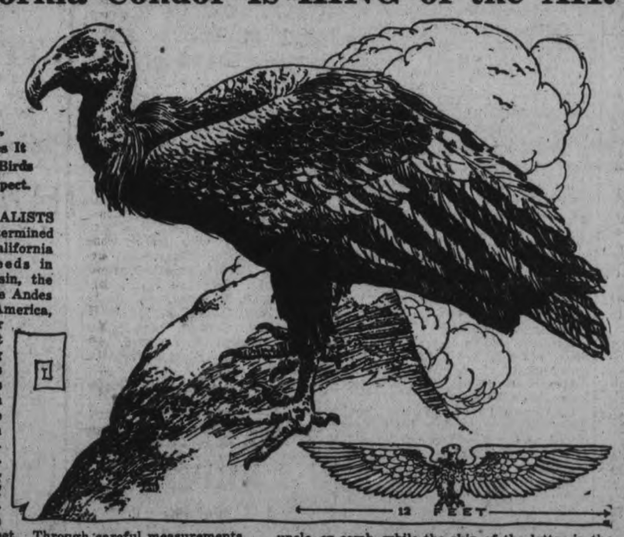
Careful measurements show, however, that the actual state of stress, excluding the plastic field, is somewhat more complicated. The stress is never quite radial, and the isoclinics are therefore not straight lines, but are always curved somewhat, which shows a set of isoclinics obtained from a disk of about six inches in diameter when subjected to the action of a turning tool with a somewhat acute cutting angle. The lines of principal stress confirm this, and the calves of the minor principal stresses appear to be small in the cases examined so far. . . . The angles are measured from the radial black brush dividing the tension from the compression area. The position of this latter brush depends on the cutting angle of the tool, and also upon its rake and clearance, but investigation has not proceeded far enough as yet to define accurately the influence which each element has upon its position.

A somewhat remarkable change from these conditions is produced when the cutting edge is not so perfectly sharp as it is possible to make it. It then becomes apparent that the shaving is no longer cut from the main body, but is broken or torn away by the continual forcing of a wedge between the shaving and the main body of material, after the latter has once been penetrated.

California Condor Is KING of the AIR

The California Condor Has a Wing Expanse of Nearly Twelve Feet, Which Makes It Greatest of Birds in This Respect.



NATURALISTS have determined that the California condor exceeds in size its cousin, the condor of the Andes of South America, and is larger than the giant or wandering albatross which travels the ocean lanes of the Pacific, south of the equator. The extreme wing expanse of the California condor is close to 12 feet. Through careful measurements, the naturalists learned that the condor of the southern countries is smaller in all respects.

One of these largest birds that fly is on exhibition in the Natural History Museum at San Diego, Cal. Beside the condor, the turkey buzzard, a smaller relative, appears to be a dwarf. Both birds are carrion eaters, a fact which has contributed substantially to the near-extinction of the condor. Naturalists of earlier years record that the condor was once fairly common in California.

Ranchers and settlers have been indirectly responsible for the killing of many condors through the placing of poisoned meat intended for consumption of coyotes, bobcats and panthers. Large numbers have also been wantonly killed through the indiscriminate use of firearms.

The head and neck of the condor are destitute of feathers, and the former, which is much flattened above, is in the male crowned with a caruncle, or comb, while the skin of the latter in the same sex lies in folds forming a wattle, dilatable at pleasure. The adult plumage is of a uniform black, with the exception of a frill of white feathers nearly surrounding the base of the neck, and certain wing feathers which, especially in the male, have large patches of white. The middle toe is greatly elongated, and the third but slightly developed, while the talons of all the toes are comparatively straight and blunt, and are thus of little use as organs of prehension. The female, contrary to the usual rule among birds of prey, is smaller than the male.

The condor's favorite haunts for roosting and breeding are at elevations of 10,000 to 16,000 feet. There, during the months of February and March, on inaccessible ledges of rock, it deposits two white eggs, from three to four inches in length, its nest consisting merely of a few sticks placed around the eggs.

Just Why Music Makes a Dog Howl

A DOG doesn't howl at music as such, but at a medley of noises which are to him so discordant as actually to "set his teeth on edge." What is called "music" is only, after all, a succession of sound waves so arranged that their vibrations strike the ears in harmonious rhythm. All ears, however, are not fashioned alike.

When two tones sufficiently near in pitch are struck together, scientists explain, the effect is as though two waves of sound are simultaneously launched at the hearer.

If these sound-waves arrive, as it were, separately, nothing happens; there are heard only two noises. But if they reach the ears as one single wave in which both tones are blended, they are heard as a discord. And if this discord is sufficiently acute, it sets up a vibration which results in the unpleasant "rough" feeling which is described as having the teeth set on edge.

Certain instruments produce vibrations that strike the ears of some quite unmusically. The bagpipes, for instance, sound to many persons as a collection of hideous discords. It isn't that the people who don't like bagpipes are not musical—they may enjoy, say, the piano or violin. It is only that their ears are not fashioned to pick up the bagpipe vibrations as a harmony, and so all they hear is a succession of noises, which grate on them.

In the same way, the dog's ears are not attuned to the vibrations of musical instruments. He therefore hears no "music," but only a series of noise-waves which set his nerves all on edge."

Does BREAD Cause DENTAL DECAY?

NEW studies on the decay of teeth have recently been made in the laboratory of the Hygienic Institute of the University of Leipsig. The Scientific American summarizes the results as follows:

Perfectly sound teeth taken from various individuals between the ages of 18 and 55 years were employed in the experiments. Not the slightest flaw was to be found in any of these, not even with a magnifying glass. For the purpose of the experiment each tooth was covered with a layer of wax, in which apertures were then made at one point or another, after which the tooth was immersed in a mixture of bread and saliva, at a temperature of 37 degrees Centigrade.

At the end of a week half of this mixture was removed and replaced by a fresh mixture of the same sort, in order that the condition, as usually present in the mouth, of a mixture of fresh food and saliva, together with decomposition products of former mixtures, might be reproduced as closely as possible. The first traces of caries became manifest in a deeply grooved incisor; softening and discoloration was shown in this tooth even after the lapse of 33 days. At the end of 56 days all the other teeth exhibited signs of softening, while completely developed caries was exhibited in all at the end of 124 days.

The caries was produced at the selected points, whether these were covered with enamel or were at the "neck" of the tooth. Strange to say, the common belief that marmalades and similar sweets are largely responsible for the spread of caries was not confirmed, while mixtures of bread, saliva and marmalade produced caries in about the same length of time as the first mixture (of bread and saliva alone), teeth placed in mixtures consisting only of marmalade and saliva showed no alteration even at the end of 61 days. It appears, therefore, that both the preformed acid and the traces of natural fruit acids of the marmalade are without effect in the production of caries.

Old Boys' Re-union.

The following poetry was received from an Hastings old boy, Lee Insley, of Rochester, N.Y. Lee would like to see an old boys' and girls' re-union for 1923:

Many call it a quaint old village,
I didn't live in the town,
"Raised" out in the hills of Percy,
Out the "gravel" dusty and brown,
By Barry's Lake and the Dutch Line school,
Do you ken will the willows a' grow
By Barry's Lake at the swing of the town, on the Campbellford road you know.

'Comes a dream.' 'Midst the day's endeavor,
'Midst ambition's noisome mill,
And again the rein of my world "zig zags"
On the crest of Armour's hill.
For a score of years I have sauntered through dressed up city and plain,
But to-day I have read glad news
That we rally together again.

Glad will I join the rovers, fair village astride the Trent.
To greet the friends of "Auld Lang Syne" astride on fortune bent.
An dbe it spring or summer's wane you send the old home call,
I'll hie me down to Hastings town, the merriest spot of all.

Letters to Santa Claus.

It's a great thing to be a believer—already a few letters addressed to "Santa Claus" have found their way to the post office boxes, with modest requests varying from motor cars to doll's carriages written by young innocents. Santa may not have enough motor cars to go around but we'll hope that there will be no disappointment about the smaller vehicles

GOSPEL OF GLADNESS AND BILLY MATHESON.

Enjoy God While You Are Serving Him, Says the Noted Evangelist.

The Globe of St. John, N.B., published some time ago a fine appreciation of Billy Matheson from the pen of Rev. J. J. McCaskell, Presbyterian minister of St. Matthew's Church. Mr. McCaskell writes:

"Much of the popular Christianity is mere seriousness; that is, simple sleepliness exposed in public view. Billy Matheson preaches what has almost come to be a new Gospel—enjoy God while you are serving Him. He has stated this is the Bible and the Shorter Catechism. He has taken it from these half-forgotten and neglected works and incarnated it in his life.

"But with all his joy in religion, he is not lacking in sincerity. His sincerity is pellucidly palpable. He is even sincere in the exactness with which he works his way from stage to stage in his exposition of Scripture passages; sincere in his belief that the great secret of human misery is sin, and that the only way of curing sin is to convert the sinner—even the shabby and sinful sinner may come with the others—he summons all to their heritage in a kingdom that was formerly the exclusive possession of a chosen people.

"He is a great preacher like John the Baptist or one of the early prophets, who with words too passionate for artifice and too fiery for affectation, advanced the propaganda of universal citizenship. Like Paul, he owes his conversion to a vision, a seraphic revelation, a voice from heaven, a strange dream or mystery; unlike Paul, he had an indifferent background in letters and philosophy from which to project his new experience. This may have been a disadvantage, but if it was, twenty years of study and preaching has done much to overcome it. With a sort of sacerdotal joy he turned to the Bible, and found its truths as refreshing as if they had but yesterday welled forth from a living human breast. He has proved again that the ancients were true when they said regarding the Book: "There is none that hath made an end of learning it, there is none that will ever find out all its mystery, for its wisdom is richer than any sea, and its words deeper than any abyss." And how he does preach! Summoning to richteousness, arousing enthusiasm, recreating visions of the living Jesus, and doing it all in the most natural, vivacious, animated way. There is no man in any pulpit to-day, as far as I am aware, who is more completely saturated with the poetry and vision of the Bible. He proves again that Christianity is built on the simple faith of simple souls."

Mr. Matheson will continue his effort all through December to enlist the Christian people of Peterborough in the work of the Kingdom of God. He preaches every night in the Bethany Tabernacle. All are invited to come and receive the blessing which God is waiting to give every penitent and trustful life.

DANCE A SUCCESS

A larg number attended, despite a little inclemency of the weather, the second dance of the 12 o'clock club Thursday evening. Everyone reports a very enjoyable evening. Leonard's 5-piece orchesta supplied the music. The fact of having such a good orchestra, so near at hand has helped greatly toward making these social evenings possible. The special attraction of "Lucky Number" Dance, broke up the steady night's dancing and was the occasion of a little speculation as each holder of a ticket was sure his was the lucky number. The reward for the dance was a handsome box of chocolates which fell to Mr. Clifford Cassana.

The next dance was announced for Thursday evening, January 11th. The National Anthem brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

Personal Mention.

Mr. George Weston, of Toronto, is visiting at the home of his brother, Mr. Fred W. Weston.

Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Hinton, of Hastings, attended the temperance meeting in the Opera House last evening.

HAMILTON, Dec. 9—(Canadian Press). — Slashing his throat this morning about six o'clock just after rising from bed, Paul Helmer Persson died in General Hospital, near which he lived, Persson was clerk in an uptown candy store and worry over Christmas rush of business is given as motive for his suicide.

Dublin Looks for Additional Executions — Desperate Men Abroad.

LONDON, Dec. 9. —(Canadian Press).—Expectation that yesterday's executions in Dublin will be followed by further shootings is expressed to-day by some of Dublin despatches to London newspapers. They are convinced that chain of reprisals will continue.

Daily Mail states that there are at least one hundred desperate men in city who having no care for their own lives, will follow requests of their leaders and endeavour to assassinate members of government and of Irish Parliament.

Authorities have in custody several leading Republicans including Tom Hales, brother of Sean Hales shot dead Thursday, Michael Kilroy, Sean Russell and Tom Maguire who were captured under circumstances bringing them within scope of proclamation prescribing summary trial and execution for persons found with firearms, explosives, etc.

CHRISTMAS WRAPPING.

A "poinsettia" bag of red crepe paper will make an effective holiday wrapping for the fruit cake, the candy box or the other gift which, because of its roundness, is difficult to tie.

Found the Body of Concert Singer in Cellar of Home

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 9.—Responding to an anonymous telegram call, Paterson police found the body of Miss Evelyn Mabel Rainbow, a concert singer, on the floor in the cellar of her home. She had been shot twice through the heart. Nearby lay Harry Harter, a widower, who boarded at the Rainbow home, dangerously wounded He had been shot in the right temple and under the heart. Harter was removed to a Paterson hospital in a dying condition.

A note, evidently written after he had shot and killed Miss Rainbow, was found near Harter's body. It read: "Goodbye, Give my watch and ring to David, my son. I am asking his forgiveness for the deed which I have done. I am taking the one with me who broke my heart and drove me to this." It was signed H. Harter.

Miss Rainbow had conducted a music studio at her home since returning from a concert tour in Europe nine months ago.

FITTING CEREMONIES

see the workings of the Salvation Army. He then presented to Commissioner and Mrs. Sowton a gold plated key, the master key to open every door in the Temple.

The financial report was presented by Brigadier Jennings, and showed that of the cost of $25,375 for the whole building, $14,365 was still an outstanding debt. Over $2,000 of this had been promised, and would be available later, and to-day's tag day will also help to cut down the debt

In a closing address by commissioner Sowton he told briefly of the efforts that led up to the construction of the Young People's Temple and of the beneficial work he hoped would be accomplished there. At first, he said, there had been some question at headquarters about granting the large sum needed for the construction of the building, on account of the many buildings that are needed in all parts of the Dominion, but since viewing the building he had been agreeable surprised with the results.

The meeting was closed with the Doxology and a benediction pronounced by Commissioner Sowton.

Over Forty Rooms

The Temple as it now stands contains over forty rooms and is well and conveniently planned for the work to be done there. It is well equipped with all facilities, not only for religious instruction but also with gymnasium and music rooms for both boys and girls. An excellent heating and lighting system has been installed.

The ground floor is occupied by the Sunday School assembly room for the junior classes with the class rooms and sewing rooms at the sides. This part of the building is also furnished with a well equipped kitchen. Adjoining at the back is the boys recreational hall with gymnasium equipment, library and magic lantern.

On either side of the door at the Aylmer street entrance, are the music rooms for the boys on one side and the girls on the other, and immediately above them are six rooms where the caretaker of the building lives. A good Samaritan room is also provided here for the use of any who may happen to be without a place to sleep for the night. The girl's recreatioal room is also on this floor.

A large room has also been provided for the band, with lockers for their music and instruments. This room is immediately behind the main auditorium.

The auditorium itself has been entirely rebuilt and is capable of seating a large audience. It has a commodious balcony, which can also be used. The whole is very simple and tastefully decorated, and is a building that the local corps may well be proud of.

ENGINEERS DISPUTE CAUSE OF TRENT POWER TROUBLE IN JULY

Hydro and Canal Department Blame Each Other at Enquiry By Gregory Investigating Committee —Division of Grant Explained.

OVERSOLD POWER.

TORONTO, Dec. 9.—An engineering dispute, arising out of the water shortage on the Trent Valley Canal, between Chief Engineer Gaby, of the Hydro-Electric Commission, and Graham Bell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals for the Federal Government, was the feature of the morning session of the Gregory Investigating Commission at the Parliament Buildings.

Although automatic gauge levels on the Hydro water gates showed a depletion of water from Rice Lake, Mr. Bell insisted that last summer's power shortage was due to water wastage by the Hydro.

G. T. Clarkson, auditor for the Provincial Commission was the first witness. The Commission sought to trace an alleged "diversion" of $1,700,000 from the Central Ontario plant to other general projects under the Hydro system. Mr. Clarkson would recommend that the diversion go through Government channels.

"I want to say this," said Mr. Clarkson. "The Hydro Electric Commission is doing its very best to keep within its appropriations. It is doing as well as can possibly be done when the magnitude of the work is concerned. No one could do better."

Commissioner Haney: "It can't be said it was a common fund?"

Mr. Clarkson: "No, every account is earmarked." His firm had reported the diversion to the Government and it had been argued to try them in that they had not objected to the transfer. Since then provision had been placed in the Act to meet the situation.

"Wrongful."

Chairman Gregory considered the diversion "wrongful" and asked who had signed the cheque.

Mr. Clarkson — "It might have been any one of several officers or members of the commission."

Commissioner J. A. Ross—"Sir Adam said the diversion was a result of the fact that the Government would not give adequate financial aid when construction was going on."

Mr. Clarkson said that construction work could not be definitely estimated, "but honest efforts are being made to keep within their appropriation."

Mr. Gaby stated that the commission passed a minute and sent a recommendation for further funds to the Government and that records were kept showing returns to the Government not expended.

"The Hydro is doing exceedingly well," said Mr. Clarkson. "I must repeat that no one could do better."

R. A. Ross—"They had a bank balance against which they drew for all works. They did not know until the end of the year exactly where each system stood. It is a common fund. I have always maintained that."

Mr. Clarkson—"That's right."

"Business Sense."

J. A. Ross—"That is contrary to the act, Mr. Ross."

R. A. Ross—"It's not. It's common business sense."

Mr. Gregory—"The Government knew this and did not object to such diversions?"

"The Hydro received no objection from the Government," said R. C. Peardon, chief accountant. "Since the amendment to the act, of course, we do not make diversions. All appropriations are kept separately now. Formerly we used common funds and balanced at end of the year, which shows where the money was used."

Mr. Gregory—"If I had several clients I could not divert their money from one thing to another."

"But they would be separate units, not one large undertaking," countered Mr. Peardon.

Mr. Clarkson denied a published statement that he had knowingly allowed the $1,700,000 diversion to go through.

Deputy Minister's Evidence.

Graham Bell stated that complaints had reached him in Ottawa in connection with the shortage in water for the Central Ontario system. "Of course, we had to look after navigation and other things as well," he said. It was decided to call in an independent engineer, Henry Holgate, of Montreal. He could not suggest any changes. And we did not hear anything more until this spring when we removed some stop logs. Mr. Holgate was again sent up and again sustained the Government," said witness. "The delay trouble, in my opinion, is that Sir Adam oversold his power, and when the 'peak' came he had not sufficient water."

Mr. Gaby asked how he came to this conclusion.

Mr. Bell—"Sir Adam said so in my office."

Mr. Gaby—"Not at all."

Mr. Bell—"I have also had it from my own engineers."

"Taking the normal conditions after Rice Lake was used, we did not need to depend on rainfalls to take care of the demand. I do not place much faith in such statements unless they are backed up by facts. I think Sir Adam was misunderstood. The records will speak for themselves," said Mr. Gaby.

Market Fell Off.

Mr. Gregory—"Why did you shut down your pulp mill on the system. Shortage of power?"

Mr. Gaby—"No, the market for pulp wood fell off and we could not sell it at a profit."

Mr. Gaby stated that the Rice Lake level had been "pulled down." It was admitted by Federal engineers that it had gone down 10 inches. Automatic gauge records held by the Hydro show other losses in Rice Lake levels not admitted by the Government. Federal officials claimed that the discharge of water through the Hydro plant caused the lowering of the water. "The official records do not show that," said Mr. Gaby.

R. A. Ross—"If the Federal Government had have given you a tenth of an inch on Rice Lake in July there would not have been any shortage?"

"Quite right."

Federal officials claimed that the Hydro had heavy rainfalls to help them out but the weather reports showed less than average rainfall for the past 53 years.

Earlier, while Mr. Bell was being questioned as to the Trent Valley power shortage, Chairman Gregory asked a pertinent question.

Business of Pleasure?

Mr. Gregory—"Don't you think navigation of pleasure boats should be secondary? There is a lot of water used in putting them through the locks that could be used for power.

Mr. Bell—"That is a matter of Government policy."

The chairman said that when he visited the district last summer manufacturers were crying for power while water was being used to float American motor boats.

Mr. Bell stated that wastage of water going through the Hydro plant was to blame for the power shortage.

ENGLISH MONEY FOR DOMINION

Will Be Devoted to Industrial and Public Utilities Development.

ST. JOHN, N.B., Dec. 8.— That financial conditions in England are becoming stronger, and that it will not be long before English money will be coming to Canada for industrial and public utilities development was a message brought here by Capt. T. T. McG. Stoker, who was a passenger on the Can. Pac. Steamship Montcalm, which arrived at the port of St. John yesterday from Liverpool. Capt. Stoker explained that the present rate of exchange was the one obstacle at the present time which is forcing English capitalists to refrain from investing in this country, but in the event of it dropping to five per cent. they will quickly grasp every opportunity of doing so.

Conditions in England, Capt. Stoker said, are greatly improved, factories are running full time, and as a result the unemployment situation is better than it has been since the termination of the Great War.

From expressions of opinion heard on all sides, Captain Stoker said it is evident that the people of England are glad at the recent change of the government. He says there is no denying that Bonar Law is very popular and that all are looking to him to succsesfully cope with difficult situations as they arise.

With regard to the Labor party, he pointed out that the extremists are evidently undermining their prestige and destroying the strength of the party.

Emigration to Canada is being greatly discussed throughout England, and Captain Stoker says it is one of the chief topics of interest. The London Times, which is now under the control of Sir Campbell Stuart, formerly of Montreal, is devoting its columns in the interest of Canadian immigration, and in fact all questions of interest to this country. As a result the eyes of thousands of Englishmen are turned towards Canada and much good is bound to result.

Captain Stoker is very optimistic regarding financial conditions in England and feels that Canada will soon derive benefits from them in more ways than one. He considers that a feeling of optimism apparently prevailing on all sides is doing much towards the return of prosperity after a most trying period.

Speaking of the people generally throughout England, Capt. Stoker said they are greatly interested in Canada, and whenever the question is brought up they make numerous enquiries as to Canadian financial conditions; how the people are doing, what the country east and west is like and what the prospects would be for more settlers.

SAY PREMIER RETALIATED AGAINST LABOUR MAN.

Bancroft Not Considered for Compensation Board Because of the Minority Report.

HAMILTON, December 9. — (Canadian Press). — That Fred Bancroft, Labour's representative of the Sutherland Commission, appointed to investigate Hydro radials, was not considered for the Workmen's Compensation Board because he brought in a minority report on the project, was the statement made by George Halcrow, M.L.A. for East Hamilton, addressing a mass meeting on the subject of the Hydro radials here last night.

Bancroft was the unanimous choice of the Independent Labour Party for the position on the Board said Halcrow, but following his minority report Premier Drury notified the members of the Labour group that Bancroft's name could no longer be considered for the position.

MONEY LENDING 15 YEARS, LOST NOTHING

This is Record of Civil Service Saving and Loan Society.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press)—Fifteen years in the money-lending business and never lost a cent of either principal or interest—that's the record of the Civil Service Savings and Loan Society. The reports presented at the annual meeting showed that the year ended Oct. 31, 1922, was the most successful in the Society's history. The volume of business and number of members showed marked increases over the previous year's records. Additions were made to the two reserve funds, the usual dividend was declared and a substantial balance carried forward. The Society is now considering a lower rate of interest to borrowers.

The work of H. P. Hill, M.L.A., in promoting the passage of the bill providing for the incorporation of mutual credit societies is warmly commended by the members of such organizations. However, the act has not been proclaimed as yet and so is not in operation.

The Civil Service Savings & Loan Society has re-elected S. Rettie, (Audit Office) President. L. J. Beausoliel, (Naval Service) is now Vice-President and F. S. James (Audit Office) is still Secretary. W. C. Ronson (Finance) A. W. Grant (Interior), and H. Pratt, Public Works) compose the Board of Supervision, while the Board of Administration consists of A. H. Brown, (Audit); P. Marchand, (Interior); H. LeB. Ross (Railways and Canals), and A. D. Watson (Insurance). There is also an Advisory Council of Credit that controls the Society's loaning business and has members in nearly all the Government Departments.

STOMACH TROUBLE "INDIGESTION"
Relieved By
Burdock Blood Bitters

The sufferers from dyspepsia, indigestion or other stomach troubles who has to pick and choose his food is the most miserable of al mankind.

Even the little that is eaten causes much torture, and is digested so imperfectly it does but little good.

Mr. Wm. Kruschel, Morden, Man. writes:—"Some time ago I had quite a serious case of stomach trouble, indigestion. I could scarcely eat anything, outside of some light food, and even then I generally had pains after each meal. I tried many different medicines, but without any improvement, and had almost given up hope of ever being well. A neighbor recommended Burdock Blood Bitters, and after using it a short time I felt much better, so I continued to use it until I was completely relieved. I can honestly say that B.B.B. has done wonders for me after all other medicines failed."

HELP HELPLESS BLIND BABES

A Dominion Charter, without stock subscription, was recently obtained for the establishment in the city of Ottawa, of a Home, Nursery, Hospital and Kindergarten, for the blind under six years of age, free to all from any Province in the Dominion. The late Sir Arthur Pearson, before his death, claimed that "Sunshine Home," at Chorley Wood, England, was "the only home in the Empire for blind babies." It is hoped shortly to have the SECOND in Canada. To this end money is urgently required. Help us with your generous gift. "Lest we forget; Do it now!" Cheques should be made payable to the Canadian Blind Babies' Home Association. Remittances will be promptly acknowledged.

BUILD FORTUNES FOR LUCKY MARYLANDERS

Automobile Tolls For Crossing Bridge Piled Up Huge Dividends.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 9.—(Associated Press).—Twelve years ago the Pennsylvania Railroad gave away an old bridge over the Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace to private interests; the building of a new bridge had made it, apparently, valueless. Automobiles ever since have been crossing the structure in increasing numbers, and the men who got the bridge for nothing in 1910, recently sold it to the State of Maryland for $585,000. And in the 12 years it was in their possession, they pocketed $370,000 in dividends, all in tolls charges collected from motor cars.

When the new bridge made the old one of doubtful use, the railroad company offered it first to the State and then to the county, but without success. If no one accepted it, the company was confronted with the necessity of removing it, which would have been very expensive. So finally the company changed it from a railroad bridge to a highway bridge, and considered itself lucky in finding a group of Maryland men who consented to accept the structure, which originally had cost $2,000,000, as a gift.

The recipients put up $700 to organize a company. Last year the net returns from the bridge were $65,000. The State will continue to collect tolls until 1938, by which date it estimates the proceeds will retire the bonds issued against the purchase price of $585,000.

A SMART BAG FOR A CHRISTMAS GIFT

The diligent needle-woman looks for unusual patterns and attractive ing for unusual patterns and attractive designs for Christmas present, will be pleased with these bags.

With time and patience she may make them of beaded silks— they are not so complicated as they look. The flat purse, dangling from the rack, is especially smart in black moire with cut steel beads.

Jet, cut steel, crystal and iridescent beads are the fashionable varieties, and moire, duvetyn and brocades are the preferred materials.

Bag of fabric with beads for trimming are rather more in favor than those of solid beadwork.

Bags for shopping, sewing or knitting are illustrated, too. These are made of heavy fabrics in plain colors and trimmed with designs in the simplest of embroidery stitches.

The centre bag can be made striking with materials of contrasting colors.

CHRISTMAS TREE

There are a few things to remember in selecting the Christmas tree, one being to get a tree with broad branches that can bear their burden of delights.

The tree should be fastened securely in position. Place a sheet on the floor to hold the box, and then the sheet can be tucked in folds all around the base of the tree. A roll of snow flake cotton is pulled to pieces and put over the sheet, when thus arranged. Diamond dust should be sprinkled on the tree from the top, so that the flakes that do not adhere to the tree will fall on the cotton, making a very beautiful effect. Tinsel ornaments can be purchased for a trifle. Some of the small gifts may be wrapped in a cotton ball, tied tightly with silver thread. The cotton is pulled through a thread, forming a great fluffy snowball, which should be rolled in diamond dust.

THE CRYING NEED FOR PROTECTING THE RACE

Local Branch of Hygiene Council Merits Whole-Hearted Support.

It is to be hoped that the women of Peterborough who heard Mrs. Pankhurst here this week will take a lesson from the venereal diseases book of horrors opened to them, and strengthen the local branch of the National Hygiene Council of Canada with their whole-hearted co-operation. For nothing but organization for actively combatting the dread enemy of motherhood and daughterhood, which stalks the land seeking whom it may devour, will eradicate those deadly diseases resulting from a growing laxity of morals, social unprotection and lack of education.

Urging both men and women to unite in this Social Hygiene Council, an organization for educating society in a knowledge of weapons for fighting this appalling menace, Mrs. Pankhurst quite correctly characterized venereal diseases as the most serious ill of the age. Striking at the root of life itself, they constitute the foulest blot on Christian civilization, and what adequate protection, she asked, has Canada's motherhood and wifehood against the invasion of their sanctity Not a minister, business man, trades man, mechanic or professional man but who is protected, but the God-ordained principle of propagating the human race goes unprotected. What security has the wife that she will not become a permanent invalid immediately after marriage, that she shall be the mother of healthy childhood? And today millions are born without their threefold birthright—to be born physically perfect as they ought to be, as God intended they should be born, and after birth to be supplied with health-promoting environment and training. Fifty per cent. of the blind had their sight destroyed at or after birth by the ravages of venereal diseases; a very large proportion of internal operations on women are due to these dread enemies of the race which poisons life at its beginning; and this great friend of motherhood urges that mothers, discarding their mantle of uncalled-for modesty, should educate their children in the truths of human nature and not leave them to ascertain those secrets from a tainted source. God gave all animate life the knowledge of reproduction, she so truthfully points out, and we alone of God's creatures have broken natural laws by distorting the human race.

In this brief summary of Mrs. Pankhurst's talks here one finds timely warning of the crying need for active Social Hygiene Councils throughout the country. And so, the whole manhood and womanhood of Peterborough—no more exempt from the venereal enemy than other centres—should rise in their might for a crusade to assure a coming race of beings worthy in their purity of the divine origin from which humanity originated. Let us hope that the local branch will be stimulated and strengthened by membership and funds, and that a policy of education on the principle that "prevention is better than cure" will so generally obtain here that the dread of venereal contamination will no longer exist.

NEW WINTER COATS OCCUPY MORE SPACE

Because Many of Them Are Circular and Many More Draped.

The new winter coats fill not only the stage but the busses, streets, elevators, subways and taxicabs. They occupy considerably more space than winter coats have needed for some seasons back.

It's because many of them are circular and many more are draped. Those that are skimpy below the waistline are very billowy above it. Huge collars and cuffs of fur, wide sleeves, full skirts extra long, are other reasons why they loom, as it were, large.

Carpel's hair fleece is the popular material for the fashionable sports coat, with plaid-backed coating a close second. Finer coats are of marvella or bolivia in rich browns, silvery blues or black.

Nearly all winter wraps are fur trimmed and the furs used are caracul, beaver, squirrel, Persian lamb and ermine—either real or imitation.

COSTUME BLOUSE CONNECTS THE TAILORED SUIT TO LATEST STYLE

By Marian Hale

The costume blouse is the link that connects the tailored suit to the present style.

It enables one to have that trim-smart appearance on the street that only a suit can give and to have the effect of a costume when the coat is removed.

There are many variations of this interesting accessory, but the most interesting one is offered by Ethelind Terry, the musical comedy star.

In a creative moment she invented a new design which proved to be so popular with her friends that she has been giving directions for it ever since.

Here's the Secret

This is the way you make it:

Take any popular make of pattern for a plain blouse that is cut for your bust measure. Use one that fits smoothing about the shoulders and has a good neckline.

Cut a duplicate pattern in brown paper of medium weight and quite smooth.

Cut the front and back separately and join under the arm seams and the shoulders.

For a bust measure you will need a full bolt of six-inch ribbon and a bolt of one-inch ribbon of a contrasting color.

On each side of the center front, baste the wide ribbon. Stitch together with the narrower ribbon and tear away the paper foundation.

Making the Sleeves.

For sleeves, cut first the paper pattern, then join the ribbon together as for the front and cut the paper from beneath.

The ribbon should be cut in strips to reach the wrist, but should be joined only to the elbow.

The ribbons which form the blouse should be joined only a few inches below the natural waistline to give the long waist, then allowed to hang loose.

Wherever the joining stops finish with a rosette of the narrower ribbon. The wide ribbon may be picoted on the edge or may fringed.

ETHELIND TERRY SHOWING TWO VIEWS OF THE COMPLETED BLOUSE.

It is possible to get very interesting color combinations with this blouse. Barberry red, with narrow strips of black picot ribbon, is effective. Browns and tans or browns and the popular shades of henna and orange are very attractive.

The neckline may be finished in whatever line is most becoming but the bateau line is most generally becoming. The opening should be wide enough that the blouse may be slipped on over the head.

The belt may be a narrow one of the narrow ribbon or may be a cord matching in color one of the tones of the ribbon.

ABOUT FOOD CUSTOMS IN ENGLAND LONG AGO

Knowledge of Diet Would Have Been Serviceable to Our Ancestors.

Popular comment on food and diet should incite keen interest in what a writer in the Journal of Home Economics says about food customs in old England.

Quite evidently our present knowledge of dietary matters would have been of service to our ancestors:

"William the Conqueror brought a full kitchen force with him to England. A glance at one of his menus makes one feel that his warriors won their battle on the field of Hastings with the meal in prospect, for having once consumed it, there could have been little incentive for aught else. An example of one of his meals runs:

"First course: Boar's head with its tusks in its snout, garnished with flowers.

"Second course: Venison, cranes, peacocks, swans, wild geese, kids, pigs and hens.

"Third course: Spiced and seasoned meat, with wine, red and white.

"Fourth course: Pheasants, woodcocks, partridges, larks, plovers.

"Fifth course: Sweetbreads, white powder (sugar?).

"The peacock was a favorite dish and was often skinned, cooked and then put back in its glowing vestments again. Birds were served in their 'coffyns.' Here we get the evolution of our modern pie. After a joust-at-arms a banquet was often served. Among other foods a peacock, still in its plumage, was placed in a 'coffyn of paste,' the neck erect, tail expanded about the crust, and comb richly gilded. Carried into the hall on a silver dish, heralded by a blast of trumpets, it was placed before some knight, victorious in the day's journey. 'Rising, it was the custom to break the crust, vowing at the same time to rescue some captive lady from some mythical monster or die, though his vow, like the pie crust, was made to be broken.'

"The pastries and loaves of bread were not forgotten. Wine, ale and beer were served in silver cups to those above the salt cellar; those below quaffed their thirst in pewter or in horn. Three hours or more were given over to the feast, while jesters, tumblers, jugglers and minstrels amused the guests.

"Not so much ceremony was manifest among the lesser nobles. But we know that the country franklin was 'Epicurus' own son.'

"Withouten bake mete never was his hous,
Of fish and flesh and that so plentous,
It snewed in this house of mete and drink
Of alle dainties that men coud of thinke.
Woe was his cook but if his sauce were Poinant and sharpe, and redy all his gear.

"The absence of vegetables is noticeable in the dietary. Potatoes were at that time unknown. Cabbages were imported for the next three hundred years. Considering the amount and kind of food served, it is small wonder few lived to reach old age. The poorer folk were better off, albeit their food was limited. The black bread, peas and bacon proved a more balanced ration than that of their aristocratic neighbors. Contrast this living with that of their feudal lords, who breakfasted at 7 on white bread, beef and wine, dined at 10, supped at 4 and between 8 and 9 partook of a 'reve-supper,' an evening collation of bread, ale and spiced wine."

A New Bloomer Dress For Misses

The bloomer dress is a new variety of that species. It's made in one piece with the bib buttoning to the sleeves and the sleeves buttoning to a waistband underneath. The bloomers are detachable since they button to the waistband, too.

The other dress is a quaint little thing with a high-old fashioned yoke Its long sleeves are to be recommended in school dresses for cold weather wearing. Wool crepe is the newest material and navy blue flannel is very popular as well.

LACE CUFFS

Short white gloves with gauntlet cuffs of black lace have been observed recently among gatherings of well-dressed women. The style, which is Parisian, is rather startling, the gloves being worn with sleevless gowns. Black gloves have a white frill in contrast.

STIRS UP THE THOUGHTS EVERY HOLIDAY SEASON

One Simply Can't Escape Playing Santa Claus At Christmas Time.

By MARGARET ROHE.

This is the season of the year when all your thoughts do turn to distant friends and relatives that other times you spurn. The intimate and casual acquaintances untold, and also to all servitors, the ones both new and old. For you must hand out Christmas gifts to each and every one. You simply can't escape it, for it's what you've always done.

There are always divers infants born to friends anew each year. Who says that from race suicide we've anything to fear? You've purchased woolly lambkins and pink piggies by the score, till now they push them at you when they see you in a store.

Happy Last Christmas.

Get out the last-year treasure trove and see what you can find. The gifts received you didn't like—you'll have to bear in mind who gave each one of them to you—then they'll be simply prime to pass along to other helpless victims Christmas time.

The hand-crocheted pajamas and a copy of "The Sheik" will do for dear old grandma. She is getting very weak. There's the pogo stick for grandpa that you gave to Jack last year. The dear child never used it. It may seem a trifle queer since the poor soul's rheumatism has him almost bent in two, but there's nothing else to give him so 'twill simply have to do.

Here's a lovely Batik doily will do for Baby Bess. The Rubaiyat in leather for wee Buddie, and you guess you'll polish up this ash tray and then send it on to Joe. If he doesn't smoke, how ever should you be supposed to know?

The manicure set, hankie case and pin tray which each year ne'er fail in your collection of surprises to appear, should all be promptly ticketed and laid away with care so you can pass 'em all along next Christmas without scare that you will hand them back again to those friends, tried and true, who have proved so very trying by sending them to you.

Just a Mite.

There's a mite of compensation in giving books you choose. You can buy the latest novels, their contents all peruse and the ones you do not like, present to friends most dear.

This is the way to do your reading cheaply for the year. But last year's gifts and well-read books, alas, won't do for all who on your Yuletide-giving list make such an urgent call.

There's the iceman, milkman, postman and garbage man as well, the laundress and the grocer's boy, whom you have got to tell a very Merry Christmas, and remember money talks, so say it then with specie.

They All Belong.

There's the man who cleans the walks, the butcher's boy and paper boy, the cook and furnace man, the firemen and policemen, too, all members of this clan.

Oh, Santa is a merry wag, but I think all the same, St. Nicholas, by far is more appropriate a name. That St. Nick's kin to Old Nick did it e'er occur to you from the way he always puts a nick in us each year anew?

A SUPPLICATION.

Father, oh my arms are stretching
Out towards the infinite light
Somewhere, somewhere thou art calling
But my heart is frail with fright
On my lips I'm only asking
Thou wilt guide my feet aright.
So beset this worldly path is
With the voices of the flesh
And my heart is grown distrustful
Fearing e'er the Evil's mesh,
Only, only am I begging
Mercy Father in thy sight
Only only am I seeking Mercy and thy guiding light.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE.

When a Japanese woman marries she is adopted into the religious cult of her husband's family, this adoption being not only by the living but also by the dead.

Accordingly she must thereafter revere her husband's ancestors as her ancestors.

With the cult of her own family she has nothing more to do and the house rooms are solemnly swept out and the death fire lighted before the grate, signifying this separation.

"Tastes Good on a cold morning doesn't it Son?"

OATMEAL porridge not only tastes good on a winter morning. It is good. In fact, it is the best cold-weather breakfast dish for everyone, because of its heat-producing qualities.

Oats enrich the blood, which carries its sustaining warmth to every part of the system. Analysis and tests prove that oats are more nourishing and invigorating than any other cereal. They are a simple, basic food, vital to children's health and development, because they produce brawn and bone for the growing bodies. They are invaluable as an energizing vim-food for grown-ups.

And of all oats, Quaker Oats are the best.

In Quaker Oats, you get the finest oats in the world. Puny, under-developed grains are sifted away in milling, and only the rich, plump, flavoury queen grains go into the Quaker Oats package. The sealed carton keeps the flaked kernels unbroken, sweet and fresh.

The most welcome and most nourishing breakfast for a cold day, Quaker Oats is also the most economical—actually costing less than one cent per serving.

The Love Trap

by Jack Lait

BIG BEN BLY had just been "sprung" from Atlanta, where a good many of our best Federal offenders go sojourning for the Winter, with now and then a stayover for a Summer or two. Big Ben was a famous money-maker. He made it with a printing press.

For a couple of decades, Bly and his several gangs of counterfeiters had been the bane of Luke O'Malley's professional existence. Luke was in the Government Police, Treasury Department, Secret Service, with a roving assignment. His business it was to send the men who uttered and "shoved" the phony currency into safekeeping.

A bad dollar, like a good one, has no home. It is likely to spring up anywhere. In truth, it springs most likely where it would be least expected, naturally. Nobody has yet put up a counterfeiting plant on the public square, like a peanut stand. There is a certain amount of secretiveness about the operation which can only in part be ascribed to the characteristic diffidence of artists like Big Ben Bly.

Bly could have made a handsome living as an engraver. He was one of the most accomplished free-hand etchers that ever had come to annoy the Department. He could make a bill with pen and ink that would pass a sober teller, and he could do it backward on a copper plate so that its own father, Frank White, whose autograph appears on all the Federal Reserve coupons, wouldn't disown it.

Big Ben's weakness was big currency. He had figured it out that, since it is as easy to forge a crooked fifty as it is to turn out a "queer ace," the ratio of probabilities made it mathematically more profitable to print up the big boys. That the higher denominations underwent more penetrating scrutiny was a minor consideration; Bly took a certain esoteric pride and academic gratification in going over the top of the higher hurdles.

The man was irrepressible, and when the agents throughout the land were notified that he was again at large, none doubted that he was again at it; if, indeed, he had not put in his leisure violating government hospitality at the prison by perfecting a die for future release. Word was sent along that he had taken a train for the north, ticketed to Philadelphia. The deduction was therefore quite clear: he would turn up shortly in New York—or Chicago—or Seattle—or Boston—or Kansas City—or somewhere.

The first scent came from Cincinnati, three months later, when a hundred-dollar yellowback, deposited by a leading hotel, came up a couple of picas off in stacking, and went Democratic under the microscope. The treasury boys whistled and whispered "Bly."

Luke O'Malley left Washington for Cincinnati that night. He quizzed the clerk, bellhops and cashier at the hotel. Currency, usually, may be said to have no identity; each bill has an individual running number, but who ever reads it—and no one, not even banks, ever records one except on a "grand note" ($1,000 bill) or a "ten-grand." But a century comes pretty near to having character.

Even in the marts of the money-changers, anyone offering a hundred-dollar baby will get a glance through the grated window or over the marble counter. Anything above a ten is respectfully taken out of the "bill" class and may be referred to as a William.

The history of the hundred that had turned sour was simple and clear from the main dining-room, where it had bobbed up, to the bank, where it had been turned down. It had been passed by a tall, slender man with dark curly hair, who had paid a dinner check with it. The waiter remembered him well, for the man had remembered the waiter well. O'Malley wet his lips a bit—from the description it appeared that Big Ben Bly had done the "pushing" in person, contrary to his usual system of having confederates to handle the stuff while he remained in the background, content to create.

There had been a young woman with Bly—if it really had been Bly, himself.

This was an altogether new wrinkle.

If there is a blowhole in the most astute, the most airtight, the most hermetic scheme to cheat the law, a woman is that.

And Bly had always thereunto ducked that most obvious of pitfalls. If he was sentimental, it had been manifested only in his love of art. His only known sweetheart was the Pocahontas on the back of the 2B series. What was this stuff—Ben Bly with a peaches-and-cream blonde, as described by the waiter?

Luke O'Malley trailed about such hangouts as he thought might lure Bly. He had never dealt with the man in that town before, and knew no specific points that he would be likely to make—such as every man may be regarded as likely to make, be he counterfeiter or merchant or preacher or loafer. That is the mortal element that makes everyone trackable: a man may be a crook or he may be a professor, but he must be human. And humans have the inalienable urge for company—they want to live where others live, eat where others eat, play and pray and work and lurk and drink and think and gamble and ramble where there are others of their kind.

In Chicago or in New York it would have been an hour's work for O'Malley to dig up Ben Bly; it might have taken weeks to get at his hideaway, but to find the man himself would have been made simple through covering half a dozen spots. But in Cincy it became a job to tackle by elimination, and O'Malley went at it methodically.

Bly's known weaknesses were few. He was not a drinking man, he never frequented cabarets, he had no taste for the "underworld" with its low beaneries and rococo "cafes" where heterogeneous criminals foregathered and mingled in the freemasonry of their common contempt for the code. He was a hound for "class," fell for the select restaurants, usually lived in retirement in one of the domestic suburbs, and had no wild attributes. When he made a fat gob of money (no pun intended this time) he spent it on a tour abroad or invested it in securities. He was a man of some wealth, and was known to have accumulated a competence in gilt-edged bonds.

There stood Big Ben Bly, one fist clenched and aimed at Luke, the other arm supporting a terror-stricken little blonde girl.

So the search was no sinecure. But Luke started after it with the few clues he had and with the added advantage that he knew Bly on sight. He was thrown off by the new feature, the woman, for he figured that all he knew of Bly's habits heretofore might be nothing now, because a man's established habits don't count after he begins taking lovely blondes to dinner.

But even an antelope can't change all of a leopard's spots, so O'Malley fixed on the financial district as the territory where he might be most likely to come up with Bly, who, though he held out most of his residue for solid 6 per centers, would hazard a flyer on speculative stocks, and would be doing a little business with some broker.

O'Malley was right, as usual. In a little luncheon place not far from the heart of the district where the bulls and bears browsed, he caught sight of a familiar back. It was Bly, in earnest converse with a stranger, over a light collation. Luke phoned for a youngster, someone Bly didn't know, and put him on the scent. By two he had a report in his room. The stranger was a broker, probably in no way interested in Bly's way of getting the jack; Bly was entered on the books as a trader with credit up to $10,000, and had been buying and selling industrials; he had paid in checks on the Such-and-Such National Bank, Toledo, and they had cleared without protest; he was listed as having an office in the So-and-So Building, no home address given; his name on the accounts was the same as the one on his checks—B. Z. Benson.

O'Malley sent the operative to find Bly's office and see what went on there. The findings were that Bly occupied a two-room suite, as B. Z. Benson, dealer in stocks and bonds; that he employed a stenographer, an attractive blonde; that there was nothing secretive about the offices, since the scrub-women were allowed to have keys and fuss around there; that Benson usually left about 3 or 4 o'clock each afternoon, never worked nights there. In leasing the place he had given his Toledo bank and his Cincinnati broker as references—no home address offered or asked for.

It was past 5, so O'Malley strolled over to the building and sneak-thieved into the office. He found nothing that rewarded the trip. There were some letters of no significance, a few newspapers, the usual tools of a small private business, and no give-away photographs or memoranda of any nature.

O'Malley strolled out. He stood on the walk, thinking. It wasn't very devious from now on—he would have Bly-Benson shadowed next day when he left the building, and sometime thereafter the man must go to his home—or to his den, wherever it was that he made his spurious certificates. The place would be surrounded, Bly would be nabbed as soon as he came out, he would be "frisked" while the premises were thoroughly searched—and Big Ben would be well on his way back to Atlanta.

As he stood there, a taxi-driver, knocking his knuckles together to warm his hands, pushed an insinuating face toward him and asked "Cab?"

Luke's hotel was within walking distance; but he had learned that a taxi-driver knows things that no other man beneath the big blue dome may ken; so he climbed in, had the fellow run him to the hotel, and tendered him a twenty. Of course, he couldn't change it—so Luke invited him to the cashier's desk. In the warm lobby he paid him off and observed, casually: "You're the driver that Mr. Benson uses, aren't you?" It wasn't as easy as all that. The man didn't know the name. But when Luke described Bly, he asked "The one that takes the good-lookin' blonde home ev'ry night?" Luke nodded.

"That's the one," Luke assured him. "I came from out of town to see him, but he'd left for the day. If I could find out where he lived ——"

"If you'll jump in my car you'll find out. It's just two-twenty's-worth from here."

"I'll do that—but I guess I'll get my chow first. Suppose you call for me about seven-thirty?"

"I'll be at the side door—on the dot, sir."

At that hour Luke had a Government touring car full of Treasury men ready to follow, and he took the cab, which started out of the business region and made straight for a suburb on the hill.

"Don't pull up in front of the door," instructed Luke. "I'd just as soon he didn't know how I found him."

"Me, too," said the driver. "He mightn't like it for me to haul strangers up to his house . . . some people look to a taxi guy to keep what he knows . . . I usually do . . . but you look all right."

It was pitch dark by the time the cab hauled up to a curb. Luke came out and paid the man off, after he had pointed out a two-story-and-attic dwelling half a block ahead. When the taxi drew out of sight the touring car turned the corner.

Luke led the squad to the house. He stationed one at the front and one at the rear door, one under the bay window at the side, one at the exit from the cellar. One he sent up the back stairs, which opened right to the yard, with instructions to jimmy or pass-key his way in as soon as he heard Luke's voice downstairs, indicating that Bly had been drawn down, the purpose of this being to search the upper rooms before Bly might get any remote chance to hide or destroy anything, to touch any buttons or spring any surprises.

Luke, with a handy boy who knew how to use fists, forty-fours and the snap bracelets, walked up the front steps and rang the bell. No answer. He rang again. Not a tumble. There were lights above, and he sensed that someone was home; but a third ring failed to develop anything.

Luke slipped a skeleton key into the front door, which opened, but only to a chain that barred it beyond an inch of aperture. He rang again and got no recognition. So he cut the chain with his heavy snipper, which made a noise that could have been heard a block. He and his man, Farkins, entered into a vestibule and then into a living room. They switched on the lights. Everything about was in ship-shape living order, but no one was about.

"Let's go up," said Luke, loudly, to send in the man upstairs; he knew that if there were anyone in the house his bell-ringings and his chain-cutting had been heard, so there was nothing further to conceal or camouflage. If Bly was in, there was nothing to do now except go after him; if he was out, the place could be gone over and he could be nailed when he arrived.

They drew their revolvers and started up the stairs. They saw nothing of note on the second floor, though a light was on in the hallway, and a superficial rummaging of things yielded no evidence. The third man, Gurley, was just making his entrance, and they almost shot him in the dark. They joined with him and started up into the attic.

There were no lights burning above, and they crawled cautiously around the corner into the long corridor.

Luke threw his spot-lamp about the floor and they saw that there were two doors and two windows, the windows at each end of the passage, the doors both facing them from the head of the stairs.

"We'll open them both at the same time," whispered Luke, "and don't go in—stand out here and shoot in the lights—we'll see what we're up against. This is a tough baby."

"You don't have to snoop," came a heavy voice from the nearer door, "I'm in here."

Luke sprang forward, and, shielding himself with the wall and projecting his hand to the knob, he reached over and threw open the door. Advancing with automatic in hand before him, and with his flashlight high and pointing forward in the other, he crossed the threshold, backed up by Farkins and Gurley, similarly equipped.

There, in a quaintly furnished old garret room, beside a plain board table, stood Big Ben Bly, one fist clenched and aimed at Luke, the other arm supporting a hysterically terror-stricken little blonde girl in a decollette gown.

"Damn you," groaned Bly, "you've hounded me down and ruined my life."

"Oh, come," said Luke. "If you'd behave yourself and keep your hands clean, nobody'd bother you."

"I haven't turned a trick, so help me—not since I come out o'—out o' the Big House."

"No? How about that yellow-back century you shoved at the hotel?"

"Not me. I ain't been in that hotel, I ain't made a wrong dime, I ain't pushed a phony buck since I came back. I never was a shover in my life, and you know it, O'Malley. I don't know what you're talking about."

"What's the squawk, then—if you're all clean?"

"What is it? Oh, nothing much—only I married this girl three days ago, and she don't know a thing on me; I was all set to shoot square and go straight as a sap. And now"——

The girl clung to him, and turned up her pretty eyes to scan his features; she seemed to understand that these were officers of the law, that they had come after her husband, that he was known to them as a criminal, that they suspected him of a crime at that moment—could it really be?

"Oh, come out of it, Bly," sneered O'Malley. "You're too old a dog to change your ways. You couldn't be on the level if you tried."

"You talk like a fool," exclaimed the girl. "I have known Mr. Benson for five weeks. I have found him a thorough gentleman. I was his stenographer. I know just how he makes his living and where every cent came from during that period—we have books that prove it."

"As far as you know, maybe," said O'Malley. "Do you know anything about how he made his money before you became his stenographer?"

"No; stocks and bonds, he told me."

"Good Lord, O'Malley," winced Bly, "you don't have to go into any of this with her. Let me take her to her mother's, then I'll go down to the Federal building with you and your men can turn this house upside down meanwhile."

"Not a chance. I wouldn't believe you, Bly. If there's nothing to turn up here, you've got your plant somewhere else, and while you stall me downtown she'll sneak over somewhere and cover up the dynamite."

"Dynamite?" cried the girl. "Oh, Ben—not a —a safeblower?"

"I mean evidence, Miss—Mrs. Your husband is a counterfeiter—one of the most notorious in this country."

"Ben! Tell me it isn't so!"

Bly dropped his head.

"It isn't, dear," he sobbed. "But it was—before I met you—before I had something to go right for."

The girl began to weep, audibly, visibly, and she curled in and threw her head on Bly's breast. The big fellow quivered, and with shaking hand stroked her head and petted her hidden cheeks.

"Don't cry, honey," he pleaded, brokenly. "I didn't mean to ever tell you, but these bloodhounds couldn't let it be that way. But don't worry—they haven't got anything on me now," and he raised her to her full height. "Come on, O'Malley—take me and her both, if you want to; go through the whole house, too. Take us to whoever fell for that century you talked about—I'm not afraid; I haven't delivered any work, I tell you, since I was sprung."

'All right," said O'Malley. "Come on with me—the girl, I guess, can blow out—or stay here. I'll leave a man on the job to go through the place."

There was a tearful parting. Bly assured his bride again and again that he would soon be back. Gurley was left behind. The others took Big Ben downtown, stopping first at the hotel. The waiter was brought in. He looked Bly over searchingly, then shook his head—No, that wasn't the man; he had never seen this one before—the other one had been heavier—and darker—and——

O'Malley began to sweat. Had he blundered after all? After all his work and all his well-oiled operating? He took Bly to the Department offices. There Gurley telephoned—he had been all over the house and hadn't found any contraband of any nature. The girl? He had left her there.

They had to turn Bly loose. O'Malley felt that maybe he had leaped prematurely—maybe Bly had another place, somewhere, to which it would be very hard to trail him now. But he had nothing on which to hold the man, since no counterfeit money had been found in his pockets, nothing actionable had been discovered in his office or home, and the receiver of the one known bad bill positively acquitted him.

Bly was trailed out of the office, anyway, on a hunch. He went directly to a cottage on the outskirts of the town—ostensibly his mother-in-law's—and soon afterward came forth with his bride and drove to the house on the hill where he had been arrested. There the Secret Service men gave it up in disgust.

If they could have eavesdropped, however, this is what they would have heard:

BLY—Of all the saps, Nellie, that O'Malley takes the brown derby. Say—I could see those dies in your stockings, I swear it, all the time they gabbed.

SHE—The darb was when you passed me the queers while I was sobbing on your bosom.

BLY—Where'd you hide 'em?

SHE—In my hand—clenching the fist goes with my kind of hysterics just like it went with your indignation—what did Joe say when they showed you to him?

BLY—What could he say? Said he never seen me before—gee, he's a smooth liar.

MOTHER OF 3 TAKES POISON IN A HOTEL.

"Mrs. Atrmes" Leaves a Note Saying She "Cannot Stand It Any Longer."

NEW YORK, December 7. — A woman with three children who had registered as "Mrs. Dorothy Atrmes," and who had been for a week at the Hotel Belmore, 61 Lexington Avenue, was removed to Bellevue Hospital yesterday morning when the police found her semi-conscious, and clutching a vial which had contained carbolic acid. Patrolman Barry of the East twenty-second St. Station, found her on a lobby floor, at one of the entrances to the hotel. It is believed that she swallowed the acid there to prevent her infant son whom she left in a room, from getting hold of any poison left in the bottle.

In a letter she had dropped in the lobby marked "Edith" with no address, Mrs. Atrmes said she could "not stand it any longer," and suggested some one for the care of her son. The writer apparently had made careful effort to prevent disclosure of her own identity and that of several persons she mentioned in the message. Part of this letter, which is held by the police, reads:

"Edith, dear, please forgive me, and excuse me for repaying your wonderful kindness to me in this manner. I have tried so hard to keep up but every day it was getting worse. I could not stand it any longer. To think of facing my babies, I can't do it, because it is too terrible. I can hardly write. All afternoon I have been trying to fight it but you can't imagine how hard a battle it is.

"Please go down to Cramon, 15 change Place, Monday morning, and see if you can get some money for Hansi. Then wait until you have heard from my sister to whom I have written. I tried so hard and I love my babies so dearly that I can't bear up. Matthews made it worse and he is probbaly so mad that I don't care to go back. Please don't let Hans take Hansi nor get my trunk as I have all his stuff in there. I have written Cramon that if you don't keep Hansi, my sister is to supervise his boarding place. Do not let them take him unless my sister says so. Anna wants him but can't have him. Oh, Edith, don't talk to any one."

The boy referred to as Hansi was found in the room. He was taken to the Children's Society. What became of the woman's two younger children is not known. It is thought that she had taken them to relatives before taking the poison. The police could not find Cramon nor was it possible to get a statement from Mrs Atrmes who had not regained consciousness last night. Her condition was said to be very serious.

Perfumes Should Match Woman's Temperament

By MARIAN HALE.

Matching your temperament in perfume is the latest fad in Paris.

According to M. Luyna, who has demonstrated unusual skill in temperament matching and who has some of the most distinguished women of France as his "perfume followers," the right perfume has exactly the effect upon others as music.

Whether your life is to have the harmony of the symphony or the discords of the calliope depends upon your selection of scent, the Frenchman believes. And the woman who disregards the potency of perfume is practically an unsung lyric.

"When the American woman realizes the importance of her perfumes there will be fewer divorces," M. Luyna states.

Easy and Original.

This seems a nice easy and original way of correcting the divorce evil, so let him lead us further:

"To be alluring," he continues, knowing we all desire to be that, "you must accent only certain characteristics with your perfumes, those which make you different from Mary Smith or Hattie Jones.

"The dark-eyed, sophisticated woman, indolent in her movements and eager with her eye, in other words, our old friend, the vamp, needs a heavy, penetrating fragrance to complete her score.

"The fair, buoyant type, suggesting radiant health, would be incongruous with sandalwood and jasmine. Her choice should be the ever so delicate fragrance of windswept garden or a May bouquet.

Accentuates Her Type.

"The gentle woman with the serene countenance would find the pale white iris her floral counterpart, and its fragrance would accentuate her type."

And so it goes. You study your temperament. Decide whether you suggest one flower, like the shrinking violet, or whether there is something of both the lily and the red rose in your makeup, or if your complex nature can be expressed only in a bouquet—then perfume accordingly.

It may be necessary to create some entirely new extract for you, but consider the divorce evil and the calliope.

Then master, too, the science of applying perfume. To aim an atomizer in your general direction and let the spray fall where it will is most crude.

"The French woman," says M. Luyna, "puts a drop behind each ear and a drop in the fur that nestles against her cheek. She perfumes her handbag and her fan, the lining of her hat and the pocket of her coat rather than her frock.

"She puts tiny balls of cotton scented, in her clothing and among her accessories. In this subtle way she makes the fragrance seem a part of herself, not something applied from the outside."

"WHAT WILL THEY SAY OF ME?"

The following verses, written by Rev. Byron Stauffer, of Toronto a year or two ago, seem to his friends to have summed up his view of his own self:

What will they say of me when I am dead?
Oh, they will say: "He was a funny chap;
He had his faults; he often lost his head;
He blundered much; he made some big mistakes,
And wasted strength in many a useless scrap."

I fear all that is true—all that and more—
And little I can do to alter it.
But may none say that losing, I felt sore;
Or that in fighgting I had fouled a foe;
Or for the truth I failed to do my bit.

Oh, may men say of me when I am dead
That I at least was fair in every fight;
And that my faults were not of heart, but head;
That, though too often I was harsh in word,
When thus I erred I set the matter right.

If they will say that I stood by the weak,
Never forgetting him whom fate brought low;
That 'twas my habit cheery words to speak;
And when I saw one crushed by sin and shame,
Felt sorry for the man and told him so—

If they will say that little children came
And showed me all their playthings without fear;
That folks with burdens spoke about the same
With open hearts, believing I would hear,
Perhaps the Lord will count my record clear.

Diamond Dyes never streak, spot, fade, or run.

FUN IN TRYING.

A young man who had run a block to catch a street car only to have the door shut in his face, was paced by a sympathetic bystander, waiting for a car on another line. "What a shame," she exclaimed indignantly, "for you to have that run for nothing." And then the youth, still breathing very hard, but with a sunny smile, replied. "Yes; but there's lots of fun in trying for it."

That spirit is commended to all young people because it is the spirit of success. No one can fail who finds reward in the effort itself. When you learn that the real joy is not in achievement but in struggle, not in arriving, but in the journey, then you have found the secret of a happy life. "There's lots of fun in trying." When you make that spirit yours you have enough to make life successful, no matter what is withheld.

First Case Brought Under New Law Forbidding Landlords to Bar Children

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Mrs. Elizabeth Darcy of 73 Fairview Street, Yonkers, haled B. C. Griffin, who owns an apartment house, to Yonkers City Court, on a summons, charging that he violated a new law by refusing to rent her a tenement because she has children

Judge Charles W. Boote remarked that he had never heard until now of a case being brought in court under the law. Mrs. Darcy alleged that she had to move because someone bought the house she lives in and wished to occupy it. She went to Mr. Griffin, who lives at 228 Sommerville Road, and asked of she could rent a vacant tenement. She says he told her the rent would be $35, and she agreed to that. "Then he asked me if I had any childern," she added. "I told him I have five. He then told me he didn't care to have anybody with children in the tenement." My husband is in the hospital, and I have got to find some place to go."

Griffin denied that he objected to children. He declared that he had since leased the place to another prospective tenant, who has not yet moved in. When Judge Boote read section 2041 of article 182 of the penal law, about excluding children in renting property, Mr. Griffin volunteerd: "That's silly."

"It's not silly. It's very serious," rejoined Judge Boote. "It's the law.'" It being Sunday, Judge Boote explained that he would not try the case. He set it down or next Saturday. The Judge advised Griffin to return the money the other prospective tenant had put down as one month's rent until the case brought by Mrs. Darcy is decided.

The section of the penal law 2041 reads: Any person, firm or corporation in any city owning or having charge any apartment house, tenement house of other building used for dwelling purposes who shall refuse to rent any or any part of such building to any person or family solely on the ground that such person or family has or have a child or children shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than $50 or more than $100 for each offense.

A WOMAN'S RIGHT TO GOOD HEALTH

It Can be Her's if She Keeps Her Blood in Good Condition.

To every woman belongs the right to enjoy a healhty active life. Yet nine out of ten suffer, often in silence, from splitting headaches, torturing backaches or some other of the many evils that follow anaemia or bloodlessness.

That is why one sees so many women with pale, thin cheeks, dull eyes and drooping figure—all signs that the blood is out of order. These women should win the right to be well by refreshing their bodies with the new, rich blood of health that so promptly transforms them into healthy, attractive women.

There is no other medicine can supply this rich, red blood so speedily and so surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Through this medicine thousands of tired, suffering women have found new health. For example, Mrs. F. Lane, Paris, Ont. says:—"A few years ago I was in a badly run down condition. My appetite was poor, I fell off in weight, and could with difficulty do my housework. Nothing I took seemed to do me any good until a neighbor advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had only taken a few boxes of the pills when I began to feel stronger and I continued using them until I had taken ten boxes, when I felt as well as I ever did, and I had regained my lost weight. My husband and children have also used the pills with good results, and I would advise anyone who is rundown to give them a fair trial."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Automobile accidents kill one person on an average every 40 minutes, or 35 a day, on America's highways and streets. While you are reading this article at least two Americans will be injured in motor accidents.

More Americans than were killed in the World War are being killed and injured in automobile mishaps this year. The total toll will be about 13,000 persons killed and approximately 40,000 injured—many of these maimed for life.

One-third of these will be children, not yet 15 years old. Nine-tenths will be pedestrians, run down by autoists.

Figures compiled for The Examiner by NEA Service in a nation-wide survey, show than in 1921, lives of 11,024 persons were snuffed out by cutomobiles, and approximately 35,000 were injured. These figures, aompiled from vital statistics record of each state, represent the most complete check ever made of the American juggernaut's fearful harvest.

Motor fatalities will kill more people this year than typhoid, malaria and smallpox combined. They will exceed the deaths from appendicitis and equal diphtheria fatalities—and in most cases, they could have been avoided.

And instead of decreasing or remaining stationary, the percentage of automobile fatalities is steadily increasing, despite all efforts to regulate traffic.

Fatalities on Increase

Increase in automobile traffic and corresponding increase in the percentage of automobile fatalities per 100,000 population is shown in figures for cities and counties where accurate death statistics are kept. Figures for these localities show that:

In 1917, with 4,983,340 automobiles licensed, there were 6724 deaths in auto accidents, or a death rate from this cause of 9.0 per 100,000 population.

With 6,146,617 automobiles, in 1918, there were 7525 fatalities, or 9.3 per 100,000.

Autos numbered 7,588,848 in 1919. There were 7968 persons killed, or 9.4 per 100,000.

In 1920, with 9,211,296 automobiles licensed, there were 9103 fatalities, or 10.4 per 100,000 population.

There were 10,448,362 licensed automobiles operating in the United States in 1921. In the U. S. Census Bureau's registration area, which contains 82 per cent of the nation's population, there were 10,168 deaths, or 11.5 per 100,000 population.

Between 1917 and 1921, therefore, the death rate per 100,000 population from motor vehicle accidents increased about 28 per cent.

This year, there are nearly 11,000,000 motor vehicles running in the streets and roads of the United States. Everything points to the highest automobile death toll in history, the greatest record of violent death from any single cause except war.

California Leads

California shows the greatest number of automobile fatalities per 100,000 population, and one of her cities, Los Angeles, has the highest automobile death rate of any American city fo more than 100,000. There were 889 fatalities in California last year, or 24.1 deaths per 100,000 population. Los Angeles' rate is 27.9, with 170 fatalities last year. This was a decrease from 24.4 in 1920 for California, and an increase for Los Angeles from 27.1.

Mississippi has the lowest record for auto deaths, the rate being 2.e per 100,000. South Carolina is second with 4.5.

Despite all their traffic police, their safety commissions and their other efforts to minimize accidents, the large cities present the highest death rate. Compared with the national death rate of 11.5 per 100,000 population, the death rate in 65 American cities last year was 15.6. The safest city in the United States is New Bedford, Mass. It decreased its automobile fatalities from 16 in 1918 to half that number in 1921, or 6.4 per 100,000.

New York State, with 1633 auto deaths in 1921, shows a death rate of 15.4. In the first nine months of 1922, the Empire State had 1219 fatalities. New York City's fatalities in 1921 totaled 896, or 15.6 per 100,000 residents, with 701 deaths up to Oct. 1 as the 1922 toll.

Cities with the highest ratio of automobile fatalities, following Los Angeles, are: Youngstown, O., 24.3 per 100,000; Kansas City, 20.8; Chicago, 20.3; Albany, N. Y., 20; Bridgeport, Conn., 19.5; Lowell, Mass. 19.3

"Accurate Count Impossible"

"Yearly deaths from highway traffic accidents are variously estimated at from 12,000 to 35,000," declares William P. Eno, international traffic authority "I doubt that even official figures give a true picture of the extent of auto fatalities.

"As a matter of fact, there is no means of making an accurate count, because many of those who ultimately die from traffic accidents get home, out of town or to a hospital, and all records of the cause of death are often lost. It is not unlikely that the total number of deaths from highway traffic is 36,000 per year, or about 100 every day."

VOICE OF PEOPLE

To the Editor of Examiner

Sir: Your editorial on Tuesday last on "Interference with Labor Representatives in Parliament by Local Organizations," impels me to take exception to your sentiments. Ramsay Macdonald is reputed to have condemned the Scottish local labor parties for instructing their parliamentary representatives. The trouble with labour representatives in the past has been, that shortly after they are sent to parliament they break off contact with the local organizations that got them there, refuse to be dictated to, adopt an independent attitude, and eventually succumb to their changed environments and associations. It has so happened with some of the most radical leaders in the past. Scottish labour, who are a little more virile and active than labor in any other part of Britain, will, I feel sure, give R. MacDonald a good talking to, because the past is a lesson to them Now that they have sent some of the most radical workers to Westminster they wish to keep them active and radical. They do not want their representatives to adopt an independent attitude and forget what they had been sent to do.

As far as Canada is concerned your criticism is unfairly directed against the Progressives, who probably also take a lesson from the past and wish to retain a hold on their representatives. After all, are not the Conservative and Liberal members responsible to their associations? Then why should the Farmer and Labor members be otherwise? Not only do the Conservative and Liberal members take instructions from their political clubs, but they are also the mouthpiece of their industrial or business associations to which they may belong. Let us take our own town as an example. We have a member for the provincial house and one or two municipal members who are supposed to represent labor. Being unattached, and therefore feeling no responsibility to any organization they have not pushed matters appertaining to labor as they should have done. It is not enough to say that there is no labor organization in the city. If our labor representatives were really sincere they should have taken the initiative to form a branch of some labor organization and submitted themselves to their service and dictation. Parliament is like a diplomatic conference and diplomats are never given an absolute free hand in drawing up treaties.

I remain, your truly,
B. MARKSON.

WASH THE KIDNEYS IF THEY BOTHER YOU

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

Flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much meat and rich food may form uric acid, which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids, in urine so it no longer irritates, thus often ending bladder weakness.

"How are the Mighty Fallen" Tom Longboat, Once Great in Racing Circles, Now Laborer

Elwood A. Hughes, sports director of the Canadian National Exhibition, said plenty the other day when he remarked, as Tom Longboat the famous Indian runner, grunted a gutteral farewell and left the sporting room. "There goes a man who should be worth a quarter of a million at least today."

Longboat hasn't got a dime.

In 1908 he was the most famous athlete in the world bar none.

No athlete, barring possibly that unique figure in the fighting world, the late John L. Sullivan, had the world-wide advertising and fame that the big Onondaga Indian had, and yet he failed to capitalize it.

That is why Tom Longboat toils his eight hours a day and rides in street cars and day coaches.

In 1907 and 1908 he rode in limousines and Pullman drawing-room first-class cabins and shook hands with dukes and princes and lords, and was the athletic lion of creation.

Tom Longboat is 35 years old today, and he will earn his bread by the sweat of his brow for the rest of his natural life—unless some angel arrives, and I don't hear any rustle of wings.

If anybody ever writes the history of Tom Longboat I beg to suggest a title.

"Corn Pone—Cavair—Corn Beef."

That about describes it. He started on corn pone, worked up to caviar and now he is tickled to get his corn beef regularly.

Oh, What a Difference.

Tom Longboat blew into Toronto six weeks ago after a three-year absence, and had to hustle for his next meal. As a matter of fact he had several postponed dates with regular food.

On April 21, 1907, he came into town escorted from Niagara Falls by the late Ald. J. J. Graham, representing the city council and 20,000 people cheered him from the Union Station to the City Hall.

There were bands and floats and thousands of marchers in the parade, and Mayor Emerson Coatsworth gave him the city hall and a lot of smaller things.

If the Smiling Prince had landed here the same day I think he would have finished second—not by much, but still second.

Tom Flanagan, who turned the Indian pro, on his return from the English Olympiad in 1908, when he was beaten by Johnny Hayes and Dorando—he quit when running second to J. J. Hefferon, the South African, at 19 miles—says that the Indian became hard to handle from the day he put his first $10,000 in the bank.

"If Longboat has not failed us in the English marathon and had won, I would have toured the world with him and he would have retired worth a quarter-million" said Tom Flanagan, who, by the way, was the originator of the Sportsman's Patriotic Association idea. "I had financial backing and I had the tour all arranged. But he wouldn't train. I couldn't handle him in Ireland, and the man I turned him over to in England 10 days before the race had all he could do to keep track of him there. You know that."

Indeed I do know it, for I had charge of him in England before the race and during the race, and I am firmly convinved that if the race had been over a road with long straight stretch where Longboat could have seen the leader, he would have won handily. It was a day of high humidity, and it bothered the Indian. He was away back when I picked him up at five miles, and he had overhauled everybody but Hefferon when he threw up his hands and went down. Hefferon was dead beat in front of him, and Longboat had a quarter-mile on the next man. He was over a mile in front of Johnny Hayes, the U.S. runner, who was the official winner. He had passed Dorando, the Italian who first breasted the tape between 16 and 17 miles, and had a nice lead on him. Dorando was disqualified because when he fell 50 yards from the wire and staggered off the track a kindly hand guided him back to the cinder and set him with his face to the mark. "I know all about Dorando for Doc. Morton, the veteran bicycle rider, and I who were attending Longboat accompanied Dorando the last two miles and were with him in the stadium until the police ran us off the track. Dorando had lost his own attendants in the crowd, and I don't mind telling you we were out there to help anyone beat the United States marathoners because of the treatment a Yankee runner gave Jack Tait, our half-miler in a heat a day or so before.—Toronto Star.

What is a Professional Coach?

Toronto hockey teams have agreed not to employ professional coaches; the O.H.A. Annual bars all pro. coaches from players' boxes and the immediate vicinity thereof; a notice of motion has been given for next year's O.H.A. Annual to bar pro. coaches from Ontario hockey says the Toronto Telegram.

The Western City Baseball League went on record as favoring the pro. coach as a man who can teach them the finer points of the game.

And what is a pro. coach?

Apparently there is no desire on the part of the amateur officials or anybody else to bar teams from profiting by the experience of men who are professionals, men who have been, or are, good enough players to make a living at it. They have much to teach.

The set against pro. coaching in amateur circles is not against the professional as such, but against the employment of coaches at salaries or even honorariums. These latter gentlemen have been largely trainers and rubbers elevated to the rank and title of coach by their own valuation. The crude methods of win-at-any-cost they introduced; the growing and pernicious gambling that followed in their wake it was that stirred the amateur officials to action.

These gentlemen it was that envolved the tactics for the teams and generally ran things.

A professional as such as far as can be gathered at this stage of the controversy will be eligible to coach hockey or other teams provided he gives his services free as any amateur.

CALEDONIANS WON FROM SERGEANTS

Both Teams Played Sparkling Ball But the Caleys Staged a Big Rally in the Sixth.

..The Caledonians grabbed a 5 to 3 victory from the Sergeants in the opening game of the Soft Ball League schedule last evening. The second game between the Wildcats and the Privates was awarded to the Wildcats on default when the Privates failed to put in an appearance.

The Caleys and Sergeants played one of the most closely contested agmes of the schedule with but little scoring on either side. The Scots broke away for a rally in the sixth frame which brought in three runs. It was the only break in the game and it came after two men were out and the Sergeants were leading with a 2 to 1 score, but it was enough to turn a defeat into a victory and the Caley had but little to worry about from then on.

In five of their nine trip to bat the Sergeants were retired one-two-three order while the Caleys had the same dose handed to them in four of their eight turns.

The players were:

Caledonians—McKenzie 1b, Burgess ss, Ackford c, McMillan p, French ss, Jackson 2b, Thompson 3b, Viech lf, Anderson rf.

Score by innings:

Sergeants ..... 100100010—3

Caledonians ..... 01000301x—5

SANDY REPLIES.

It is whispered that Port Hope has lost two of her hockey players. They played baseball last season with Port Hope, but these birds of passage who play baseball in the winter and hockey in the summer are never a tower of strength to any team.—Lindsay Post.

It is possible that a couple of the players have gone, but having so many players on our list we are unable to confirm the Lindsay report. Our Northern friends can rest assured that we still have enough on our staff to knock the spots off them, should the occasion ever present itself.—Port Hope Guide.

TO ENLARGE RINK.

It is understood that extensive repairs will be made at the skating and hockey rinks in Belleville prior to opening of the hockey season. Further seating accommodation will be made from six to eight hundred fans.

Showdown Next Week For Toronto

TORONTO, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press)—Nothing further has transpired in the proposed deal to transfer the Boston Red Sox to Toronto. The Toronto syndicate claims the "show-down" will come at the American League meeting next week, and until the matter is dealt with there they have nothing more to say.

It now transpires that Lol Solman also made an offer for the Red Sox and was quoted a price of a million and a quarter. Furthermore, Mr. Solman claims he was offered first chance on the franchise by President H. H. Frazee of the Boston club.

The other Toronto syndicate says that might be so, but they claim to be dealing with the real Boston owners, and that does not mean Mr. Frazee.

Meanwhile Ban Johnson has troubles of his own with Commissioner Landis, and nobody knows as yet whether the American League will meet in Chicago or New York next week.

DANDURAND AGAIN THE STORM CENTRE.

Another grand old rumpus is said to be brewing in the National League. Leo Dandurand of the Canadiens is again the centre of the promised display fireworks. It is Percy Thompson, of the Hamilton Tigers, with whom Leo is going to the mat, and the cause for the clash is Joe Malone, who has been placed on the suspended list by the Hamilton club.

Malone, who captained the Tigers last season, was slated to operate at their helm again during the coming season, but he recently moved to Montreal, and accepted a position, after which he announced that he would probably get leave of absence for the season and report to Hamilton. Recently Malone refused to rejoin the Tigers and expressed a desire to be traded to Canadiens.

The Hamilton club, however, claims that Malone has been tampered with and Percy Thompson has gone gunning for Leo Dandurand.

In the meantime Malone has been placed on the suspended list, and the Hamilton club will probably ask for a league meeting to deal with the situation.

SIKI GREATER LIAR THAN A FIGHTER.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The declaration that Battling Siki is a much greater liar that he ever was a fighter and that no one can take away his titles as champion heavyweight liar of the world was the only comment which M. Hellers, manager of the Senegalese, made to newspaper correspondents when confronted with Siki's confession concerning the Carpentier defeat published in some of the morning papers.

M. Hellers added that he would defend himself to the limit and defied M. Diagne, the Senegalese deputy, to produce any proof of the alleged frame-up beyond the unsupported word of Siki.

HAMILTON RETAINS THE CHAMPIONSHIP

Bobby Ebers Obtains Decision in a Ten Round Bout.

TORONTO, December 9. — Bobby Ebers' left hand kept the bantamweight championship of Canada in the Hamilton boy's possession last night when he obtained the decision over the ten round route against Patsy Wallace of Philadelphia, who recently secured a draw with Pancho Villa.

The bout was the first titular engagement that the local fans have had in some time, and both the exhibition and the attendance were worthy of classification.

Wallace was always willing to get at close quarters, and at times he succeeded, with the result that early in the battle he scored a number of points, and in the second and third rounds he shaded the Hamilton boy, but in the fourth the champion shaded the Philadelphian by a slight margin and from then on he had a fair edge on his opponent.

that he pull the teeth in Ford's mouth, which had been filled by a dentist, further to conceal his identity and offered to supply the detective with a pair of pliers for the purpose.

Proposals made by him to throw the body into the river or bury it were vetoed by Mrs. Ford as dangerous Kunath says. As a further preparation, he says, she gave him a pencil sketch of the farm. Police have the alleged sketch in their possession. It was arranged, Kunath says, that he was to get $20,000 for the "job".

ARREST ON MEETING

Mrs. Ford also gave him a picture of herself and Ford, taken just after they were married, so that he would not attack the wrong man, Kunath said.

The final meeting with Mrs. Ford was arranged for Thursday night at Woodward and Temple avenues at 9:15 o'clock. Here Mrs. Ford was arrested by Sergt. Straith, who accompanied Kunath to the spot. The detectives had with them a warrant signed by Robert M. Toms, chief assistant prosecuting attorney, which was issued Thursday by Judge Harry B. Keidan.

Mrs. Ford when questioned in the detective bureau after her arrest, refused to talk beyond saying that she was "framed" and not guilty.

To-day Ford brought a load of hay to town with a peace of mind,

ALICE TERRY AND LEWIS STONE IN REX INGRAM'S PRODUCTION

Motion picture fans who look for exceptional photoplays will have an opportunity on Monday to see a picture which is one of the outstanding productions of the year, for on that date Rev Ingram's "The Prisoner of Zenda" will come to the Capitol Theatre.

It is a story teeming with dramatic action, full of intrigue, romance and excitement. It concerns the adventures of an English gentleman, one Rudolf Rassendyll, who, because of a remarkable likeness to the ruler of the mythical kingdom of Ruritania, becomes for a time its actual ruler and wins the love of the Princess Flavia.

"The Prisoner of Zenda" is the most popular romance of a generation. From the time when Anthony Hope, then more interested in his political career in England than in writing, composed it, the narrative of Rudolf Rassendyll's reckless adventure has taken hold of the hearts of all who read. This was the first of the stories of romance in little kingdoms in Europe, and no better indication can be had of its success than that it inspired hundreds of writers to imitate it. But none of the resulting stories had the zest, the devil-may-care spirit of the original, for that was written chiefly for the love of imagination the author had; it was as glamorous to him as to his readers.

In the hands of a director such as Rex Ingram, who made "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" for the same motion picture producing organization, "The Prisoner of Zenda" has stepped out of the pages of the book and come very much to life on the screen. Different essentially from "The Four Horsemen," as different as realism is from romance, the newer picture nevertheless has been done upon the same great scale and with the same faithfulness to the spirit of the written page. In every matter, from the designing of the mammoth settings which represent the Castle of Zenda to precision of court etiquette, Mr. Ingram took charge, and the result is a magnificently beautiful picture.

"The Prisoner of Zenda" is a Rex Ingram production for Metro, adapted by Mary O'Hara from the Edward Rose stage version of Anthony Hope's novel. It was photographed by John F. Seitz.

A cast of unusual excellence has been assembled for the production. Lewis Stone, Alice Terry, Robert Edeson, Stuart Holmes, Ramon Navarro, Barbara La Marr, Malcolm Lee play leading roles.

AT THE GRAND.

N.V.E. VAUDEVILLE AND SUPER PICTURE PRODUCTION

"Rich Men's Wives," a Society Drama of Exceptional Power— Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

No woman—or man, either, for that matter—can sit through this photoplay without being the gainer in moral stamina, for the story, written by Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnston, is based on sound logic and displays a keen study of the lives our so-called social butterflies lead. As a matter of fact, it is reported that the story was actually inspired by the breaking up of two homes of notable rich men's wives recently—one in

New York, the other in Chicago.

The play carries a charming girl from her finishing school days, on through the debutante period, then into a triumphant social life, marriage, motherhood, flirtation and unhappiness—and a climax that is as interest-holding as it is surprising and unexpected.

Quite as important as the play itself is the cast of artists that has been chosen to interpret the trying roles. House Peters, as the rich man and a believer in the double moral standard for men and women, is his usual impressive self and adds lustre to a career already made notable by many fine instances of superior acting.

Claire Windsor, the newly-risen star of cinemaland and probably the queen of all the beauties of the screen, gives probably the finest performance of her career as the wife, and she wears enough beautiful gowns to make the average woman dizzy with delight—and the billpayers equally dizzy in contemplation of what they must have cost.

Baby Richard Headrick, the wonder child of the screen who flashed across the theatre horizon in his memorable role in "The Child Thou Gavest Me," is here in a role similar to that one and he interprets it with the same surprising intelligence that characterized his earlier work.

Rosemary Theby is the beautiful "vamp" of the plot, while the perennially splendid Myrtle Stedman is a society matron to the very last lift of her elebrow and the ultimate billow of her marcel wave. Another beauty in the cast is Carol Holloway, who long kept millions in heart-breaking suspense while she defied death and devastating villains in serial thrillers.

Gaston Glass, the violinist of "Humoresque" and the hero of many other screen stories, plays the juvenile "heavy" in "Rich Men's Wives," and Charles Clary, one of the finest actors in the picture game, is the father of the heroine. Martha Mattox, a character actress of reputation, and William Austin, portrayer of character comedy parts, complete the cast.

"Rich Men's Wives," in addition to its entertaining qualities and its cast of beautiful women, seems to strike a new note in film production. The settings are rich but not bizarre, and the good taste of the European, Gasnier, makes itself apparent. The groupings of his big gatherings are excellent and he introduces lighter moments as a relief from the tense situations with a deftness truly artistic.

This is a really worth while picture and, despite the fact it will be at the Grand Theatre Theatre for three days, do not wait too long before going to see it.

The refined high-class N.V.E. vaudeville offerings for the first half of the week include Herb Camp, eccentric violinist, and Rottach & Miller, comedy singing, talking and dancing duo.

Several short picture subjects round out another wonderful evening's entertainment, at the usual bargain prices of 15c, 25c and 30c, plus tax. Matinee daily—adults 15c, children 10c.

DRY DELEGATES WERE SHOCKED

Proceedings at Banquet in Welland Are Being Investigated,

WELLAND, December 9.. — Canadian Press, — Chief of Police Crabb announced last night that proceedings at a banquet held in a local hotel last night, which led to complaints being made by a number of delegates who recently attended the convention of the World League against Alcoholism, would be investigated.

It is alleged that a number of the guests at the banquet were in an advanced state of intoxication, and some persons staying at the hotel were subjected to annoyance. One woman delegate claimed that she was insulted.

The chief stated that the affair had not been officially reported to him.

Reference to this matter was made by Mayor Hughes in his address of welcome to the visiting delegates at a meeting that was held in the Methodist church last night to further the prohibition movement. He declared that ninety per cent. of the people of Welland welcomed the temperance delegates and expressed regret that their visit had been marred.

FRENCH "BIG WIND" BLOWS TRAIN OFF TRACK

PARIS, Dec. 9.—A heavy gale in the Pyrenees region in southern France blew a passenger train off the track this morning. The train was travelling on the Naronne-Oerbere line, not far from Perpinan, when an exceptionally fierce gust lifted the two rear cars, throwing them beside the track and causing the entire train to be derailed. The train was running slowly, so no one was hurt, but traffic to Spain was interrupted.

AT THE ROYAL THEATRE, MONDAY EVENING DECEMBER 11 AT 8.15 O'CLOCK

Times, London, England — To Skovgaard belongs a masterly dignity, unalloyed by mannerisms and shallow display. An artist of the scholarly order, he devotes himself with seriousness to the music which he prefers.

Times, New York City—From the very start Skovgaard proved himself to be a scholarly musician, not lacking in virtuose brilliancy, but first and last an interpreter of musical ideas and sentiments.

Duluth Tribune, Duluth, Minn. — One of the real concerts, that is the kind that really has music in it, was given at the Lyceum Theatre last night when Mr. and Mrs. Skovgaard gave their recital. How he can play the violin! He did just what any great artist can do, and what nearly all of them won't do, subordinated technique to melody, and from the great range of musical, and at the same time, difficult compositions, selected those which were tuneful, and played them magnificently. It's a long time since a really great artist has had the courage to play "Last Rose of Summer" and "Suannee River" on a concert stage. He played both of these, and the exquisite tones of his Strad drove the melody of those two loved selections home to every heart. Skovgaard, a Stradivarius and Suannee River. There is nothing finer.

"The Danish Ole Bull."—After entertaining over three thousand of Madison's people at two public concerts, Skovgaard was the guest of honor at a reception given by Gov. Davidson, of Wisconsin, at the executive mansion. The governor's house was the home of the great Norwegian violinist, Ole Bull, and is consequently one of the "historical houses" of Madison. Much of the interesting history of Ole Bull is connected with this house. Complying with a unanimous request, and selecting the very spot on which Ole Bull had stood and captivated hundreds of his friends, Skovgaard played Ole Bull's masterpiece, "Saeterjentens Sondag" (The Charlet Girl's Sunday.) It seemed as though the spirit of the old master was present—it was like being back again in the days of Ole Bull. The same house—the same room— the same melody—the same magic touch—the same exquisite tone—the same imposing personality. But it was Svokgaard, the "Danish Ole Bull."

New System of Fat Reduction

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at that old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that there is nothing new under the sun does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements perfected by one of the foremost physicians. Now from the same high authority there comes another idea — the idea of condensing these same pure, harmless, ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bedtime they help the stomach to dispose of all fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exertion and self denial can not do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward Avenue, Detroit, Mich. A case—sufficient to bring results—is but one dollar.

LADIES' O. B. A. ELECT OFFICERS, 1923.

The members of the L.O.B.A. held their regular meeting on Tuesday to elect their officers for the coming year. Many members were present, and a keen interest was shown in the election. One candidate was initiated during the evening, and several were proposed for membership. Before retiring from her office W.M. Sister Manley read a very interesting report on the progress of the Lodge during the year, and thanked the officers and members for the hearty support given her. The auditor's report was then read, which was very gratifying. The election was then held, with the following results:

Sister Manley, W.M., re-elected.
Sister Burnham, D.M.
Sister Millard, Chaplain.
Sister Tate, Rec. Secretary.
Sister Woodgate, Financial Secretary, re-elected.
Sister Foster, Treasurer, re-elected.
Sister Wright, Director of Ceremonies, re-elected.

W.M. Sister Manley and Sister Burnham, the D.M.-elect, were then presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

LONG-DISTANCE WRITING.

Long-distance writing by radio is foreseen by some wireless engineers. They deduce this from the invention of a machine that makes a written record of radio code signals while the operator is absent. This device is now being widely used.

MONTREAL BARITONE IS .. PRAISED IN NEW YORK

Edmund Burke Congratulated On Successful Debut in Great Metropolis.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(Canadian Press)—Following close upon the initial performance of Edward Johnson, the Canadian tenor, another Canadian singer of international note is the recipient of congragulations upon a successful debut at the Metropolitan Opera House. He is Edmund Burke, the Montreal baritone.

Mr. Burke has had a long and distinguished operatic career, having been a member of the Royal Opera Company of Covent Garden and of the Melba Opera Company of Australia. He has been heard in New York a number of times in recital but this was his first appearance with the Metropolitan forces He sang the role of the King in "Aida". Aida was sung by Elizabeth Rethberg and the Amneris was Sigrid Onegin. It was the debut of all three. Martinella sang Radames.

While Mr. Burke's performance did not receive the notice from the press that was accorded Mr. Johnson's first appearance, chiefly because the opening concert of the Oratorio Society on the same night drew the chief critics of the local papers and the opera was left to the mercies of the "second string" writers, the Canadian baritone was given a very cordial reception by a big audience and a very favorable comment was heard concerning his performance.

The Times declared his debut was of importance to New York's future enjoyment of opera. "Mr. Burke was a sightly king of Egypt," the Times critic said, "and vocally an old friend to many who had heard the baritone on concert tours with Madame Melba. He sang with intelligence and acted with dignity."

CONFERENCE OF PREMIERS HAS BROKEN DOWN

Adjournment for Eight Days Imperative to Avert Open Rupture Between France and Britain.

GERMAN PROPOSALS

LONDON, Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press). — The conference of Allied Premiers endeavoring to arrange a basis for an Allied financial reparations conference in Brussels has broken down, according to an announcement here this evening that the Premiers had adjourned until January 2.

Press Opinions.

The press opinions of the new German proposals varies. The Times thinks that they make a very considerable advance over any offers Germany has hitherto made, and some other papers regard them as furnishing a basis for negotiations. The Daily Mail, however, insists that the maintenance of the Entente unity is the paramount consideration, and intimates indirectly that as France repudiates the German offer, Great Britain must do the same. Belief that the conference would reject the offer was practically universal. Several newspapers said the proposals were positively rejected yesterday by all the Premiers. It was understood that the conference would re-assemble this afternoon after the morning meeting of the Cabinet Council, which had been summoned by Mr. Bonar Law.

Rejected Force.

The adjournment of the Premiers' conference to-night, for eight days, in order to avert an open rupture between Britain and France over the question of German reparations has been virtually decided, it was learned to-day. The British Cabinet, it was authoritatively stated, rejected the measures of force for the Ruhr district upon which Premier Poincaire insisted. Premier Bonar Law informed Premier Poincaire that public opinion was overwhelmingly opposed to any military measures against Germany.

The conference will probably resume its session in eight days in London or Paris. Meanwhile, it is hoped that some guarantees may be found which will satisfy the French and at the same time make military action unnecessary.

Demands Ruhr.

It was stated in French circles that the immediate adjournment was merely a move to prevent an open break among the Allies, particularly between France and Britain, and that there is little likelihood of finding a common basis of agreement between them. It is further pointed out that Premier Poincaire has been forced largely by the political situation at home to demand Ruhr as the price of any concession to Germany.

Arresting a Ghandiite

Natives of India are continuing their campaign of absolute non-resistance in the hope of securing recognition of their claims by the British government. When halted by troops in their efforts to reach their shrines these Ghandiites submit to terrible beatings, fall unconscious and, when they recover, continue their efforts. DIPLOMAT'S WIFE CROSS-EXAMINED IN DIVORCE SUIT

Declares Her Husband Was a Spendthrift and Refused to Pay the Bills

PORTLAND, Me., Dec. 11. — Mrs. Madeline Masters Gron was cross-examined here regarding letters she is alleged to have written to her husband, Niels Gron, Danish diplomat, from whom she is seeking a divorce. Many passages from these letters expressing affection for her husband were read in court.

In one letter Mrs. Gron acknowledged receipt of a cheque for $1,000, and in the letter dated immediately after this she wrote:

"I went into a cathedral to-day to say a little prayer for you, my darling. I thanked God for our great love and faith in each other."

She wrote how she missed him in his long absence, saying in one letter dated in 1918, when he was in Europe:

"You know, my darling, that wherever you are I can be perfectly happy."

Anything Better Than Separation.

In another letter written in the same year she said:

"My life without you is impossible. Anything is better than separation. I want to go to a tiny house and live so simply—just you and I and our darling little boy."

Writing in December, 1917, from Lakewood, N.J., Mrs. Gron said:

"I have told little Niel over and over of all your care and loving thought for him and for your little wife. He thinks you are the best father a child ever had."

Explains Affectionate Letters.

Mrs. Gron was asked to explain this letter, in view of the fact that she had accused her husband in her bill of specifications of many acts apparently unbecoming to a parent. She said that when the letter was written she might have considered him an ideal father.

Asked why her 1918 letters were so affectionate, Mrs. Gron replied:

"There was always more harmony when the ocean was between us."

She testified that her husband had spendthrift habits and had failed to pay his personal bills and their household expenses in Chicago, New York, Princeton, N. J., and other places.

C. N. R. DIRECTORS RESENT THE CHARGE.

TORONTO, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press.)—Directors of the Canadian National Railways to-day denied the charge of Sir Henary Drayton Saturday night before the Central Conservatives here that they were "astute politicians."

"I did not seek the position," said R. P. Gough, who was described by Sir Henry as an authority on furs, and friends of Hon. P. C. Larkin, an adept in politics.

Surely Major Graham Bell and I can hardly come within that category," said Gerard Ruel. "I would prefer critics to wait and judge me on my record."

THIRTY PERSONS ARE NEARLY ASPHYXIATED.

Pipes from which the fumes issued could not be located.

Lovelorn? Can't Die; Write Poetry

If Girl Reads It All She'll Be Punished Enough

To the Editor: A young man should not seek to quit this world just because a girl cannot love him. To prove this my own case fits in superbly:

I was 19. I loved a girl of 16, an art student. But she did not reciprocate. One night I decided to quit existence without her.

I strangled myself, but while in the act the glorious moon just passed the open window. I relaxed my hold, ran to peer at her and pledged myself to live for Nature, God, humanity and her memory.

Surely I did. At once I discovered my gift for writing. At 21 I wrote for her, dramas, poetry, etc., the quality of which was like that of Milton, Homer, Marlowe, Herrick, etc. Then I outshone every painter through the long years after. Also I received the gift of composing, etc. In short her not loving me made out of my dormant gifts one of the most marvelous creators in the fine arts.

Now, young men and boys, read this. Don't shoot yourself. Do what I had and have done. —Louis M. Eilshemius, New York.

NOT A RENO FOR MARITAL AFFAIRS

Non-Turks Seeking Divorce Should Keep Clear of Constantinople.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press)—Mustapha Kemal Pasha has determined that Constantinople shall not be converted into an international Reo. He and the new Caliph want Turkey to have nothing to do with the martial affairs of those who do not turn their eyes toward Mecca.

Ismet Pasha and associated here have made it clear concerning the rights of foreigners in Turkey that Ottaman officials cannot attempt to marry or divorce foreigners living on Tukish soil, and that they must insist that all matters involving martial relations of non-Turkish people be settled outside of Ottoman Territory.

HASTINGS HAS A BRANCH OF LEAGUE

Peterboro Members Motored to Hastings Yesterday and Established Branch.

A number of ladies motored to Hastings yesterday and established a branch of the Catholic Women's League of Canada. A very successful meeting was held and resulted in the election of the following officers:

President, Mrs. J. A. McGrail; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. W. M. West; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. A. U. Bailey; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. P. M. Howard; Treasurer, Mrs. Richard Walsh; Secretary, Miss Lillian Condon.

It is felt that the Hastings branch of the League will be in capable hands under the management of the above-mentioned officers. The Rev. Father Bretherton attended the meeting and assisted in the organization, giving the newly appointed officers instructions and encouragement to carry on their duties.

URGES PRIDE IN TRADITIONS WE'RE HEIR TO

And British Will Measure Up to Their Responsibilities in These Days of World Discouragement

KNOX ANNIVERSARY

The twelfth anniversary services of Knox church yesterday were marked by excellent music by the choir under the capable leadership of Organist J. Jeffries. Exceedingly apropriate and forcible sermons from Rev. A. H. Denoon, D.D., of Toronto, and also by large congregations. To a stranger last evening the atmosphere of the spacious sacred edifice was vibrant with an element of reverent rejoicing and Christian cheer quite inspiring, and fitting to the anniversary of a flourishing Presbyterian church and congregation.

The solo parts of the specially prepared music for this occasion were very acceptably rendered by Mrs. W Byers, Miss Trucie Pearson, and Master Kenneth McCannan, each of whose numbers reflected no small measure of talent, and also skilled training.

For his text at the evening service the eloquent divine selected Acts 28, v. 15, where Paul, although being carried a prisoner in chains, to Imperial Rome, found in so small a thing as a few of his Christain brethren coming to meet and cheer him, occasion to "thank God and take courage." Dr. Denoon gathered that Paul's attitude portrayed in this chapter of the gospel, when the apostle must have at times, been quite discouraged and disheartened, peculiarly applicable to these modern days. For there naturally exists a good deal of gloom, despondency and depression, resulting from the discouraging stories of Central Europe, Ireland and Russia, so much so indeed that the world is wondering if beneficial fruits from the war will ever materialize, and men arise to successfully meet present day world and national difficulties by measuring up to their responsibilities. No wonder the doctor said that our race when reviewing national and internatoinal affairs, are depressed and enshrouded in gloomy forebodings.

Reason for Hope.

And yet, the speaker saw no real ocasion for depression and discouragement for Christianity enjoys the same church as of old, and while it may be in some circumstances inefficient where it might be serviceable and while the world is scarred with pleasure-seeking, sensual-chasing peoples, he believed that God is working out his own divine purpose in his own good way. "There is no cause," the distinguished visitor reiterated, why Christians should be depressed these days of striking opportunities, when one finds so much unselfishness and righteousness and truth prevailing, when both men and women are organized and organizing for world-betterment and the uplift of humanity." In all this he saw real hope for the near future.

British Blood Counts.

And here recallin, that we Canadians have British blood flowing in our veins, such blood as sets our hearts bounding in remembrance of the noble deeds of those Britishers who have gone on beforfe,the speaker urged his hearers to ever keep in mind their heritage of British institutions and tradition and thank God that they are heirs of the great and glorious past, and of traditions that should steady and encourage them to go forward increasing and perpetuating that enviable inheritance, not only in their own interests but for the good of mankind in general.

Finding no real room for gloom and depression and overwhelming disheartenment, and stressing that Christian training upon which the Empire is largely built, the speaker said he had no earthly use for men who enjoy such an heritage and still are too cowardly to be proud of it, and so live as to be worthy of the precepts handed down by their forefathers. "Let us take courage, like Paul, as we face the future," he concluded, "and thank God for the possibilities of our race, as displayed by those men who so nobly responded to a worthy appeal during the great world war; also for that potentiality which makes men worthy in all the difficult circumstances of life, and will stimulate them to rise equal to the responsibilities of the new day and generation.

Denies Inferiority of Modern Student

High School Principal Asserts Tests Prove Contrary

DETROIT, Dec. 11.—Flat denial of the complaints that modern education results in inferior development of children was made by Edwin L. Miller, principal of the Northern High School, in an address here.

Mr. Miller asserted that examination papers of a generation ago had been presented to pupils in Detroit, Springfield, Mass., and other cities without any chance for preparation except that given by the regular school work, and modern standings were higher than those of the pupils to whom the questions originally were propounded.

Refuting charges against modern school methods as character builders, he declared that pupils to-day were learning to do their duty promptly, to make haste slowly, and to produce the results expected of them.

"I can show you where old Horace made similar complaints 3,000 years ago," he said. "The truth is that most of our young people are as fine, sweet, wholesome persons as any the world has ever seen."

MASS MEETING LAST EVENING

Temperance Delegates Solicit Assistance in the Work of Abolishing Liquor Traffic.

Last evening a mass meeting was held in George street Methodist church, after the regular church services, when five of the visiting delegates out of sixty-seven who attended the recent World Temperance Congress in Toronto, made very brief addresse to the large gathering. This was the first International Temperance Conference ever held in Peterborough and the people were favored by speeches from William Ernits of Esthonia, who is a member of the Esthonia Parliament, and is a professor of philosophy in the Esthonia University, Rev. Franklin Albrecias of Spain, Rev. Wilson Stewart of London, England, Otto Forkerk of Switzerland, who is a leader of the Young People's Temperance Movement in that country, and a Grand Deputy of the International Order of Good Templars, Rev. T. M. Harwood of New Mexico, and the Rev. C. W. Lee of Toronto, who is in charge of the party. Seven delegates started out on this tour but the delegates from France and Australia found it necessary to leave the little party.

Temperance Work.

Each of the delegates outlined the need of temperance work in their country. Rev. Franklin Albrecias spoke in his native Spanish language, but on one occasion he reverted to fairly good English. Rev. T. M. Harwood acted as his interpreter.

The condition of our foreign lands is serious in regards to the prohibition laws. The governments stand behind the manufacturers and producers of liquor and receive the bulk of the profits. The speakers pictured most vividly the cruelty to children as a result of the liquor traffic. Rev. Stewart stated that more money was spent in the alcohol trade during the year than has been expended on the army, navy and air force put together. The reason of such a condition of cruelty to children, continued Dr. Stewart, is not due to the nature of humanity, but to the condition the human being is in under the influence of liquor. The sunlight is breaking through, he stated and through the faithful work of the English people and the co-operation of Canada and the United States, the liquor traffic will soon be abolished.

Should be Thankful.

The people in Ontario should be thankful that they are living in a dry country, stated Rev. T. M. Harwood; as they are free from such an evil. But it is your responsibility, he continued, to help the other sinv hardened countries to gain the high standards that you attain.

Contribution cards were passed among the audience to help along the work and help the fighters in other countries to gain prohibition legisltaion.

THE WEATHER

The temperature on Saturday night went down to 3 degrees above zero. This (Monday) morning it was at 7 degrees above zero. Saturday night was the coldest we have had it yet. I expected that the late cold spell would have given us below zero, but like many of our looked-for troubles, it failed to materialize. A few inches more of snow would give excellent sleighing, as the bottom is in fine conditon at the present time.—W. P.

ROTARIANS TO KEEP IN TOUCH WITH CAMP BOYS

Will Entertain Youngsters at Oyster Supper and Keep an Eye on Them All Winter.

CHRISTMAS PLANS

Plans by which the members of the Peterborough Rotary Club will keep in touch during the winter with the boys who attended the Rotary Camp last summer were laid before local Rotarians at their weekly luncheon to-day by Rotarians C. E. Smith and Ald. Jas. Hamilton.

The first step, as announced by Rotarian Smith, will be an indoor ball game, followed by an oyster supper in the Armouries on Friday night. Each Rotarian has been supplied with the name of a boy, and he is held responsible for seeing that that particular boy is present on Friday evening. In addition, he is expected to keep in touch with the boy afterward.

Rotarian Hamilton stated that about half the boys who were at the Rotary Camp will be without the usual Christmas joy unless assisted, and suggested that the names of such boys be divided among members of the club to be looked after.

It was decided that Rotary should look after the families of those boys at Christmas, and the matter was left in the hands of Rotarian Hamilton and his committee.

Rotarian W. R. Morris gave the address of the day, contributing a lucid and concise report of a profit-sharing experiment adopted by a large English manufacturing firm, which sought by means of this plan to solve the three great problems of increased production, better relations between employer and employee, and stabilized profits. Rotarian Morris explained the manner in which the scheme was worked out by a joint committee representing the directors and the employees. The fullest information as to the company's operations was placed before the committee, and the profits to be divided were recognized as the difference between the trading income of the company and its operating expenses after a proper allowance had been made for the wages of capital. Provision was made for sharing of the profits at brief intervals, with a re-adjustment at the end of each year, and the scheme was expected to result in increased production, and at the same time remove from the mind of the worker the distrust and suspicion of capital that sometimes interferes with successful industrial growth. At the same time the consumer was not to be forgotten, for it was realized that profits passed on high prices could not be counted upon as permanent.

Mr. Morris' clear-cut diagnosis of the plan was appreciated by the members.

Rotarian Thos. Barrie, chairman of the committee appointed re a campaign for complete education, reported that after an investigation of local conditions, it would be wasted effort to urge boys and girls to look forward to a complete Collegiate course and then the University, because the accommodation of the Collegiate Institute is taxed to its utmost.

The committee will provide speakers to address pupils on technical, professional or commercial topics, and will advise or explain any line of work in which Rotarians are engaged.

At the same time Chairman Barrie suggested that any efforts to increase the facilities for higher and secondary education should be backed by all Rotary members.

President John Crane informed the members of the bereavement sustained by Rotarian Ed. Wright in the death of his mother, and the secretary was instructed to send him a letter of condolence.

At least twenty-five members of the Peterborough Club left for Toronto this afternoon to attend the big Rotary gathering at the King Edward to-night, at which it is expected about 1,000 Rotarians will be present.

Among the guests to-day was Mr. Jack Comstock.

Lonely Wives

Here are three of the beauties from the harem of the deposed Turk Sultan, Mohammed IV. They are described by the new rulers, who are puzzled by the ladies' predicament, as "beautiful, religious and affectionate."

$5 FOR PLACE AT MURDER HEARING

Sensational Trial at Famous Old Bailey in London, England.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—When Old Bailey opened this morning for the trial of Mrs. Edith Thompson and Frederick Bywaters, charged with the murder of Perry Thompson, Mrs. Thompson's husband, Bywaters is alleged to have stabbed Thompson while the latter was escorting wife home from the theatre.

Seats in the famous court were at a premium, and some persons among the hundreds waiting in line offered as much as five dollars for a favorable place. Many of the unemployed took advantage of interest in trial by selling their places in the line.

Tells of Slaying

Bywaters claimed self defence, but the prosecution has produced a mass of correspondence between Mrs. Thompson and himself in an effort to prove that the two deliberately planned to remove the woman's husband.

Bywaters, when he resumed the stand, in describing how he came to stab Thompson, contended that he thought the latter was about to shoot him, and so he drew a knife, which he habitually carried. The witness had been adjured by his counsel: "Tell it your own way, and take your own time," and he spoke slowly, illustrating the scuffle by his gestures, and pausing now and then to permit the judge to take down his words.

Then the solicitor-general began his examination. Bywaters in his direct examination had termed Mrs. Thompson's letters as "melodrama", and now he explained the remark by saying: "She had a vivid way of describing herself; she would read a book and imagine herself one of the characters.')' Some of the allusions which the prosecution contends referred to a poison plot, Bywaters explained as merely referring to a suicide pact, and he declared with the utmost emphasis that Mrs. Thompson had never suggested to him about removing her husband. The letter about "enough to kill an elephant," Bywaters said had reference merely to quinine, and when pressed by counsel to say whether he gave Mrs. Thompson quinine to help her commit suicide, he replied: "I was pulling her leg." As for the broken glass and electric light bulb he said: "I understood that to have been a lie from her to me about what she had taken herself."

In much the same way Bywaters explained every other apparently damning passage concerning persons and the quotations from the novel "Belladonna", but when counsel pointed out that in one letter Mrs. Thompson wrote: "I know I shall never get him to take a sufficient quantity," he replied: "I think she made a mistake and wrote him instead of me."

BOTH FOUND GUILTY.

LONDON, Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press.) — Frederick Bywaters and Mrs. Edith Thompson were found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Thompson's husband, Percy Thompson, by a jury in the Old Bailey to-day, and sentenced to death.

CROP REPORT

Following is a summary of reports made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

One of the brighest features of the season is the fact that owing to the remarkable open fall, farmers have their work well in hand for entering the winter. Fall plowing was done last week in several counties. In some quarters both east and west however, alarm is expressed at the scarcity of water for live stock and for household purposes, a number of wells having practically dried up for the time.

Prices for apples in Halton are quoted as follows: No. 1 Spies $6 a barrel; No. 2 $4; Baldwins, No. 1, $5.50; No. 2 $4.50; Snows, No. 1, $8; Russets, No. 1, $5; Domestics, $5.50; Keiffer pears, from $5 to $6 a barrel. Brant says: "There have been far less roots hauled since winter set in as farmers are reluctant to sell at the low price of 8c. per bushel."

Ha yis selling at prices ranging from $12 to $16 a ton.

Peel has a place in the front rank of raisers of alfalfa seed, six of the eight first prizes in that line at the recent Royal Show held in Toronto having been awarded to growers from that county. Growers there have a considerable quantiy of first-class seed on hand.

Frontenac puts the local yield of honey at about ten per cent. below the average per colony.

Lambton says: "The farmer's income this year falls below normal. The consequent result is reflected in many lines of business. However, the men of the county are confident of the future. Every farmer is feeding the normal number of cattle of previous years. The demand for young cattle, brood sows and herd bulls is very good, but at prices corresponding to the farmers' buying power."

Peel and Waterloo also state that a number of cattle are being brought in for feeding. Kenora says that some farmers went to Winnipeg and brought back cattle to use up the surplus fodder. One farmer secured seventy-nine head at prices ranging from 1 1-2 to 2 3-4 cents a lb.

Brant says: "A very large number of cattle have been shipped to this county this fall for feeding. One drover alone who pretty well supplies the district north of Paris, has sent in over sixteen carloads. Feeders recently have been sold at about 5 1-2c. laid down, while at the same time fairly good butcher cattle are bought locally from 6 to 7c. Fat cattle fitted for the Winter Fair recently sold at 10 1-2c. per lb., while lambs for a similar purpose sold at 16c. This of course is above the market price."

Halton reports an increase of ten per cent. in the price of milk paid producers.

Leeds states that many cheese factories have shut down for the winter but that a few are running once or twice a week.

Fresh cows are selling in the Fort William disfrict at from $90 to $110, but theer is no demand for dry cows.

Grey says: "Considerable interest is being taken in the hog grading work, and we find everywhere farmers are asking for information and breeding stock of the approved bacon type."

Some heavy shipments of hogs were made last week from South Simcoe prices running around $10 a cwt.

Turkey Days were held in Napanee on the 29th and 30th of November. It is estimated that 106 tons of dressed poultry of all classes, valued at approximately $73,000 were sold on the market during the two days.

BEARINGS ON TRAINS SHOW LITTLE WEAR.

Experiments on Roller Device By Pennsylvania Co. Gratifying.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—(Associated Press.)—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company is experimenting with roller bearings for passenger coaches simiar to those adopted by the State Railways of Sweden. For about a year six "P-70" coaches on the Pennsylvania have been in operation with barrel shaped roller bearings, but, according to mechanical experts of the compaiy there has not been sufficient time to draw definite conclusions from the test. It is said by the company that so far the bearings have shown very little wear.

One of the things expected to be accomplished in equipping railroad stock with roller bearings is the lessening of the tractive effort required to start a train which would result according to railroad authorities, in a saving of fuel.

ELECTRIFICATION OF PRESENT LINES TO BE CONSIDERED

Sir Henry Thornton Says Each Line Will Have to Be Considered Individually.

SHOPS REMAIN.

STRATFORD, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—While in the city yesterday on a visit to Hon. W. C. Kennedy, Minister of Railways, who is convalescing at the home of his sister, Mrs. K. P. King, Sir Henry Thornton was reminded of the statement of W. D. Robb when in the city several months ago that plans for a large addition of the local shops were being held in abeyance until business conditions improved.

While admitting that he did not know of the existence of such plans, Sir Henry said that the tendency where you have large shops is to add to them.

"The railway property here looks all right—I think we will keep it," added Sir Henry, smilingly.

Queries as to the possible electrification of lines, Sir Henry admitted that this would be considered in common with other matters in divising means for the improvement of the service. He stated that electrification would depend on no one condition, but that each line would have to be considered individually.

Asked regarding the possible electrification of the Stratford-London and Stratford-Goderich lines, he stated that he did not know anything about conditions on these lines, but that they would be considered in due course. Sir Henry was accompanied to the city by Major Graham Bell, Deputy Minister of Railways and Vice-President of the Canadian National Railways, together with a number of railway officials. The President spent some time with the Minister of Railways, Mr. Kennedy.

SILENT LETTERS NOW COST MUCH MONEY.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Associated Press).—French is known to be a language replete with letters silent so far as pronounciation is concerned; English also has a goodly number of examples of lettering regarded in some quarters as wasteful. Strike out every letter and symbol not essential in each language, and the total of the yearly printing bills in both countries should be reduced be $40,000,000.

This computation has been made by French and English statisticians with time on their hands and an interest in the bizarre.

In the periodicals published in France it was found that 108,000,000,000 letters are used yearly whereof 13 per cent are useless. Casting these aside would reduce French printing costs by $2,500,000.

In English periodicals it was estimated that 12 per cent of the printed letters and symbols are unnecessary, and that the space consumed on printed sheets by these unused letters costs about $37,500,000 a year.

PREMIER LAW SAYS ENGLAND READY TO CANCEL FRENCH DEBT

If Such a Plan is Accepted Reparations Settlement Satisfactory to Great Britain Must Be Made.

OTHER PLANS.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press)—Premier Bonar Law caused a sensation at the second session of the Allied Premiers Saturday, when, in the course of his reply to M. Poincare's moratorium plan, he gave clear indication that the British Government would be quite willing to reconsider the question of cancellation of the French debt, provided such a step was made possible by a reparations settlement satisfactory to Great Britain.

Mr. Bonar Law had previously intimated that the United States' insistence on the payment of the British debt had made it very difficult for England to discuss remission of the French war debt.

The British Prime Minister's declarations at the afternoon meeting greatly encouraged Premier Poincare, who was extremely pessimistic early in the day over the outcome of the conversations.

While the Premiers are far from an accord as yet, it was said by the French delegation last evening that Mr. Bonar Law's pronouncement on the debts had made an agreement much more likely.

Premier Bonar Law began by saying that the Balfour note no longer existed for the British Government and that he was free to consider the whole question.

"I am prepared to reconsider the question of cancellation of debts," he went on, "if such a cancellation would insure a settlement satisfactory to the British Government."

M. Poincare expressed deep pleasure at the British attitude.

The British Prime Minister briefly outlined the kind of settlement he desired—a moratorium sufficient for Germany to re-establish her finance and credit and stabilize the mark, no military action of any character by the French and a reduction of the indemnity to between thirty and forty billion gold marks.

This statement is expected to have the effect of making M. Poincare more conciliatory and less inclined to talk about military measures, although he, himself, believes that military measure would not prove very effective.

Another new element which may help the conference to an agreement developed tonight when it became known that Karl Bergmann, German reparations chief, had arrived in London with Chancellor Cuno's new scheme for a settlement.

Belgian Plan.

The Belgian plan presented by Premiers Theunys at the meeting of the Allied Premiers yesterday calls for a two years' moratorium for Germany and a loan to be participated in by all nations at the rate of 5,000,000,000 gold marks per year for seven years, making a total of 35,000,000,000.

This should represent the total reparations indemnity. The loan will be guaranteed by the wealth of the German republic.

According to this plan, the German debt would be reduced to between thirty and forty billion gold marks and France must abandon all of military or economic pressure on Germany. The Germans would be required to effect rigid financial reforms including balancing the budget and stabilizing the mark. Part of this loan would be handed over to Germany for that purpose.

The Belgians propose postponement of the Brussels conference, until the end of January of the middle of February. Their plan will probably be discussed Monday.

At the present time Cuba is providing approximately one-fourth of the world's supply of sugar and 60 per cent of the sugar conumed in the United States.

O. T. A. the Cause of Big Crime Increase

CHATHAM, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Owing to the large increase in crime in Kent County, it has been found necessary to appoint an assistant to High Constable George Peters. Wilfrid Peters, his son, has been appointed to the position by the County Council. When High Constable Peters was first appointed there was an average of about sixty cases in the County Police Court a year. That number has now increased to 600 or 700 in a year. A large number of these cases are under the Ontario Temperance Act.

DIVORCE IS MADE EASIER IN ENGLAND

First Trials Under New Laws Attracts But Little Attention in Leeds and Manchester.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press)—Leeds and Manchester both experienced this week their first divorce trials under the new regulations which afford inexpensive dispensation of justice for the poorer classes. Only undefended actions were taken and the proceedings were efficient to the point of dullness. The sittings attracted no more than the usual number of idle spectators.

The court in an average hours work disposed of a dozen cases. A remarkable number of the petitions were presented by men. The recital became almost monotonous of how the wife became unfaithful when the husband was on active service. All cases taken in the provinces are concerned with persons of limited means wealthier applicants for freedom for matrimonial bonds having still to appear in London.

OFFER REWARD FOR CAPTURE OF BURNS.

CHATHAM, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—The county authorities have offered a reward of $200 for information leading to the arrest of Clarence L. Johnston, alias Burns, who is wanted on a charge of burglarizing stores in the town of Wallaceburg.

Mrs. Johnston, the wife of the man now sought, and William Arntfield, manager of the Wallaceburg Gas Company, are now under arrest here charged with the crime, and it is, as a result of the statements of these two prisoners, that the police are seeking Johnston. It is said Arntfield has confessed.

Terrible Headaches And Dizziness

Mrs. S. Raphael, 237 Kenilworth Ave. N., Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"I used to suffer from terrible headaches and dizziness. Last Summer, while I was walking up a side street, I got a dizzy spell and fell in the middle of the road. An old gentleman helped me to get to where I was going and told me to get a vial of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. Well, I did, and they did wonders for me. I don't know how to thank you, as I don't get headaches or dizzy spells any more."

When your liver gets sluggish and inactive your whole health suffers, and the only way to keep well is to keep the liver active and performing its proper functions by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills.

Peterboro Farmers Ready To Aid the Fire Sufferers

Farmers of This District Make Urgent Appeal For Contributions of Grain, Hay and Straw to Be Sent to the Fire Sufferers of Northern Ontario.

To the Farmers of Peterborough District:

It is now two months since the terrible fire swept over the Timiskaming District, and the burned-over land is now covered with snow. To the credit of humanity may it be said, little suffering has been experienced. True, great discomfiture has been endured, but the evidences of sympathy from the outside world and the natural buoyancy and enthusiasm of the settlers have made light of the situation, and gloom has been swept aside. Still, springtime and new growth is a long way off in the North Country, and, therefore, the reservoir of aid must not dry up too soon lest a good record be spoiled.

Feed for stock—hay, oats, straw—are needed, and will be needed for at least six months. Potatoes, vegetables, and apples for those in want are needed in large quantities. Free transportation will soon cease; probably by Christmas or the New Year. This will add greatly to the cost of providing as freight charges will eat up much of the value of shipments. Therefore, we are again, even though you have responded nobly to all requests, asking for donations of these more bulky products. Many farmers can contribute a few tons of hay or straw. The trouble of pressing is the greatest obstacle to the gift, but this can be overcome by getting your local hay baler, whether he presses by ton or as a dealer, to establish his press for a few days at a convenient point on the railway where those contributing hay and straw can haul their quota to be baled. A carload a day could be easily secured in this way, with but little trouble. If a presser will not do the work free as his contribution, hire him, and the Fire Relief Committee will pay his bill. Those who cannot give hay or straw might be able to give oats, potatoes, vegetables, or fruit.

A great campaign of relief will soon be in motion. Urban municipalities will be urged to give money, and no doubt will give, as money is plentiful with them. Farmers can give in the way outlined above, which will be just as valuable and much less felt than if they were called on to donate money. We want to prove our dignity as self-respeating, generous and benevolently disposed citizens anxious to stand by the unfortunate in our industry, that no suffering be endured.

The committee appointed by the Peterborough U.F.O. Club some little time ago to make arrangements for getting a car of oats for the northern relief, will be prepared to receive contributions of oats or mixed grain in sacks, delivered at G. A. Gillespie's storehouse at rear of Perkins Ince Company's wholesale house on Charlotte street, on December 15 and 16.

Some of the committee will be there from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day.

Money contributions will be thankfully receved and used by the committee in charge to purchase grain, W. R. Shield, W. Garbutt, J. Thompson B. Savigny.

Possibly by contributing to the fire sufferers' relief, we might the bettter enjoy our Christmas festivities.

GERMANY WILL PAY ONE MILLION MARKS

Note is Sent to the Council of Ambassadors Complying With Demand and Renewing Apology.

PARIS, Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press)—A German note, complying with the demands of the Council of Ambassaors for one million gold marks as indemnity and a renewed apology for the recent attacks on Inter-Allied military control officers at Passau and Ingoldstadt, in Bavaria, was delivered yesterday at the Foreign Office.

The note, previously published in Berlin, says the one million marks is at the disposal of the Allies. It repeats Germany's former apology, but protests against proposed Allied exactions if Germany still refuses to remove the burgomasters of Passau and Ingoldstandt. It elected declares Germany, is pewerless to do this, as the burgomasters were elected by an autonomous adminstration, but asserts that certain disciplinary measures have been taken.

The note adds that the Central Government sends the reply to the Council of Ambassadors in its own name as that, it, and not Bavaria is the proper authority to conduct international affairs.

Canada's Success at the International Live Stock Exhibition in Chicago Was Very Marked.

IN ALL CLASSES.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—The story of how the Canadians swept away most of the prizes in the hay and grain show of the 23rd annual International Livestock Exposition, which ended Saturday night, is the talk of the Exposition. record-breaking attendance of about 450,000 people packed the arena during the week.

Canada won a goodly share of prizes throughout the meeting. In horses, Albert Lawson of Darlingford, Man., Irving Winslow of Winnipeg and J. T. McCallum of Forrest, Man., were among the Canadians who won prizes. The sweepstakes in wheat and oats and first prizes in barley and rye were won easily by Dominion entries. Premiums were gathered up in the seed division, the only other division in which Canadian entrants were heavy.

In the cattle, swine and sheep divisions Canadians did well. Especially in the latter were the Canadian entries prominent in the list of prize winners. Among those who took a grand championship back to the Dominion was Robert McEwen of London, Ont., who won the highest honors in his division on his South Down sheep. Others who stood high in the honor list in the sheep division were John Kelsey of Woodville, James Snell of Clinton, H. M. Lee of Highgate, Jos. Linden of Deerfield and James Parkinson of Guelph, all of Ontario.

In the heavy horse division the Manitoba Department of Agriculture scored when they won the grand and senior championships in the Clydesdale division, Graham Brothers of Claremont, Ont., getting the reserve champion. Most of the Canadian entries left for home early yesterday.

Next year most of them will return when Mexico may be allowed to enter, making it a truly international affair. Meetings between Mexicans, Canadians and representatives of the United States to decide on the advisability of admitting Mexico will be held next week.

Record Year For Grain Shipments

FORT WILLIAM, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—That the present season will prove to be the high water mark in the movement of grain in Canada is indicated by figures released by the Lake Shippers' Clearance Association here Saturday. During November more than seventy million bushels were shipped from the head of the lakes elevators. During the period September 1 to November 30, outgoing shipments totalled 185,093,000 bushels of all grain. In the same period for 1915 the shipments totalled 119,000,000 bushels, and the grand total for that year reached 174,519,000 bushels, a record up to that time.

Already this year's movements have exceeded this record by ten and a half million bushels and the season is not yet ended.

VICE-PRESIDENT IS GUILTY OF VAGRANCY

William Ryan's Sentence is Reserved Pending Outcome of Other Changes.

EDMONTON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—William Ryan, Vice-President of district 18, United Mine Workers of America, was found guilty in City Police Court on Saturday of a technical charge of vagrancy and sentence was reserved by Magistrate McLeod until other charges of assault, intimidation and of obstructing a peace officer are heard.

The charge against Ryan Saturday was that he did accost W. J. McPeak and a miner as they were driving towards the mine and that Ryan, opening the door of the car in which they were passengers shouted, "Having you any scabs in here?"

Finding the accused guilty, Magistrate McLeod, said he is entire sympathy with all the lawful attempts of labor to secure a betterment of their conditions. 'If men organize to better their condition, that is their business. On the other hand, if a man wishes to work he is entitled to do so and should have the protection of the law if he keeps within the law."

SERIOUS FIRE DOES GREAT DAMAGE TO BLOCK IN WINDSOR

Flames Did Damage Estimated at Close to $100,000 —Started in Basement.

BANK BURNED.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Damage estimated close to -100,000 was caused by a fire that broke out early yesterday morning in the basement of the McGregor block on Pitt street west, and which before it was extinguished five hours later had gutted the building from the basement up.

The first floor of the building, which is situated across a narrow alley from the main Post Office, was occupied by the Molsons Bank, Holley's automobile accessories shop and a United Cigar store. Upstairs the entire floor was used as a billiard room, owned by Henry Simpson.

Starting in the basement, the flames spread rapidly and soon enveloped the entire building, which is of brick construction.

Today when the ruins have cooled sufficiently, the bank vault will be opened. Bank officials are confident that their records and cash will be found intact as the vault is fireproof. The origin of the fire has not been determined. The building is owned by Malcolm McGregor, a Detroit attorney.

TOO MUCH TAXATION.

We in this country who have seen the Dominion debt increase eight times in the last eight years, our Provincial debts double, and municipal debts double or treble—all on the same base of population—have to understand that those burdens which from a national overhead narrow by a great deal ,the opportunity to do business at a profit in business that stimulates trade, says the Mail and Empire. If taxes eat up the possible margin between the cost of production, and market value, then taxes kill business. At the root of our national problems of production and commerce lies in this issue of taxation far too heavy to be borne successfully unless we have a period of growth. Duplication of taxation has to be avoided; "promotions" that tax the public purse far more than the public gains from them have to be avoided; immigration has to be greatly enlarged, without excessive cost to the country; foreign markets enlarged; the cost of governing cut down radically. Expensive and uselss commissions, superfluous civil servants, extravagant social welfare outlays need elimination. It may be difficult to do this, but the country's welfare insistently requires that it be done.

NOT FOR THE SWISS.

British advocates of a levy on capital must have found scant pleasure in the returns of the Swiss referendum on this proposition.

The people of Switzerland refused to be lured into trying this Socialistic experiment, and by a vote of 700,000 against 100,000—surely a decisive enough expression of opinion—they decided against the plan.

The Socialist Party evidently misjudged the common sense of the Swiss.

The mere fact that a plebiscite was taken, however, was sufficient to afford the world a good object lesson on what the infliction of a levy upon capital would mean.

The last few weeks before the referendum in Switzerland served to show the folly of the Socialistic plan.

Business fell to pieces, property was offered for sale everywhere, with no takers, 20 new enterprises were lost, and nearly everybody who had any money tried to get it out of the country in fear of the proposal being adopted.

In spite of the difficulty of getting cash, it is stated that a thousand million dollars were sent out of Switzerland, and no gold or silver was obtainable.

The condition of affairs created by the mere danger of a levy in short was such as to convince any person of average common sense that a levy on capital is not only unfair and illogical, but that the end sought would not be served.

THE P.A.A.A. APPEAL.

The record of the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association as set forth in its appeal to the public on Saturday surely entitles the organisation to confidently ask for the support of the community.

It is indisputable that more Peterborough people have participated in organised sport since the inception of the P.A.A.A. than at any other period in the city's history.

That and not the winning of championships is the real object of the Association, although the two things often go together.

Naturally the more people that can be induced to engage in sport, the more material there is available for the teams that represent Peterborough in outside competition.

Any movement that makes it possible for large numbers of citizens of both sexes to participate in healthful recreation is doing a splendid community service and is deserving of general support and assistance.

In its first year the Amateur Athletic Association has proved itself willing and capable of such service, and if it is backed by the co-operation of the public, there is every reason to expect still greater progress along this line in the coming year.

To borrow a commercial term, the P.A.A.A. has "sold" itself during the past twelve months and should have the general confidence of the people of Peterborough in its commendable efforts to provide recreation facilities for the public.

When the membership campaign is concluded, the P.A.A.A. roll should contain at least 1500 names.

THE FIRE RELIEF FUND.

Half-page advertisements in the newspapers of the Province continue to call attention to the desperate need of the fire sufferers of Northern Ontario, and appeal to the generosity of the people.

It is to be feared the response will not be general or generous enough to cope with the emergency.

Meanwhile the Ontario Government does nothing, and the municipalities, with a few notable exceptions, refuse to offer any aid, and throw the onus upon Queen's Park.

To the people of the Northland it must be humiliating to watch the game of shuttlecock that is being played by the Government and the municipalities.

They are proud folk, most of those brave souls who are trying to re-establish their homes in the fire area.

Only grim necessity would force them to accept aid from anyone.

They don't relish having to accept what they feel is charity, and how galling it must be for them to know that the older part of the Province is trying to shirk its plain duty.

There should have been no fiasco, no adding of humiliation to the already heavy load of trouble that has to be carried by the fire sufferers.

The Ontario Government should have acted promptly and passed a grant large enough to meet the needs of the situation.

That was the business-like and effective method.

But the Provincial administration tried to shoulder the responsibility upon the municipalities, who in turn pass the buck batck to the Government — and nothing is done.

Neither the Government nor the municipalities have any reason to feel proud.

What is to be done now?

Are the municipalities satisfied that they have done all that could be expected of them in passing a resolution setting forth the opinion that the Government should act?

Or are they going to endeavour, by united action, to impress upon the Government the necessity of the Province undertaking the relief work that must be done?

Resolutions make a poor shelter when the winter blizzards are sweeping over the North.

REPRESENTATIVES—NOT RUBBER STAMPS.

In his letter to The Examiner on Saturday, Mr. B. Markson attempts to justify the theory advanced by some of the Progressive Party that the Progressive members of Parliament should be controlled by the Farmer Clubs of their constituency.

"Parliament is like a diplomatic conference, and diplomats are never given an absolute free hand in drawing up treaties," he concludes.

With the Marksonian conception of Parliament The Examiner must confess to be completely out of accord.

Members of Parliament go to Ottawa to legislate for the people of Canada, not merely for a class machine in their home ridings.

They have to deal with problems about which the parochial politicians around the town pump know little or nothing.

If they are to be shackled by interference on the part of the local group which supported them, they are not members of Parliament at all, but merely instructed delegates, nothing but rubber stamps.

As such, they ae of no service whatever to Canada.

Mr. Markson notwithstanding, members of Parliament must be given a free hand to act as they consider in the best interests of the whole country.

Local sentiment is not always a sure guide, and the member at Ottawa gets a different light upon important matters, because he is brought into touch with views fom all parts of the Dominion.

Extremists, of course, resent such a change.

They do not like to see a howling radical converted to more conservative views.

As our correspondent puts it, speaking of English politics, "The trouble with Labour representatives in the past has been that shortly after they are sent to Parliament, they break off contact with the local organisations that got them there, adopt an independent attitude and eventually succumb to their changed environment and associations. It has so happened with some of the most radical leaders in the past."

In other words these men have broadened out and have learned to think nationally rather than parochially.

They come to Parliament filled with bitterness against the capitalistic class, and they find that there is, after all, some merit in their opponents and some times two sides to a question.

Their changed viewpoint may be displeasing to some of their followers, but it is a national gain.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Rush of Christmas shopping is supposed to have been the cause of the suicide of a Hamilton clerk. The moral is plain.

Doubtless Sir Henry Thornton hopes that the Canadian National Railways have better terminal facilities than some of the speakers he has to listen to at banquets.

Municipal candidates will soon be forced out into the open, for Nomination Day is a week from Friday. Gossip is naming a lot of them, but the aspirants themselves are as communicative as the oyster.

With The Telegram and The Globe on one side and the Mail and Star on the other, there is evidently no politics in the Toronto radial fight. It is a warm argument, nevertheless.

The Farmers' Convention this week promises to bring a showdown between the Drury and Morrison forces, although the expected fireworks may not materialise, and the session may turn out to be a love feast.

Probabilities in New Zealand call for a long wet spell.

The edict in Maine against the use of ice in beverages seems to indicate that the ice in that State is not what it has been cracked up to be.

A man writes to a Toronto paper to say that the way the girls dress nowadays is a puzzle to him. However, it is a puzzle that is easy to see through.

They never learn. A woman was seen this morning buying a man's tie of a yellow hue, embellished with purple spots. There's trouble ahead for somebody.

Cobalt has decided that all taxpayers who are in arrears will not be allowed to vote at the coming elections. That wouldn't be considered much punishment in Peterborough, where half the electors don't bother to vote anyway.

LITERARY GEMS

CROWS.

The little footsteps of the rain are still,
The soft, gray veils of mist are frayed and torn,
The sun's gold fingers touch the sleeping hill,
And minstrel winds salute the rosy morn.
Once more the dear illusion blinds the eyes
With summer's beauty, and once more the blue
Of vanished August paints the autumn skies,
And we forget what yesterday we knew.....
For this moment we dare ignore
That winter threatens; we may laugh and run
Thorugh gardens still in bloom, on earth's green floor,
And drink, with eager lips, the heady sun.....
And we remember . . . as we pause to hear
Harsh voices, crying out in sombre pain,
Tho' summer lingers, winters ways are near.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Peterborough Dec. 11th 1922.

Dear Sir,—I am pleased to see that the P.A.A.A. have enough respect for the Sabbath day to not open the dressing rooms at Lake Street on that day we would have been disappointed in the P.A.A.A. if it had not. Nevertheless that does not remove the stain from the skirts of the Alderman, who would encourage Sabbath desegration. Very few people in the city of Peterboro cares to see our municipality encourage anything that would put a cloud on our Canadian Sabbath. People as individuals act on their own responsibility. No sane person could object to the bathing beeches being open on Sundays during the summer months from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m. and from 4 p.m. till 7 p.m. providing they are property supervised and those using them compelled to just take a quiet bath. They must not be allowed to become a public nuisance the Lake street bathing beech was abused to a large extent the past season. Thanking you. I remain,

Yours truly,
W. H. Merrill.

SON WAS LASHED TO BED FOR FOUR YEARS.

Reduced to Skeleton and Mental Wreck When Released.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Strapped to a bed, and lashed hand and foot, for four years by his mother who did not want to lose him, James Kozeny, 30 years of age, was rescued to-day by the police, who broke into the mystery house and found him in an unspeakable, filthy, dark, cold room.

When his bonds were cut Kozeny was unable to move. Four years of inaction had made him a helpless skeleton and a mental wreck. Before they could cut him loose two detectives had to subdue his mother, who fought like a tigress.

The mother said her son had been twice in the Asylum for the Insane at Dunning. She said he was demented because of an accident in youth. She talked confusedly of relatives "who are trying to spirit him away" in order to get possession of money she claims was left him.

The mother said that because of his screaming she had removed him to the tight little room in the basement. There he was "spreadeagled," with feet and hands tied to the four corners of the bed. He had been in this position for four years ,a nd had become so weak that he did not scream any more.

POSTAGE STAMP DEALERS EXPECT GOOD BUSINESS

PARIS, Dec 11. — (Associated Press).—The Ferrari sale of postage stamps, which has brought hundreds of collectors to the city, is by far the largest sale ever recorded in Paris. Many of the stamps are bringing record prices, and the bidding is spirited.

More interest has been shown in stamp collecting since the war than ever before, according to dealers, and with the return to normal times the populaity among amateurs is expected to make huge profits for the traders everywhere.

600 MILLION CREDIT FOR FARMS PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Administration's program for rural credits legislation has become more definitely outlined with the simultaneous introduction in House and Senate of an amended credits bill, with new features declared to have the support of Secretary Henry C. Wallace of the Agriculture Departmena as well as of officials of the Treasury Department and the Federal Farm Loan Board.

Introduced by Senator Irvine L. Lenroot, (Rep.) Wisconsin, and Rep. Sidney Anderson (Rep.) Minnesota, author and chairman respectively of the congressional agricultural commission, the bill would utilize the existing federal farm loan system as a basis by creating within it a farm credits departmena, through which it was declared, potential credit facilities would be provided for farmers short and long term loans to the extent of at least $600,000,000.

The 12 farm loan banks at present have Government subscriptons totalling only $12,000,000, but under the new bill they would be provided with a revolving fund subscribed by the Government totalling $60,000,000, divided equally among the 12 banks.

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

By A. A. MILNE

Antony looked up at Bill in surprise.

"Didn't you hear what he said?"

"What, particularly?"

"That it was Cayley's idea to drag the pond."

"Oh! Oh, I say!" Bill was rather excited again. "You mean that he's hidden something there? Some false clue which he wants the police to find?"

"I hope so," said Antony earnestly, "but I'm afraid—" He stopped short.

"Well?"

"What's the safest place in which to hide anything very important?"

"Somewhere where nobody will look."

"There's a better place than that."

"What?"

"Somewhere where everybody has already looked."

"By Jove! You mean that as soon as the pond has been dragged, Cayley will hide something there?"

"Yes, I'm afraid so."

"But why afraid?"

"Because I think that it must be something very important, something which couldn't easily be hidden anywhere else."

"What?" asked Bill eagerly.

Antony shook his head.

"No, I'm not going to talk about it yet. We can wait and see what the inspector finds. He may find something that Cayley has put there for him to find. But if he doesn't, then it will be because Cayley is going to hide something there tonight."

"What?" asked Bill again.

"You will see what, Bill," said Antony; "because we shall be there."

"Are we going to watch him?"

"Yes, if the inspector finds nothing."

"That's good," said Bill.

If it were a question of Cayley or the law, he was quite decided as to which side he was taking. Previous to the tragedy of yesterday he had got on well enough with both of the cousins, without being in the least intimate with either.

Yet, though he had hesitated to define his position that morning in regard to Mark, he did not hesitate to place himself on the side of the law against Cayley. Mark after all, had done him no harm, but Cayley had committed an unforgivable offence. Cayley had listened secretly to a private conversation between himself and Tony. Let Cayley hang, if the law demanded it.

Antony looked at his watch and stood up.

"Come along," he said. "It's time for that job I spoke about."

"The passage?" said Bill eagerly.

"No; the thing which I said that I had to do this afternoon."

Without saying anything, Antony led the way indoors to the office.

It was three o'clock, and at three o'clock yesterday Antony and Cayley had found the body. At a few minutes after three, he had been looking out of the window of the adjoining room, and had been surprised suddenly to find the door open and Cayley behind him. He had vaguely wondered at the time why he had expected the door to be shut, but he had no time then to worry the thing out, and he had promised himself to look into it at his leisure afterward. He had decided that three o'clock that afternoon should find him once more in the office.

As he went into the room, followed by Bill, he felt it almost as a shock that there was now no body of Robert lying there between the two doors. But there was a dark stain which showed where the dead man's head had been, and Antony knelt down over it, as he had knelt twenty-four hours before.

"I want to go through it again," he said. "You must be Cayley. Cayley said he would get some water. Now then, Bill, just pretend you're Cayley. You've just said something about water, and you get up."

Feeling that it was all a little uncanny, Bill, who had been kneeling beside his friend, got up and walked out. Antony, as he had done on the previous day, looked up after him as he went. Bill turned into the room on the right, and came back.

"Well?" he said wonderingly.

Antony shook his head.

"It's all different," he said. "For one thing, you made a devil of a noise in there and Cayley didn't."

"Perhaps you weren't listening when Cayley went in?"

"I wasn't. But I should have heard him if I could have heard him, and I should have remembered afterward."

"Perhaps Cayley shut the door after him."

"Wait!"

He pressed his hand over his eyes and thought. It wasn't anything which he had heard, but something which he had seen. He tried desperately hard to see it again. . . . He saw Cayley getting up, opening the door from the office, leaving it open and walking into the passage, turning to the door on the right, opening it, going in, and then—What did his eyes see after that? If they would only tell him again!

HE TRIED DESPERATELY HARD TO SEE IT AGAIN.

Suddenly he jumped up, his face alight. "Bill, I've got it!" he cried.

"What?"

"The shadow on the wall! I was looking at the shadow on the wall. Oh, ass, and ten times ass!"

Bill looked uncomprehendingly at him. Antony took his arm and pointed to the wall of the passage.

"Look at the sunlight on it," he said. "That's because you've left the door of that room open. The sun comes straight in through the windows. Now, I'm going to shut the door. Look! D'you see how the shadow moves across? That's what I saw—the shadow moving across as the door shut behind him. Bill, go in and shut the door behind you—quite naturally. Quick!"

Bill went out and Antony knelt, watching eagerly.

"I thought so!" he cried. "I knew it couldn't have been that."

"What happened?" said Bill, coming back.

"Just what you would expect. The sunlight came, and the shadow moved back again—all in one movement."

"And what happened yesterday?"

"The sunlight stayed there; and then the shadow came very slowly back, and there was no noise of the door being shut."

Bill looked at him with startled eyes.

"By Jove! You mean that Cayley closed the door afterward—as an afterthought—and very quietly, so that you couldn't hear?"

Antony nodded.

"Yes. That explains why I was surprised afterward when I went into the room to find the door open behind me. You know how these doors with springs on them close!"

"The sort which old gentlemen have to keep out draughts?"

"Yes. Just at first they hardly move at all, and then very, very slowly they swing to—well, that was the way the shadow moved, and subconsciously I must have associated it with the movement of that sort of door. By Jove!" He got up, and dusted his knees. "Now, Bill, just to make sure, go in and close the door like that. As an afterthought, you know; and very quietly, so that I don't hear the click of it."

Bill did as he was told, and then put his head out eagerly to hear what had happened.

"That was it," said Antony, with absolute conviction. "That was just what I saw yesterday." He came out of the office, and joined Bill in the little room.

"And now," he said, "let's try and find out what it was that Mr. Cayley was doing in here, and why he had to be so very careful that his friend Mr. Gillingham didn't overhear him."

CHAPTER XIII

ANTONY'S first thought was that Cayley had hidden something—but that was absurd. In the time at his disposal, he could have done no more than put it away in a drawer, where it would be much more open to discovery by Antony than if he had kept it in his pocket.

Bill pulled open a drawer in the chest, and looked inside.

"Why did he keep clothes here at all?" Antony asked. "Did he ever change down here?"

"My dear Tony, he had more clothes than anybody in the world. He just kept them here in case they might be useful, I expect."

"I see. Yes." He was walking around the room as he answered, and he lifted the top of the linen basket which stood near the wash basin and glanced in. "He seems to have come in here for a collar lately."

Bill peered in. There was one collar at the bottom of the basket.

"Yes. I daresay he would," he agreed. "If he suddenly found that the one he was wearing was uncomfortable or a little bit dirty, or something. He was very finicking."

Antony leant over and picked it out.

"It must have been uncomfortable this time," he said, after examining it carefully. "It couldn't very well be cleaner." He dropped it back again. But what did Cayley come in for so secretly?"

"What did he want to shut the door for?" said Bill. "You couldn't have seen him, anyhow."

"No. So it follows he was going to do something which he didn't want me to hear."

"By Jove, that's it!" said Bill eagerly.

"Yes; but what?"

Bill frowned hopefully to himself, but no inspiration came.

"Well, let's have some air, anyway," he said at last, exhausted by the effort, and he went to the window, opened it, and looked out. Then, struck by an idea, he turned back to Antony and said, "Do you think I had better go up to the pond to make sure that they're still at it? Because—" He broke off suddenly at the sight of Antony's face.

"Oh, idiot, idiot!" Antony cried. "Oh, most super-excellent of Watsons! Oh, you lamb, you blessing! Oh, Gillingham, you incomparable ass!"

"What on earth—"

"The window, the window!" cried Antony, pointing to it.

Bill turned back to the window, expecting it to say something. As it said nothing, he looked at Antony again.

"He was opening the window!" cried Antony.

"Who?"

"Cayley, of course." Very gravely and slowly he expounded. "He came in here in order to open the window. He shut the door so that I shouldn't hear him open the window. He opened the window. I came in here and found the window open. I said, 'This window is open. My amazing powers of analysis tell me that the murderer must have escaped by this window.' 'Oh,' said Cayley, raising his eyebrows. 'Well,' said he, 'I suppose you must be right.' Said I proudly, 'I am. For the window is open.' I said, 'Oh, you incomparable ass!'"

SUCCEEDS WHERE DOCTORS FAIL

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Often Does That. Read Mrs. Miner's Testimony

Churubusco, N. Y.—"I was under the doctor's care for over five years for backache and had no relief from his medicine. One day a neighbor told me about your Vegetable Compound and I took it. It helped me so much that I wish to advise all women to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles and backache. It is a great help in carrying a child, as I have noticed a difference when I didn't take it. I thank you for this medicine and if I ever come to this point again I do not want to be without the Vegetable Compound. I give you permission to publish this letter so that all women can take my advice."—Mrs. FRED MINER, Box 102, Churubusco, N. Y.

It's the same story over again. Women suffer from ailments for years. They try doctors and different medicines, but feel no better. Finally they take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you can see its value in the case of Mrs. Miner.

All ailing women ought to try this medicine. It can be taken in safety by young or old, as it contains no harmful drugs.

POLICE OFFICER WAS FOUND DEAD.

Inquest is Being Held to Determine the Cause of Death.

BRIDGEBURG, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press.)— Not until a coroner's jury assembles on Saturday next at the Township Hall at Ridgeway, will it be determined from what cause John R. Smythe, Ontario Police Officer stationed at Fort Erie met his death. Smythe's body was pulled from under a touring car owned by a Canadian Customs officer, Charles A. Muir, which Smythe was driving Saturday night at 8 o'clock on the town line road between Port Colborne and Fort Erie.

No marks could be found on Smythe's body to indicate how death occurred.

VOTED YES ON POWER BY-LAW AT WARKWORTH

Hydro-Electric Will Be Installed in the Near Future.

WARKWORTH, Dec. 11. —The votes polled on the by-laws for the installation of power by the Hydro-Electric Commission resulted in both measures being carried by small majorities. The vote on the actual power by-law was 55 to 48, while that on the money question was 56 to 47. This means that the installation of Hydro Eectric power is a possibility in the very near future.

It is understood that I. H. Goodwin, who is the proprietor of the present privately owned plant, has had an offer from Mr. Cascellen, of Tamworth for the purchase of his plant, but the offer has not yet been accepted.

The power plant at Tamworth was destroyed by fire some time ago.

C. DAVIDSON FOR REEVE AT CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 11. — Charles Davidson, commonly known as "Big Chief," practically verifies the rumor that he will be a candidate for Reeve at the coming election, so we are gradually getting the line-up on what promises to be a real contest for municipal honors for 1923. Charles Pallister and Joseph Wilkinson have already announced their intentions of coming out for the position of Deputy-reeve. So far Mayor A. J. Meyers appears to have no opposition, the balance of the councillors are contented to sit tight, and with the exception of Deputy-reeve Nelson Stone, no other names have been mentioned for Reeve, but there may be some surprises on nomination night.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Lydia P. Rendle, will take place on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when service will be conducted by the Rev. C. E. Clarke at Christ church, and the remains laid to rest in the English church cemetery.

George street, which has been blocked for some time, owing to the laying of the Wellington street sewer, is again open to traffic, much to the acceptance of the baker and the milkman, who were getting weary of making detours.

LITTLE HOPE OF PREMIERS COMING TO AN AGREEMENT.

France Appears to Be the Chief Obstacle—Wants Guarantees.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press)—Possibility of four premiers reaching an agreement which will enable the Brussels Conference to assemble with any prospect of success seems to hang on an extremely tentative thread, as was all previous attempts to solve the reparations problems. The main difficulty lies in the French determination to secure penalties or guarantees of military character for fulfilment of German obligations.

The new British government is considered more favorable toward France than previous administration.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

A Successful Bazaar Held on Saturday Afternoon—Lodge Officers Elected — Personal Mention.

MILLBROOK, December 11. — A very successful bazaar was held in the Waverly parlours on Saturday afternoon under the auspices of the Missionary Department of the Young People's League, much credit being due to Mrs. G. W. Sayles, the 2nd vice-President of the organization, who was untiring in her efforts to have everything in connection with this annual event as attractive and enjoyable as possible and who had a general oversight of the various activities throughout the afternoon. While this bazaar is not planned on a large yet an enticing variety of dainty fancy articles, including aprons large and small, embroidered and plain, towels, infants' garments, dolls' accessories, work bags, etc., filled a long table near the entrance door. Miss E. Kenyon and Miss Estelle Hetherington, proving capable saleslades; an appetizing display of homemake baking, presided over by Misses Marian Spence and Lila Pethick, seldom lacked customers, while everyone was glad to see Miss Zeta Kenyon able to take charge of the booth where homemade candy found a ready sale.

The "Wide-Awakes," C.G.I.T. group served afternoon tea and a more substantial meal about 6 p.m., several of the business men and all who have been helping during the afternoon taking advantage of the latter fact and thus saving a trip home at the tea hour, the girls proving attentive and capable waitresses. Those assisting were Elsie Spence, Jean Burnham, Gladys Tucker, Lillian Dallimore, Hazel Sanderson, Margaret Lang, Myrtle Sloan, Marjorie Sayles, Wilma Fallis, Hazel and Flossie McMahon, Lillian, Aileen and Margaret Sanderson, and Kathleen Freelove. Practically everything was disposed of, the receipts being very satisfactory. The money raised by the missionary department goes toward the salary of the Rev. E. W. Hibbart, who represents the Peterboro district in West China.

The Young Woman.

A very large congregation was present last evening at the Methodist Church, when the pastor, Rev. H. B. Kenny, preached a very helpful sermon to young women, his subject being "The Young Woman, Her Peculiarities and Perils," basing his remarks on Genesis, chap. 3, verse 13: "And the Lord said unto the woman, What is this that thou hast done?" Men and women differ, morally and mentally, asserted the speaker, women possessing a keener insight or intuition, and being more deeply religious. Women today are entering professions, unknown to them a generation ago, having greaetr responsibilities, and consequently greater temptations, evil lurking in an alluring manner even on the streets. There should be no double standard of moral, asserted the speaker.

The large choir, under the efficient direction of its choir leader and organist, Mr. R. T. Cowell, A.R.C.O., rendered a couple of anthems in a manner which was highly appreciated.

FARMERS ADMIT THEY SHOULD GROW OWN FOOD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11— Farmers should produce more of their own foodstuffs and buy less that must be brought to the m by railroad according to a survey of opinion among 25,000 farmers made public Friday by the Department of Agriculture. Nearly 30 percent. of the food consumed by farmers and their families generally is not grown by them or in their immediate vicinity High freight rates tend to reduce the prices farmers receive for their products and at the same time increase the cost to them of the things they could buy from outside localities.

COL. J. M'MILLAN GAVE AN ADDRESS

Judge Huycke Presided at Large Gathering in Salvation Army Temple.

Yesterday afternoon, special services were held in the Salvation Army Temple, when an address was given by Colonel John McMillan, second in command of the Salvation Army in Canada. Colonel McMillan is a Canadian of Scotch descent, and has spent several years in the Salvation Army work in Australia. On his return to Canada he was made second in command of the Salvation Army in Canada.

Judge Huycke presided. "My admiration and respect for the work done by the Salvation Army," said Judge Huycke, "increases day by day." He also expressed surprise that while down east for the summer, he learned that Adjutant and Mrs. Bunton had been transferred from Peterborough to Ottawa. He was a great deal more surprised, on his return to the city, when he learned that his old friend, Adjt. Arthur Smith, had taken charge of the work in this city, and that Mrs. Smith had assumed the position of Police Matron.

The Main Address.

Colonel McMillan's address was particularly interesting and instructive. His text was the "Army of the Helping Hand." This large army consists of others besides the Salvation Army, stated the Colonel, but the Salvation Army made up a large part of this army.

Fifty-six years ago Salvation Army work was started by General and Mrs. Booth in the east end of London among the poorer classes of the people. To-day in every land in the world the Salvation Army can be found, faithfully doing its work. Change of the condition of things, continued Colonel McMillan, only brought about a change of heart. If the spirit of God be in the heart then a complete change is possible.

Work in Canada.

The work done by the Salvation Army in Canada during the last twelve months was reviewed by the speaker. Homes were provided for two thousand unfortunate mothers; sixteen hundred babies were born in the homes; seven hundred and eighty old men were taken from the jails, where they had been placed for food and shelter, and given homes and encouraged along the right way of life; two hundred prisoners' families were cared for, provisions sent to them and happiness sent into their little homes; twenty-five thousand separate interviews of men in the prison cells in this country; and, lastly, fifteen hundred and twenty-six men were met at the prison gates as they were let out of prison, and were helped and set on the right way for a new start through life.

Visited Graves.

Another way among the numerous methods used by the Salvation Army to give a helping hand, was just after the armistice was signed. The British Parliament gave permission to many poor persons in England, under the supervision of the Salvation Army, to go to Flanders and visit the graves of their husbands, brothers and sons. The Army successfully carried this work out and hundreds visited the graves of their dead.

Colonel McMillan vividly pictured to the large gathering his visit to France on this occasion, and described the grateful attitude of the poor people for such an exceptional opportunity.

In conclusion, the speaker stated that all our hands should be willingly uplifted to such a great work. It is our responsibility to make this world of ours great and better because we have lived in it.

At the close of the programme Mrs. Adj. Smith moved a vote of thanks to Judge Huycke and Colonel and Mrs. McMillan, on behalf of the members of the Army as well as for herself.

INSURANCE MEN HAD A MEETING

Peterboro Branch of the Life Underwriters Discuss Events of Interest.

On Saturday the Peterborough branch of Life Underwriters Association of Canada, held a luncheon at the Empress Hotel, when about fifty local members participated.

Messrs. J. F. H. Wallace, president, L. W. Scott, vice president and F. Hills, secretary of the Life Underwriters of Central Ontario were present. J. F. H. Wallace occupied the chair and the following programme was provided.

Chairman's Address—J. F. H. Wallace.

Speech, Practical Appliance of Salesmanship—S. M. La Mont.

Musical Recitations— Bill Phillips —"Bed", "My Wife", "I went Marching Home", and others.

Speech, "Life Insurance as a Profession—J. G. Taylor.

Outlined the Work

J. F. H. Wallace in a very brief address outlined the work and progress made by the Central Ontario branch of Life Underwriters. The programme for next year was also reviewed and Mr. Wallace stated that a meeting of the branch would be held every Saturday night, and they would put on a Life Underwriters Week in the near future. Also that there is going to be a Life Underwriters Conference in Hamilton, on January 15 and 16, 1923.

Mr. S. M. La Mont, assistant secretary of the Metropolitan Life in New York city, gave a very interesting talk on "Practical Appliance of Salesmanship." All salesmen are taken at their own valuation they are what they think they are. The steps of salesmanship as outlined by Mr. La Mont are, approach, securing attention, getting prospect interested, creating a desire and lastly obtaining a decision. The speaker stated that he had very little faith in courses in salesmanship and said they were useless unless practice and common sense were togeiher combined with study.

In conclusion, Mr. La Mont stated that when a man is conscious that he is selling the right way, he will sell more goods and will make less mistakes because he has much more faith that he is selling the right way and the right thing.

Requires Study

In his address "Life Insurance as a Profession J. G. Taylor, manager of the Mutual Life in Toronto, and chairman of the Educational committee of the Life Underwriters Association of Canada, pointed out that Life Insurance will never become a profession until a certain amount of study and training in practice of selling Life Insurance. Selling makes a man think for himself more than ever before.

Life Insurance, continued the speaker plays a great part in the reconstruction period of to-day. If the principles are right and the carrying on of business is done in the right way, the result is for the benefit of humanity. The benefits derived from salesmanship are direct or indirect. The United States was kept out of the hands of Wall street brokers through Life Insurance, which is the greatest protection the people have.

In conclusion Taylor stated that there was no higher business in the world than Insurance, and no better citizens of a country than Insurance men. The rewards of Insurance men are untold.

A vote of thanks ws moved by Mr. D. H. Moore to Mr. La Mont, Mr. Taylor and to Mr. and Mrs. Phillips The vote was seconded by Mr. J. I. Allen and heartily endorsed by the gatherng.

THE WORKING GIRLS' FRIEND CELEBRATES.

Mother Sarah Allen, Widely Known, is 71 Years Old.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—"Mother Sarah Allen, widely known friend of working girls, has just celebrated her 71st birthday.

A lovely old lady, with a crown of silver hair and bright, merry blue eyes, she insists that "I am 71 years young, if you please.

"My girls see to that. They impart to me something of their spirit of youth and in exchange I give them what I have of the wisdom of age.

"All my life has been spent among youth.

"Always young girls have seemed to gravitate to me with their confidences, both joy and sorrow.

City Girls Need Her.

"And there are so many of them in the big cities needing and longing for a mother's care. Especially here in New York.

"Girls fired by youth's golden dream of conquest come with high hopes, only to find bitter dillusion.

"Then they need a helping hand, a smile of friendship, a word of hope to carry them safely through.

"And because I have extended those prerogatives of a mother to any downhearted girl, many of them have come to call me 'mother.'

"I love these girls of mine. Their confidences are my repayment."

Mrs. Allen for 40 years has devoted her life to helping working girls.

Started Work in Detroit.

Before coming to New York two years ago she maintained in Detroit a cooperative home for working girls where they could get their own meals and do their washing and ironing.

Thousands of girls passed through her home, finding there new energy for life's hard struggle.

"Mother" Allen's supreme joy comes when one of her girls whispers in her ear, that "the right man has come at last" for, says Mother Allen, woman's greatest career is in the home.

Declares Giants Are Not Fighters And You May Treat 'Em Rough

DETROIT, Dec. 8.—(Canadian Press).—Do you know a giant against whom you have a grudge?

Just walk up and land one on his jaw. Such a proceeding will be perfectly safe, according to Dr. W. E. Hart, of Decatur, Ill. He says a giant is not a fighter, that he avoids fusses, and would probably run away crying if roughly handled. This is illustrated by that little incident when Goliath of Gath, standing six spans and a cubit in height, which is a little more than 11 feet, stepped out in No Man's Land, and offered to fight anybody in the army of the Israelites. Little David stepped out and slew him.

"Not so wonderful," said Dr. Hart. "Almost any of the radiological experts here assembled would not hesitate to tackle a giant. A giant, you know, looks big and fierce, but as a matter of fact giants are docile creatures, more adapted by nature to feather stitching than fighting. Probably poor Goliath had been getting away wih his bluff for so long that he thought nobody would ever have the courage to do battle with him. He was evidently a real giant, destined from birth to become a symmetrical giant, not one of those persons who have one or more of their limbs developed disproportionately.

"The true giant is a timorous, timid creature, with a soft, almost feminine voice, generally, who would not think of fighting from choice."

Dr. Hart read a paper at Tuesday's session of the Radiological Society of North America at the Hotel Statler, entitled "Congenital Partial Giant Growth."

"The true giant is a giant because of some disturbance of the pituitary gland at the base of the brain," Dr. Hart said. "There is nothing that science can do about it. The X-ray can diagnose the various types of abnormally large people; can ascertain whether the giantesque features are of the bone or not, but it canno t stop the growth, much less reduce the growth, of a giant.

"But nature takes care of the giants. They die young, and seldom raise large families. Nature does not like abnormal growths.

FROM A POOR BOY TO MILLIONAIRE.

Applied the Philosophy of Human Sympathy With Success.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—In the advertisements of one of the greatest chain of Philadelphia and New York department stores lies the philosophy of John Wanamaker, 84 year old millionaire merchant, who has been suffering from a severe cold for the last two months.

This philosophy of human sympathy and co-operation is what developed this business pioneer from a poor farm boy into one of the most respected characters in the country.

Wanamaker was born in Philadelphia, July 11, 1838, and remained here all his life, except for a brief stay in Indiana. His first income was $1.25 a week as errand boy, but by the time he was 23 he had established a clothing store with Nathan Brown, whose daughter he later married.

His keenness for competition brought him many enemies, but it also brought him his fortune. He opened his present store in this city in 1876 and 20 years later took over the store of A. T. Stewart in New York, now one of the largest department stores in the country.

Interest in Religion

Wanamaker had other business interests, but they did not diminish his religious activity. His interest in the Y. M. C. A. led him to donate money for the establishment of branches all over the world. He helped found other religious and social institutions which are to-day refuges for the poor.

As postmaster general under President Harrison, Wanamaker introduced sea post offices, banished lotteries from the mails, expanded free delivery and established rural delivery.

Few know the feelings of this man until 1912, when they came out in pithy, epigrammatic sayings in his department store advertisements. They were helpful paragraphs which were printed almost daily until his recent illness and which brought him many letters of appreciation.

That he practiced what he preached is shown by his sudden reduction of 20 per cent in the prices of all his merchandise, in 1920, to help the country to return to normal.

FOLK DANCING A CURE FOR PETTING PARTY

DETROIT, December 11. — Folk dancing is a sure cure for the petting party evil. The sooner the fathers and mothers take to folk dancing the sooner their sons and daughters will give up the modern jazz steps and follow the heel-toe-one-two-three example set by their elders.

This is the opinion Mrs. Marietta Johnson, director of the School of Organic Education, Fairhope, Ala., and the Edgewood School at Greenwick, Conn., gave in an address to Detroit mothers at the Northern High School recently.

Mrs. Johnson will deliver a series of 12 lectures in Detroit through the courtesy of Mrs. Henry Ford in the interest of child welfare. Mrs. Johnson will speak twice a day, at 10.45 a.m. and 4.15 p.m., concluding her series on Friday. Two evening lectures also will be given, December 5 and 7.

Forget the Sermons.

"Don't try to reform your young people by sermonizing," Mrs. Johnson told the mothers in discussing "The Child in the Home."

"If you don't approve of the dances your young people enjoy you must offer a substitute. First you must reform your own dance step —then take to folk dancing."

Folk dancing was declared by Mrs Johnson to be the only possible and inevitable solution of the problem.

"I do not approve of petting parties," she said, "they are dangerous. But if we take them away, we must give something in their place. Let that be folk d ..ing. If fathers and mothers go into it in a wholehearted way the children will join them."

A Liberal Education.

Folk dancing, according to Mrs. Johnson, should be taught in the schools from the kindergarten to the university. It should be taught in country clubs by young instructors employed for the purpose.

"Select good looking young men and pretty girls as the teachers of folk dances in these clubs," Mrs. Johnson advised, and see how quickly the young people will become interested. I am not afraid of the flapper nor of her boy c...panion. Manhood and womanhood will assert itself in time. But control them as much as possible. Give them wholesome pleasure.

To-day Mrs. Johnson will speak on "Habit Forming," at 10.45, "Individualistic Instincts," at 4.15 and "Discipline" in the evening.

The former commission made the above statement here Saturday in discussing his dismissal from the force following the failure of the provincial police to capture bandits at Pipestone, Man., after the police had received information of the impending visit of robbers to the bank there.

FLATIRON HURLED IN ARTISTS' ROW

Child d'Harcourt and His Wife Makes Counter-Charges in Night Court.

NEW YORK Dec. 11.—To determine the dividing line between a display of artistic temperament and disorderly conduct was the problem which confronted Magistrate Charles Oberwager in night court when Child D'Harcourt, 34, and his wife, Esther, 29 both artists, appeared before him.

Mrs. D'Harcourt told Magistrate Oberwager she has been in the habit of taking a walk each evening for inspiration. She has been doing sketch work and painting and is self-supporting. Her husband, she said remained in the studio all day Saturday, and when she returned from her walk she expected him to be ready to go to dinner with her.

Instead, she said, she found him just starting to dress, and when she asked him to hurry an argument started. She said he bit her on the left hand and abused her. They separated a year ago because of the same condition of affairs, she told the Magistrate, but she returned to her husband after he begged her to do so.

D'Harcourt told the Magistrate that when his wife came in she was in "one of her periodical fits of temper" and started a quarrel. He denied he had bitten her.

"You love your wife, don't you?" Magistrate Oberwager asked.

"Yes," replied the artist, "but I won't stand for this."

"This" was a nickle-plated electric iron which D'Harcourt had carried to court with him.

"She threw this at my head," he continued, "and when it struck my arm it left a two-and-a-half-inch bruise. When the iron fell to the floor she tried to get it again to t... another chance but I got it first. Then she went into the next room to get something else, and I placed some cushions on the floor."

"What for?" demanded the Magistrate.

"Well, I knew she was getting something else", D'Harcourt said, "and so when my wife came back into the room I tripped her and dropped her on the floor so she couldn't throw anything. She dropped right on the cushions. Then she kicked and scratched so I let her up."

"The trouble with both of you," said Magistrate Oberwager, "is that you are suffering from an attack of artistic temperament. Now the two of you go into my chambers and stay there until you come to some agreement. Take your time and get together. I'm not going to separate an otherwise happy couple by sending one of them to jail simply because of a slight attack of temperament."

In twenty minutes the D'Harcourts came out arm in arm. D'Harcourt nodded to the Court that all was well.

"That's fine," said the Magistrate. "Now I'll discharge Mr. D'Harcourt on this disorderly conduct charge." The couple left the courtroom in smiles.

"There's the rock of Gibraltar."
"But where is the advertisement?"—Life.

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK AND BEAUTIFUL

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everyobdy uses this preparation now ,because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gary hair disappears, and after another application or two, you hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

SECOND BRIDE UPSETS GUESTS

A Mysterious Woman in White Veil and Gown Attends Weddings.

LONDON, Dec. 11.— Like the wraith of an old love, a mysterious woman, in bridal veil and gown, has thrice startled the principals, clergy and guests at fashionable weddings this season.

Thrice has the strange, uninvited one appeared almost at the moment of the ceremony, and each time has she fled in tears, stirring a thousand gossips' tongues, spreading suspicion over the brilliant functions, and she has come to be known as "The Second Bride".

The latest appearance of "the spectral bride" was at the marriage of the Hon. Rosamond Bateman-Hanbury to Canon Hamilton A. Douglas-Hamilton at the fashionable Church of the Annunciation.

She arrived in a taxicab three minutes after the ceremony had been performed. As she hurried to the porch, her beautiful face white as the veil and gown she wore astonished witnesses heard her cry.

"Oh, dear, I am late."

Recalls Dickens' Bride

The scene was startlingly similar to that described vividly by Dickens in "Great Expectations", in which Miss Havisham, the disappointed bride ever walked abroad in her bridal finery in memory of her broken romance.

Before the errie guest could reach the aisles ushers blocked her way. When she was asked why she had come she answered, with a radiant smile:

"Why, don't you know? I am the second bride."

A policeman led her from the church.)The girl —she was very young — stepped into another cab, where her face lost its radiance and she broke into tears Crowds stopped to stare at the grief-shaking figure in the gown of silver tissue, the wreath of orange blossoms, the veil of tulle. The cabman asked her where she would drive, and the woman answered:

"Oh, what shall I do now? I don't know where to go"

Mystery Revealed

Policemen reported that the same young woman had previously attended, or attempted to attend wedding ceremonies in St. Peter's and at St. Abbott's churches. Inquiries about the latest incident finally disclosed the identity of the self-styled second bride.

She proved to be Miss Corbett, Windsor, a guest of Lady Mary Euphrasia Haworth Leslie and Lady Alice Leslie at South Kensington. Garbed in brown winter coat and drooping hat, the young woman told the police:

"I just want to see weddings. I have been to many. I cannot keep away, it seems."

When asked why she had dressed as a bride, she said, with a puzzled look:

"There must be some mistake. I just wanted to see the wedding. I didn't know the people there at all."

Lady Mary said that her guest appeared to have "a passion for weddings," and the young woman remarked:

Photographer in Wait

'I did not see the wedding because I was too late, that's all.

I saw many photographers outside the church and I hope they did not photograph me.'

And there the mystery rests, only partly cleared up. Lady Mary and Lady Alice declined to discuss the odd activities of their young guest further, but it was promised that every effort would be used to prevent another appearance of "the second bride" at a wedding.

THE U.S. TARIFF CAUSES NO LITTLE DISCONTENT.

Tendency on Part of Manufactured Goods to Raise in Price.

WASHINGTON, December 11. — Canadian Press. — Although there is no real sign of another revision of the tariff in the near future it is nevertheless a fact that there is much muttering of discontent in and out of Congress over the new law.

The full effects of the law are not as yet felt. However two things are clear. One is that there is a tendency on the part of manufactured goods to increase in price. The other is that the agricultural industry of the United States is still in a most serious condition and the tariff bill, with its high agricultural rates, has not been of any decisive advantage to the farmers. Undoubtedly in some cases it can be shown where it has reduced importations which would have come into competition with the U. S. farmer, but the fact is admitted by all agricultural authorities that the farmer's affairs are as bad now if not worse than they were a year ago. The farmers has proved no panacea for the troubles of the agricultural industry and there are decided symptoms that it will mean materially higher prices on the things that the farmer has to buy.

Labor it is plain is much disaffected with the new tariff law.

If the president and tariff commission were to make quick and effecive use of the flexible provisions to reduce rates, some of the discontent against the tariff would be allayed. But such use is not being made. Many are becoming sceptical whether any large relief from extreme duties need be looked for through the flexible tariff provisions.

Not a few indications are given that the new tariff law will be short-lived. The results of the elections and the growth of progressive sentiment are partly due to a feeling against the tariff law and if this feeling increases, as it is likely to do, the tariff may be a much larger factor in the 1924 campaign than in the recent one. Indeed democratic hopes of carrying the country in 1924 are built partly on the belief that the tariff will become increasingly unpopular.

THE LIGHT HOUSE.

Ye are the light of the world. But if the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness.

Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come.

The light went out one stormy night
In the lighthouse on the cliff,
And souls cried out on the waters,
If we go on the waters,—Oh, if?

Crash! and the crew in the lighthouse,
Paused, as they played and sang,
While over the stormy waters,
The wail of the perishing rang.

The light had gone out while they frolicked,
And had a merry old time;
Forgetting their duty to others
And their work of love sublime.

Then, came the Master at morning,
And mournfully viewed the sight,
And He gave their work unto others,
To keep the lamp burning bright.

What Sounds Radio Best?

Voice Gives Least, and Brass Instruments Most Trouble

THE VOICE, OF ALL SOUNDS, IS MOST FAITHFULLY REPRODUCED BY RADIO, SAY BROADCASTERS. THE VIOLIN IS NEXT, AND AMONG THE WORST ARE THE BASSOON (LEFT) AND THE SAXOPHONE (RIGHT).

What sounds are broadcast best by radio?

The human voice, say managers of radio broadcasting stations. And of that, the soprano is most faithfully reproduced by the transmitting microphone and the receiving instruments.

The most difficult sound to broadcast is that of the cornet, or any other of the brass instruments.

And what makes the saxophone and bassoon so troublesome is the clicking of the stops. They aren't heard over the footlights when an artist plays directly before an audience. But the delicate microphone catches the sounds of these clicks and not only records them, but exaggerates them in transmission.

Only recently have broadcast managers succeeded in sending instrumental music through the air with any degree of accuracy. The piano gave considerable trouble. The bass notes caused what is termed "blasting" in the microphone. This was heard as harsh crackling at the receiving end. The high notes would not lend themselves to transmission, while those that did came over as tin sounds.

Experimentation with all sorts of microphones finally solved this trouble. Now the piano can be reproduced with quite a degree of fidelity.

The stringed instruments, especially the violin, have given no trouble from the beginning. They can be reproduced most faithfully. Instruments of percussion, such as the bells and xylophone, and wood-wind instruments like the clarinet and flute, are also easily reproduced by radio.

But when it comes to the brass instruments there is worry for the manager. Those that have many mechanical stops must not come near the microphone, or the clicks would be heard through all the music. Those with heavy, blatant sounds must be muffled or the microphone—highly developed as it is to-day—would crack under the strain.

For this reason, it is quite an art for a broadcast manager to place the pieces of an orchestra so that the best will be obtained from each instrument and the whole concert be reproduced without a flaw.

STIRLING'S GAS WELL ON SCHOOL GROUNDS.

Recently Inspected by Ontario Government Official.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., December 11 —A representative of the Ontario government has visited Stirling village and investigated the natural gas discovery made there a few weeks ago. The well near the high school building was first examined by the inspector. At the present time gas is still flowing from this well, although it first has to filter through 60 feet of water. There is a half-inch pipe in the well capping and when lighted the gas burns unextinguished. Accompanied by Robert Cooke, M.P.P. for North Hastings, the government official traversed the territory adjacent to Stirling, examined the rock formations, analyzed the strata and the general topography of the country.

The Board of Education, who control the property upon which the gas was recently discovered, are of the opinion, now that further experimental drilling is necessary, that the find should be developed by private interests. This is also the attitude of the village council, in view of the large expense involved.

FERTILIZERS FOR FALL WHEAT.

Fall wheat must have a strong, well-rooted plant to withstand the winter. To insure this there should be an abundance of all kinds of available plant food in the soil. The two constituents the wheat plant has the greatest difficulty in getting out of the soil are nitrogen and phosphorus. If the land has been manured and summer fallowed, or, if a clover sod has been ploughed down there will probably be no need of purchasing a further supply of nitrogen and an application of acid phosphate alone will probably be sufficient. If, on the other hand, the wheat is to follow oats, or if there is any fear that the plants will not develop a good top, then some form of readily available nitrogenous fertilizer may be used to advantage.

Cereal crops have little difficulty in getting their supply of potash, consequently it will rarely pay to purchase a fertilizer containing this constituent for application on the land to be sown to wheat.

The Department of Chemistry at the Ontario Agricultural College has found that an application of from 200 to 400 pounds of acid phosphate and 100 pounds of ammonium sulphate per acre has very much increased the yield of wheat on the clay soils predominating in the Niagara Peninsula and in the area lying along the north shore of Lake Erie. It is probable however, that when the soil contains a good supply of organic matter, enough to furnish sufficient nitrogen, the ammonium sulphate may be omitted.—Chemistry Dept., O. A. College, Guelph.

RUSSIANS REITERATE READINESS TO DISARM

Would Reduce Army Providing Other States Do the Same.

MOSCOW, Dec. 11.—(Associated Press.)— Minister of War Trotzky and Leo Kamenoff, president of the Moscow Soviet, in recent public addresses in this city, repeated previous assurances as to Russia's readiness to reduce her army providing other states would do the same thing.

The occasion was a gathering of delegates to the Third International. Trotzy announced that the Soviet government was ready and eager to cut its armed force in half, or even to one tenth of the present strength, provided other countries would agree to similar reductions.' The war minister expressed the hope that the outcome of the disarmament conference to be held in Moscow within a month would result in a reduction of the armies of the Balkan states.

Kameneff said he had a message to the world. "Russia," he declared, "is indeed eager for peace and is prepared at any time to reduce her fighting forces, if given guarantees by other countries, But in making these proposals" he continued "it must be understood that because of our strength we would refuse any proposals which might tend to humiliate Soviet Russia."

This is no idle boast and day by day we are showing greater strength in Communism, greater constructive ability in re-organization of the country and in re-establishing ourselves."

A review of the Red Army followed these speeches. The troops defiled past a large reviewing stand. The Moscow garrison headed the parade and included the cavalry, heavy and light artillery, machine gun outfits, tanks, armored cars and anti-aircraft guns; then there followed droves of factory and railroad workers armed with rifles, thousands of trade unionists, and many children.

The parade has been described as the greatest military turnout ever attempted by the Soviet Government. It is estimated that over half a million persons passed in review.

Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who is reported seriously ill from bronchial pneumonia in her Garden City, L.I., home is known to music lovers as perhaps the world's greatest contralto. But veterans of the World War will say she surpasses even that honor by being the worlds' greatest war mother.

For Schumann-Heink, with four sons in the American service, and one drafted into the German navy, appointed herself mother to all soldiers in America and France during the war. Her singing and pleasantry cheered them up, and her sympathy for the allies put added life and patroitism into the fighters.

This feeling, Schumann-Heink herself has professed, came from her gratitude to America. It was America that established her fame, she always said.

The famous prima donna was born at Lieben, near Prague, Austria, June 15, 1861. At an early age she was discovered to be a singer of remarkable talent, and her training started. At 16 she was making as much in one week singing in the Royal Opera at Dresden as her father was earning in a month.

After her marriage in 1882, her singing career was laborious. As a young mother, in the midst of poverty, she used to study the opera scores with a baby in her arms, stopping at times to attend to the dinner that was cooking on the stove.

When Maurice Grau signed her to come to America for the Metropolitan Grand Opera, her rise to fame and fortune began. Her brilliant career on the opera stage, as well as on the concert stage, won her innumerable friends.

Schumann-Heink was married three times. She was divorced in 1914 from her third husband, William Rapp Jr., whom she had wed in 1905.

STOP AT TAMPICO.

VERA CRUZ, Mex., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—The strike situation in Vera Cruz, due to the excessive demands of the stevedores, has caused the various steamship companies, including the Ward and Munson Lines, to cut off Vera Cruz as a port of call and make Tampico their terminal, according to newspaper advices received here.

Special Airplane For Work in the Tropics.

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 11.—(Associated Press).—The exploration expedition by seaplane, recently attempted in western Papau, has failed owing to th effects of the tropical heat on the machine. The members of the expedition are proceeding to the Fly River on foot.

Mr. Lang, the pilot, declared that the tropical rain and heat were such that no machine except one built entirely of metal, and with an engine of extra high horse power, could withstand the conditions.

SARNIA'S NEXT MAYOR.

SARNIA, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Ald. Thomas S. Cook definitely threw his hat into the ring Saturday when he announced his candidature for the mayoralty. Endorsed by the Trades and Labor Council and by every member of the Council, it would appear a certainty that his election will be by acclamation. Mr. Cook was mayor in 1903 and 1904 and alderman again in 1921 and 1922. Every other member of the present Council has announced his decision to run again for aldermanic seats, and besides these the next Council will have five additional aldermen, due to Sarnia's growth in population.

SIKI REFUSES TO SEE COMMITTEE

License Was Taken Away Without a Hearing, He Sees No Reason Why He Should Appear Now.

PARIS, Dec. 11. — (Canadian Press)—Battling Siki refused to appear before the investigating committee appointed by the French Boxing Federation, which held its first sessoin Saturday, in an attempt to clear up the Carpentier frameup charges. The Senegalese through his counsel sent a letter to the committee saying that inasmuch as the Federation had already taken his license and title of champion away from him without giving him a hearing, thus placing him under the necessity of sueing before the courts, he failed to see why they should ask to hear him now; it might cause prejudice to the legal actions which would be heard by a tribunal.

The committee will hold its next meeting tomorrow.

HOPPE TRAINED TO WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

Spent Eight Hours a Day For Nearly a Year Practising Difficult Shots.

Great is Willie Hoppe, world's billiard champion at the American style. The monarch of the green cloth, who recently regained his title by defeating Schaefer, who worsted his honors away from him 12 months ago, practised for eight hours every day for nearly a year in preparation for his comeback. He placed the balls at all the most difficult angles and worked and worked until he had mastered every caprice of the ivories. His famous finger grip was given as much attention as the shots themselves. Schaefer in the end fell into the usual Hoppe trap. Willie always tries to make his opponents realize that they are playing Hoppe and not their own games. That is fatal against Hoppe.

Willie went on the road in the mornings, just as a fighter would do, in preparing for this battle with Schaefer. He believed that a man making such a comeback would have to be so fit, physically, that there would be no chance of a collapse during the game. And there wasn't.

Hoppe cut down his meals, confining himself to light toast and weak tea in addition to fresh fruit. His one hearty meal came in the evening, and even then he was particular about his menu.

In training for his comeback Hoppe spent hours at a time studying the formation of shots. He would set aside his cue and study the antics of the ivories while using his fingers as cues.

His patience with himself is a marvelous lesson in control and self-sacrifice. He has never smoked or touched liquor in his lifetime, and to this he attributes any nerve that he may seem to possess when under billiard fire. The world loves a champion, but doubly so the champion that has lost and then comes back.

Scorers Take Issue With Pres. Johnson

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Resolutions that Ty Cobb's .400 batting average of 1922 be not recognized, and that efforts be made to have it corrected in the official baseball guides, were passed here Saturday by the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association.

The resolution also recommended that the members of the New York chapter of the association should decline to act as official scorers, unless they receive assurance that their scores will be accepted as official and final.

The controversy was caused by the action of Ban Johnson, President of the American League, who overruled an error given to Everett Scott, Yankee shortstop, on one of Cobb's hits and called it a single. John Kiernan, of the New York Tribune, was the official scorer, and he called it an error, while a press association sent it out the next morning as a hit.

Siki is Willing to Fight Georges Again.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Battling Siki has accepted the challenge for a return match with Georges Carpentier, conditional upon his reinstatement by the French Boxing Federation. He says he is willing to fight for 'glory only," thus waiving all the money demands for which he has hitherto held out.

In sporting circles, however, it is generally conceded that the fight cannot possibly take place until the Boxing Federation has completed its investigation of Siki's charges that he had to agree to a "frame up" in order to get Carpentier into the ring the first time.

Goullet and Belloni Won Six-Day Grind.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press)—Alf. Goullet, of Newark, and his Italian partner, Gastno Belloni, won the thirty third international six-day bicycle race in a thrilling finish before a capacity crowd at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

The Italian-American pair, triumphant survivors of a grind which had continued without intermission since last Saturday midnight, finished the 143 hours with 2,457 miles and eight laps to their credit, and the commanding total of 487 points.

In the same lap at the finish were the pair, Maurice Brocco of France, and Willie Coburn, of Newark, but, despite sensational riding in the final hour, they trailed the winning aggregation by nearly 200 points, scoring 292.

Oscar Egg, Swiss rider and his partner Ray Eaton, of East Orange, N.J., finished third, a lap behind the winning total, having piled up 439 points.

BOSTON 4, VICTORIAS 0.

SEMI-FINALS IN INDOOR LEAGUE THIS EVENING

Wildcats and Knights of Columbus Meet in the First Round For the City Championship.

STARTS AT 8.30.

This evening's game in the Softball League is expected to be one of the best on the whole bill. The game tonight will be the semi-finals for the city championship and two of the fastest teams in the circuit are scheduled to meet, when the Wildcats and the Knights of Columbus lock horns in the scrap for the honours.

The Wildcats have an enviable reputation. They have gone through the whole schedule without a single loss being checked up against them, and that is playing pretty good ball, for some of the teams they had to defeat have been no slouches. They have, in fact, given them some pretty tough tussels.

The Knights are right on their heels with but one defeat, and they have risen to remark that that is the only defeat they intend to have this season. In spite of their long list of victories, the Caseys also had some hard teams to trim while travelling the rough road to the championship of their section and in every case the harder the contest the better they played.

When these two teams get together tonight at the Armoury there is going to be a fast and snappy game dished up for the approval of the fans.

The winner of this evening's game will stack up against the Raybestos gang on Thursday evening for the city championship and a good game it will be. Both of these games will be played at the Armoury, both will start at 8.30 o'clock and an admission charge of 25c will be made, the proceeds to be turned over to the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association.

TROUBLE IN RANKS OF THE A.A.U. OF C.

Object to Alleged Domination of Amateur Affairs By East.

MONTREAL, Dec. 11.—A grave warning was sounded to the A. A. U. of Canada Saturday morning by J. H. Crocker, Toronto, the Y. M. C. A. representative, to the effect that the present tendency to centralization of power on the part of the supreme governing body would, it continued, result in a reversion of feeling on the part of the affiliated bodies that would place the status of amateur athletics in the same position that they occupied twenty years ago.

Prof. MacKenzie, the delegate of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union, also came to the fore with a severe criticism of the move.

The discussion brought to the fore once more the tangle that took place last Saturday in Toronto, when the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association refused to sanction a meet held there by the Y. M. C. A., when Johnny Weismuller was to give an exhibition. Mr. Crocker declared that the articles of affiliatin between the A. A. U. of Canada and the Y. M. C. A. did not require any approval on the part of the former body for the meet and that the officials of the A. A. U. had not played fair when they played the role of interested spectators and refused to overrule the decision of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association.

Boo-Hoo Objects to Plans for Winter

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press). — The careful plans for putting "Boo-Hoo" to sleep for the winter were all carried out, but one thing went amiss. The bear would not sleep. Everyone seemed to know just what the bear should do for her own good self, but the lady herself, so when it came time to lock her up in the stable in her nice straw bed which had been prepared for the winter's nap she absolutely refused to stay and raised such a fuss that she had to be let out again. Another attempt will be made today to get the bear to retire for the winter.

TO LOSE SIX MEN.

KINGSTON, Dec. 11.—Of this year's Queen's Canadian football champions six are due to graduate in the Spring: Carson regular inside wing; Veale, the star end; Burns, a useful utility man, who played in the line and at flying wing; Johnstson, an inside or middle wing; Saylor, the substitute quarter-back. The loss of these men will be felt considerably, particularly in the case of Veale and Carson, but it is hoped that new material will arrive to fill the vacancies.

KILBANE-CRIQUI BOUT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press) — Johnny Kilbane, world's featherweight champion, has signed to meet Eugene Criqui, holder of the European featherweight title, here, some time next May. Tom O'Rourke, matchmaker of the Republic A.C., announced yesterday. Criqui, it is also announced, has agreed to the bout. The match will be held at the Polo Grounds.

FOG AND FROST NO HINDRANCE TO BIG GAMES

English Football Matches Were Played Despite Unfavorable Weather Conditions.

LIVERPOOL ON TOP.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Despite fog and frost the more important football matches were not greatly interfered with on Saturday.

The return encounters between Newcastle and Liverpool and between Burnley and Middlesbrough were the star matches of the first division. A somewhat remarkable feature of the season's play so far has been the manner in which results have been reversed when the sides met the second time. Hence it is peculiar that while Middlesbrough, when playing at home last week were able to win by 4 goals to 1, Burnley on their own ground yesterday avenged their defeat of last week to the extent of three clear goals.

Liverpool by reversing the previous week's result remain at the head of the league table. Their position is much strengthened by the fact that Sunderland, their nearest opponent, could only share points Saturday with Everton.

The steady progress of such teams as Sheffield United and Huddersfield emphasizes the strong hand held by the northern clubs in the contest for league honors.

What little satisfaction the London clubs can get out of Saturday's games was earned at the expense of Midland teams.

It is curious to find no fewer than four clubs occupying the last four positions with an equal number of points to their credit, namely, the unlucky thirteen.

The team to whom victory Saturday came as nectar was Arsenal, who just scraped home by a penalty. Simultaneous with the scoring of this winning goal a loud explosion occurred, creating a commotion on the ground. The bursting of a geyser in one of the dressing rooms was found to be the cause.

Two of Huddersfield's three goals were scored by Wilson, who recently transferred from the Tottenham Hotspurs. In view of the fact that the latter club is still seeking a good centre forward, Wilson's success in having scored in every match for his new team is arousing much debate, but the Hotspurs' style of football is not the same as that of northern teams.

Derby's extraordinary win from Southampton was a striking feature of the second division. It was the Saints' worst defeat this season and followed a long succession of victories.

Leicesters' unexpected check by Sheffield has narrowed the margin between them at the head league table and their nearest opponents, Notts County, to one point.

The struggle for pride place in the southern section of the third division is very keen, with Bristol City making a determined effort to get back into the second division, but Plymouth will take some beating.

ARGONAUTS LOST OVERTIME GAME.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 11.—(Canadian Press)—The Toronto Argonauts were beaten, 5 to 4, by Pittsburgh in a red-hot overtime hockey game here Saturday night. Fifteen extra minutes were played before Milks of Pittsburgh took the puck down the ice and shot the winning goal. Neither team scored in the first period. In the second, Captain Drury got two goals for Pittsburgh, while Cotton scored two for the Argonauts. Waller and Lount counted for Toronto in the third period, but the count was tied by Sullivan who shot goals for the locals.

Cotton was the individual star for the visitors, while Sullivan and Drury played brilliantly, for the Pittsburghers.

Great Rugby Kickers of Years Gone By.

The press representatives from Edmonton at the Queen's-Eskimos championship rugby game at Kingston thought that Fraser of the westerners was the greatest drop kicker that Canada has yet produced. Fraser is a real good kicker, but he is only a second-rater in comparison with gridiron booters of other days. An old Queen's player recalled the game played in Montreal in 1893 when Queen's defeated Montreal for the Dominion championship. He said that Montreal had a kicker named Savage who in that contest put a drop kick over the Queen's goal bar from near midfield. It was the mightiest field goal he has ever seen and he has been watching the game for 35 years. Parkin, who played for Queen's in the late 80's, afterwards with Varsity, was also a great kicker of the old days. Counsell of Hamilton was another of more recent years, as well as Gleeson of Ottawa College, and Hardisty of Toronto could send the ball higher than any other kicker in Canadian football. Pud Hamilton of the old Kingston Granites was another wonderful kicker. Fraser of the Edmonton team tried two drops at Queen's goal, but both were too low. Leadley didn't try any, as Queen's, when within striking distance of the Eskimos' goal worked for and secured touchdowns.

Astronomers consider our sun is now a "dwarf star," but that formerly its light was about 100 times greater than at present.

SARNIA REPEATS FOR SCHOOL TITLE

Running of Hayes and Punting of Hanna Too Much For Oakwood.

VARSITY STADIUM, Toronto, Dec. 11.—Sarnia Collegiate won the O.R.F.U. Interscholastic championship here Saturday afternoon, by defeating Oakwood Collegiate in the final by 13 to 2, on an ice-covered field which seriously handicapped both teams. The winners were best, and are one of the best teams of junior age that have shown in Toronto. Judging from their play they would look better on firmer footing. Hayes was the star of the game, and he was ably assisted by Hanna, Simpson, Manore and Garvey, the latter being a great pair of outsides. Abbey did a lot of Oakwood's work and was their best man. Taylor, Scarlett, Montgomery, Morgan, Robertson and Dundas were useful ground-gainers for the locals. Oakwood had an edge on the line, but the Sarnia backs and outsides gave the margin to the winners.

Sarnia—Flying wing, Johnston; halves, Hanna, Hayes and McKay; quarter, Simpson; snap, Richardson (captain); insides, Vanhorne and Park; middles, Pugh and Brown; outsides, Garvey and Manore; subs., Corey, Robinson, Workman, Randolph, Maitland and S. Robinson.

Oakwood—Flying wing, Bryant; halves, Abbey, Taylor, Montgomery; quarter, Scarlett; snap, Smith; insides, Crowe (captain), Currie; middles, Morgan, Dundas; outsides, Hannay and Cole; subs., Maxwell, Standish, Robertson, Conboy, Gibson, Billings, Dodds and Hancock.

Referee—Reg. DeGruchy.
Umpire—Bob Armstrong.

DISORDERLY YOUTHS WERE GIVEN LESSON.

Chamberlain Street Quartette Fined for Profanity on George Street.

For disorderly conduct on George street between Dalhousie and Sherbrooke streets last Tuesday night, four boys were severely lectured by Magistrate Langley this morning and fined $2, plus $3.15 costs each. They were racing up and down the street and when one fell the others piled on top of him. Their profanity could have been heard a block away, and all this came under the head of amusement. A citizen who heard them hailed P. C .Thompson, who was approaching, and the constable was greeted with foul language as these youths of more than sixteen years scampered like rats. One of them was followed to the corner of Chamberlain and Park streets, but was not arrested until Wednesday morning. He was at work at the time and gave the names of his "rough-neck" companions. The four of them gave Chamberlen street numbers as their addresses. Magistrate Langley told them that disorderly conduct would not be tolerated and said he hoped that this experience would be a lesson to them and others.

GRAND CONCERT AT THE ROYAL TO-NIGHT

Appearance of famous VIOLINIST SKOVGAARD and wonderful PIANIST MADAME ALICE McCLUNG SKOVGAARD in one of the most wonderful performances ever presented here. To quote the press: "Mme. Skovgaard is an accompanist and solo performer supreme. Her interpretations evidence the judgment and grasp of an accomplished musician. And, while her playing is full of feminine delicacy, strength and character go with it to a surprising degree." Another critic says: "Beauty, grace, ease of presence, wonderful technique, full command of each number, ability to bring from the piano every ounce of volume needed to support the soloist ,or on the other hand, to play the daintiest passages, with a touch as light as that of fairy fingers, proves Mme. Skovgaard to be mistress of the piano. The Royal Theatre has been taken over for this performance only under the direction of Mr. Frank Whitehouse, and in addition to the musical programme the feature programme of the Royal will be given.

This is an opportunity of hearing famous artists who have performed before Royalty in Europe, at most moderate prices, only 50c., 75c. and $1.00 (war tax included). Music lovers will no doubt be out in large numbers to-night to hear this programme.

DELIGHTFUL EVENING AT QUEEN MARY SCHOOL.

Old-fashioned Social Proved to Be a Most Wonderful Success.

One of the most delightful evenings in the history of the Queen Mary Home and School Association took place Saturday in the school commencing at 8 p.m., when the altogether pleasing programme took the form of an old-fashion social. Attics and trunks had been searchingly overhauled and the success resulting was truly wonderful. Early Victorian costume styles were very much in evidence, while the dolman and the basque and pollonaise added to the quaintness of the charming scene presented by the merry throng Then much merriment was caused by the capers of Aunt Jemimna an old Southern mammy of pronounced type.

Principal M. N. Clarke made an exceedingly efficient and acceptable chairman, The first part of the entertaining programme consisted of musical selections by Dorothy Ferguson, Margaret Johnston and Beatrice McGregor, violin solos by Roy Rome, and banjo numbers and negro songs by C. Clarke. The second part of the programme consisted of contests, with Mrs. Barnes in charge, which were entered into with considerable enthusiasm by all present.

The programme was brought to a close by fascinating old-fashioned dances with Miss Isobel Connelly, the irresistible accompanist, while the Terpsichorean number, "Sir Roger", incited all present to participate.

Refreshments consisting of coffee and toothsome doughnuts were served, the former having been donated by Mrs. John's and prepared on the new electric plate recently installed Saturday by this Home and School Association.

The proceeds of a silver collection at the door will be donated to the Well Babies' Clinic, in which the Queen Mary Home and School Association is commendably interested.

THEATRES

CAPITOL — "The Prisoner of Zenda," a striking picture story from the stage version of Anthony Hope's novel. Also balance of a Capitol premier programme.

GRAND—"Rich Men's Wives," a startling picture of modern society. Also comedy and refined N.V.E. vaudeville offerings.

ROYAL—Special engagement of Skovgaard, the celebrated Danish violinist. Also a full picture programme. Violinist Skovgaard will be heard to-night only.

COST MONEY TO MAKE "THE PRISONER OF ZENDA"

Some idea of the staggering proportions of Rex Ingram's production for Metro, "The Prisoner of Zenda," and the magnitude of the task which confronted the young director of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" may be had from the statistics of production items in connection with the photoplay. The figures presented by Metro reveal "The Prisoner of Zenda," which is now at the Capitol Theatre the first half of this week, as one of the greatest undertakings in the history of the photoplay.

1. The total cost of the picture, computed down to the last two-cent stamp, was $1,118,453.16. This would make the cost of every foot of finished film approximate one hundred and eleven dollars, provided the picture is in ten reels.

2. Those who contributed to making the picture—actors, technical men—everyone, including Mr. Ingram himself—numbered more than 23,000 persons. This is, roughly, equal to the population of Oswego, N. Y.

3. The footage of raw film exposed was 257,521. Laid out in a straight line, it would measure about forty-eight and one-half miles. For a sprinter capable of doing 100 yards in the record time of 9 3-5 seconds, to cover that distance would require 2 hours and 45 minutes.

4. The scenario comprised 1,622 pages—more than in H. G. Wells' "The Outline of Histoy." Every detail of setting and action was typewritten before the camera had been turned a single time.

5. A village and six blocks of city dwellings were built for exterior scenes in the kingdom of Ruritania.

6. Twenty-six costume designers and other artists gave four months to the creation of costumes, under the supervision of the director.

7. The value of the coronation robes worn by the principals in the cast—not including the jewels—was $105,000.

8. Rex Ingram employed the radiophone for the first time in the direction of a motion picture. This was found an immense improvement over his system of telephones by which he controlled the armies in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

9. In the costume factory, built previous to the making of "The Four Horsemen," 540 persons were employed—tailors, cutters, dressmakers and special workers.

10. During the two weeks in which the coronation scenes were taken, the village and the blocks of city streets housed more than 10,000 persons. Army methods of providing food were used. At one time there were 432 cooks on the Metro payroll.

11. The total tonnage of building materials of all sorts used in the construction of the settings was 124,000 tons—about five times the weight of the biggest modern battleship.

12. Art works, the most valuable lent to Mr. Ingram by wealthy Californian residents in view of their interest in his productions, and used in "The Prisoner of Zenda," were appraised roughly at over two million dollars—three times the price recently paid for Gainsborough's famous "Blue Boy."

AT THE GRAND.

N.V.E. VAUDEVILLE AND SUPER PICTURE PRODUCTIONS.

Power and Heart Appeal Dominate "Rich Men's Wives."

When you get a book or a play with situations that makes you the next minute make you want erect, all a-thrill, one minute and to cry, you can tell the world you've had entertainment.

That's the effect that "Rich Men's Wives," the new Preferred Picture at the Grand Theatre, has upon its audience.

This is a picture that everybody will be the better for seeing, because it has a splendid story a theme intensely interesting and a cast that comes as close to being "all-star" as any it has been ou pleasure to meet on the screen. Dramatic power and a stirring heart appeal are the dominating strains as the story unfolds. One situation, where a mother, outcast from the social position to which she was born, returns to rescue her baby son from the hands of a party of revelers using him as the butt of a joke, is one of the most impressive that has ever been put on the screen.

House Peters has the principal masculine role and Claire Windsor, beautiful, graceful and clever, is the mother heroine. On a par with them are Rosemary Theby, Myrtle Stedman, Gaston Glass, Mildred June, Carol Holloway, Charles Clary, Martha Mattox and William Austin. It is a well chosen and splendidly balanced cast, with each player an artist in his or her role.

"Rich Men's Wives" was produced by Gasnier, who made "Kismet" for the screen, and it is a brilliant piece of work. By the employment of a real horse show many fine motor cars and groups of people who actually look like society men and women, he has given the picture superb atmosphere. The settings are rich, but not overdone and the photography all through is sharp and beautifully done.

"Rich Men's Wives" deserves to be placed among the successes of the season, for it is a drama that will live for a long time to come. It brings forth sharply the query of whether rich men's wives are to be pitied, scorned or envied. We formed our own conclusion after seeing the picture, but will not try to influence you opinion by revealing it. You are entitled to make you own decision. However, it is not amiss to say that women and girls gaze longingly at picture of society queens lounging on the sands at Palm Beach or all dressed up at the theater will get a brand new viewpoint.

The picture will be at the Grand theatre for three days, and starting Monday matinee and should not be overlooked by anyone who appreciates a good hour's entertainment, especially for the members of the fair sex.

In addition to this big picture production, refined high class vaudeville will be given by, Herb Camp, eccentric violinist and Rottach and Miller, comedy singing and dancing duo. Usual bargain price Matinee and Evening.

SERVICE TO OWNERS OF LOST SILVER KNIVES

If Mr. and Mrs. E. Nicholls, 700 Armour Road, knew the value of the Examiner as an advertising medium they would have recovered their lost parcel of silver knives a month ago instead of Saturday night. The package had been picked up on the market and left at the police station for an owner. Finally, on Saturday morning Inspector Reid requested the police reporter to "make a note of these knives and ask the owner to call for them." A "news nugget" tucked away without any effort to make it prominent, brought Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls to the police station Saturady night to claim their Rogers silver knives worth $8. Mr. Nicholls asked whether there was an advertising charge, but in this case there was none.

OBITUARY

HARRY ASCOTT.

Harry Ascott, the little five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ascott, of Waterford Street, passed away quite suddenly at the Isolation Hospital on Sunday, Dec. 10, at 1 p.m., suffering from diphtheria. The little fellow had only been ill since Wednesday, and was removed to the hospital on Saturday.

Besides his parents, he is survived by his elder brother Edward and baby brother Frederic, who have the sincere sympathy of their many friends.

T. P. CONNOR.

Prayers were offered in the Catholic churches of this city on Sunday for the late Thomas P. Connor, former manager of the Canadian Cordage Company of Peterborough, who died last week in Waupun, Wisconsin.

The late Mr. Thomas P. Connor was born in the Province of New Brunswick and he and his brothers carried on the business of binder twine and rope manufacturers in St. Johns, N.B., for a great many years and until the business was sold out by them to the Consumers Cordage Company, of Montreal. Later he became mill superintendent of the binder twine prison plant at Kingston. He resigned his position in Kingston to become superintendent of the Canadian Cordage & Manufacturing Company Limited in Peterborough.

During his six years' residence in Peterborough he became very widely known and won the respect and confidence of those with whom he came in contact. He resigned his position as superintendent of the local company in Peterborough to take charge of the large cordage plant operated by the Wisconsin State Prison at Waupun, Wis. During this last 14 years he successfully superintended the large cordage business connected with the prison until the time of his death.

He is survived by his widow and children, who have the deep sympathy of a wide circle of friends in Peterborough, in their sad bereavement. His brother, Mr. John Connor, who was well known among people in Peterborough, resides at St. Johns, N.B. and his brother Patrick is the owner of a large cordage plant in Boston, Mass.

The children are one son, Thomas, and four daughters, Winnifred and Kathleen, Sister St. Thomas, and the fourth daughter, Edith, is also a member of a religions order.

ALEXANDER BUNTIN.

Word was received here to-day of the death in Toronto, following a paralytic stroke of Alexander Buntin of Toronto. Mr. Buntin was a member of the firm of Buntin, Reid, wholesale paper dealers, Toronto. He was very active in many phases of public life, and was a successful business man. On Saturday he was taken ill and passed away this morning.

LAWRENCE LONERGAN.

Lawrence Lonergan died in Peterborough yesterday after a lingering illness. The deceased was a life-long resident of Asphodel Township, and was 86 years of age. His survivors are his wife, six sons, James, Joseph, Frederick, and Thomas, of Toronto, Michael of Peterborough, and Egebert of Chicago. GOOD UNDERSTANDING AS RESULT MEETINGS.

Incident Was Unique in the History of the Town of Hawkesbury.

OTTAWA, December 11 (Canadian Press). — An unique demonstration of good understanding between the English and the French speaking residents of Hawkesbury was given during the visit to that town at the week-end of Dr. J. A. Amyot, C.M.G., Deputy-Minister of Health, Ottawa, and Dr. W. J. Bell, of the Provincial Board of Health, and the visitors were so impressed with the belief that they now see a solution of the bi-lingual problem.

Speaking at the public meeting, Dr. Amyot gave the first part of his address in English and the second part in French.

Everyone appreciated this, but the applause grew louder as Dr. Beaudoin, French-speaking physician of Hawkesbury, speaking in English, proposed a vote of thanks to Drs. Amyot and Bell.

The climax came when a resolution was seconded by an English-speaking physician of the district, Dr. Smith speaking in the French language.

This incident was unique in the history of the town, and made a deep impression on the community.

REVIVE A MOVEMENT TO CANCEL WAR DEBT WITH UNITED STATES

Delegation Will Leave for Washington in the Near Future—French Are Interested — Conference Over.

PREMIERS DEPART

LONDON, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press).—Official circles are interestedly awaiting Premier Bonar Law's proposed statement in the House of Commons Thursday for the verification or denial of the report that overtures are to be made to Washington with the object of determining the United States position regarding the proposed cancellation of a portion of the inter-Allied debts. It was pointed out to-day that Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the British Debt Funding Mission would leave for Washington on December 27 for a discussion of the Allied debts. All visiting Premiers left London to-day for their respective capitals. Premier Mussolino was the centre of attraction and a great crowd thronged Victoria Station to see him off.

The belief that Britain intends to sound out the United States Government's willingness to take some such action in reference to Allied debts as a possible cancellation of the French debt is asserted by the Daily Telegraph's diplomatic expert.

The French delegation to the adjourned Premiers' conference was represented last night at holding that the British might approach the United States before the January 2 meeting to ascertain whether the United States would be willing to consider either the cancellation of the French debt or participation in a conference for the consideration of such a step.

BLIND TAUGHT HOW TO WORK

Hundreds Are Now Self-Supporting Despite Their Stupendous Handicap.

Yesterday afternoon at four o'clock Sherman Swift, M.A., addressed the Women's Canadian Club at the Public Library on the extremely interesting work done by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Toronto. Mr. Swift is Librarian-in-Chief of the Canadian Free Library for the Blind in the Queen city.

The average man and woman associate a school for the sightless, stated Professor Swift, as an asylum and the blind inmates as insane. This is a mistake, for the greatest work that the institution has to do is to educate the people that, though its inmates are handicapped by the loss of sight, they are not defective, either mentally or physically. The biggest handicap the unfortunate blind had was theeir inability to read or write, but that was finally overcome by Braille in 1835, when he introduced the "Braille Alphabet." This alphabet is one composed out of embossed dots, representing the different letters in the alphabet, by their position. At the present time the blind language is all written from the "Braille Alphabet," which has been so well mastered by its students that to-day all the stenographers in the National Institute for the Blind are sightless themselves, and there are even several blind newspaper reporters.

Liberal Education.

In 1861 the Institute in Montreal was opened up and the blind students were taught reading and writing, history, geography, grammar and several other subjects. Before 1918, continued Professor Swift, there were only about thirty-five or forty blind people in Canada employed in any self-supporting position. But he was pleased to say that to-day there are from 18 to 20 working in shops in Halifax, 18 to 20 in Ottawa, 30 men and from 25 to 30 women in Toronto, 15 in Winnipeg, and 15 to 20 in Vancouver, all earning their own livelihood.

Professor Swift emphasized the fact that the Institute's blind were just as moral as the average person, and were not feeble-minded in any sense of the word. He here went on to describe several blind graduates from universities who have been successful in the world, despite the fact of their stupendous handicap. Then, turning to the library service, he stated that in 1907 they began to loan books to the blind, of whom there were only twenty-six residents, and to-day the library contains over 10,000 volume sand is patronized by more than eight hundred sightless readers.

The Braille Bible.

The Bible, printed in the "Braille Alphabet," occupies thirty-nine volumes, making a thickness of 78 inches or 6½ feet of reading material all told, which takes about two years to read.

This library also contains books in many different languages, on varied subjects, and also by different writers. The publishing department now sends out literature to the blind, concluded Prof. Swift, in the form of a monthly magazine, which is known the world over.

He most gratefully thanked this city's residents for their support of this institution by private subscriptions and publicly on the recent tag day for the blind in this community .This good work, he pointed out, is keeping many of the unfortunate blind from the poor house, by instructing them to make the best of life in spite of their hard fate.

SAY MURDERESS FINDS A REFUGE IN OLD MEXICO

World - Famous Detective Burns Confident That is Where Hammer Slayer is Hiding.

IS SAFE NOWHERE.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., December 12. (Special.) — Mexico to-day bartered for the return of Clara Phillips, the "hammer murderess," to the United States.

Leandro Garza Leal, consul for the Obregon Government here, announced that he had a communication from high Mexican officials saying that the exchange of Mrs. Phillips for a badly wanted Mexican fugitive, the latter now in the United States, "would be welcomed."

Mrs. Phillips is believed to have fled into Mexico following her escape from the jail here, after being sentenced to prison for the slaying of Mrs. Alberta Meadows. She was reported to have been seen in Juarez, and although she has not been captured, it is believed that the Mexican government would make unusual efforts to find and extradite her if the barter proposition is accepted by the American authorities.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—"Clara Phillips is in Mexico, of course."

That's the answer, given emphatically and without hesitation, by William J. Burns, world famous detective and chief of the United States Secret Service, to the query: "Where is Clara Phillips, escaped Los Angeles hammer murderess?"

"What chance has she of evading capture?" I then asked the famous detective chief.

"No place is safe for her," Burns replied. "Even if she evades immediate capture, the chances are she will be turned up and indentified sooner or later, and brought back to face justice.

"But in her favor, temporarily at least, is the fact that a present we have no treaty of extradition with Mexico as this government has no official relationship with the present government in Mexico.

"Nicaragua would be another comparatively safe refuge, and has long been a favorite place with escaped criminals and fugitives.

"In almost any European country she probably would be indentified. Italy would offer the only comparative safety in Europe, as extradition from that country always has been difficult.

Extradition Difficult.

"My belief, however, is that she headed straight into Mexico and is there long before this. Locating her there will not be the only difficulty. Getting her back, in view of the lack of extradition agreement, would be complicated. And the opportunities for safe hiding there are many.

"It is mighty seldom, however, that an escaped convict finds permanent safety. Once in a while a man is bagged after 10 or 15 years. Recaptures after two or three years are frequent. They are might few who, after a few months of a year or two, do not return to the States if not their old haunts.

"An instance of how captures are effected after long chases is that of Schmidt and Kaplan, whom I arrested three years after the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times. One of them we got on Broadway, the other on a little island up near Tacoma, Wash.

All Services Help.

"Another celebrated case was that of the fellow wanted in connection with the disappearance of a Montreal theater owner—Small, I believe his name was. A Burns operative located him in a little town away up in Oregon.

"The co-ordination established between federal, state, county and municipal authorities by the Federal Bureau of Indentification now makes it virtually impossible for anyone so to change or disguise themselves as to escape indentification. Bertillon measurements sometimes err .

"Physical characteristics covered by those measurements change. But fingerprints remain unchanged throughout life and they will make it possible to identify Mrs. Phillips when she is located or ventures back into the States again—whether next year or 10 years from now."

VIENNA'S UNEMPLOYED

VIENNA, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press).—A noisy demonstration by unemployed, in which it is estimated 50,000 persons took part, caused a practical suspension of business here yesterday.

The police in large numbers finally herded the throngs out of the inner city. It is estimated that there are wore than 100,000 new unemployed in Vienna alone, and the number is constantly increasing.

PRINCE, THE TERRIER, WAS HERO OF A TORONTO FIRE

Sounded the Alarm Which Awakened His Mistress and Averted What Might Easily Have Proved A Fatal Conflagration

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press.)—Prince, the rough haired terrier, is hero to-day of an early morning fire which might easily have developed with fatal results to many people and burned up a thickly built section of this city.

Some hours before daylight the dog barking furiously, leaped on the bed of his mistress, Mrs. E. MacDonald, and panting and licking her face roused her. Mrs. MacDonald then heard the horses in the stables of an ice company neighing and screaming as if in distress. Looking out of the window she saw flames shooting up from the stable close to several houses. In a few minutes the neighborhood was aroused and the quick arrival of the fire brigade held the flames in check in spite of the heavy winds.

Fourteen horses were burned or suffocated to death and the total damage was about $15,000.

BUT VERY FEW CRIMINAL CASES BEFORE JUDGE

General Sessions of the Peace and December Sitting of County Court Opened This Afternoon

I am glad to say there is very little criminal business before these sessions, said Judge Huycke in addressing the Grand Jury at the opening of the General Sessions of the Peace and December sitting of the County Court this afternoon. "Our old friend the reverend sheriff, and I mean reverend when I say it, because of his dignity and age, has placed before me the panel of those who are in the county jail. There are eight of these, but they are all detained for minor offences, and are undergoing sentence imposed on them by our very efficient police magistrate. With those you have nothing to do, but there are at least two cases to be heard by you. There is some doubt about one of them, and it is possible that the Crown may not press this case."

Judge Huycke directed his address to these two charges, one of theft against J. W. Wickson, which might be dropped, and the other of obtaining money under false pretences as charged aganist Reginald Winch. This part of the advice was a plain and concise little lecture on such topics as theft, color of right, fraud and false pretences, the difference between the criminal code and the grinding precedents in civil law. Judge Huycke's directions were presented so simply and lucidly that the whole audience listened intently to the interesting lesson on matters that are hazy to most laymen.

His Honour further instructed the Grand Jury as to their general duties. As an institution it was a bulwark of British liberty. "You are there to protect the State, to see that no on escapes trial. You are also to portect the individual, to see that no person is put on trial for any ulterior motive of spite, ill will or malice. It is a serious matter to be brought into this or any other court and held up to the public gaze and perhaps to ridicule unless there are good reasons for such prosecutions. Sometimes there may be mistaken information and a man charged with a crime for which there is no shadow of justification."

His Honour said the Grand Jury dealt first with the criminal cases, hearing the Crown's evidence, and determining whether the accused should be put on trial. Another duty and privilege was to visit and inspect public institutions, to see that the public's money was not wasted, and also that they were properly managed for the safety, well being and comfort of the inmates. Judge Huycke referred to the information before him that an old man was in jail for begging, and suggested that surely he ought to be in some home or House of Refuge.

Although grand juries usually select their foreman in the box, that is without retiring to their room, this afternoon's formality proved an exception. And so long, comparatively, were the jurors out, that Judge Huycke sent the Sheriff to inquire about their progress. John Renwick, a farmer of Otonabee township, was chosen foreman.

WED 2 HOURS COUPLE THEN SEEK DIVORCE

Bride, 22, Courted by Mail, and 52-Year-Old Husband Are Soon Parted.

STORIES DIFFER

..OMAHA, Dec. 12—Two hours after Jacob Ostrander, aged 52, a wealthy farmer of Randolph, Neb., was married to Mrs. Leo Webber, 22 pretty Onawa (Ia.) school teacher, they had a "misunderstanding" and now Ostrander is asking a divorce and Mrs. Ostrander is asking an annulment of the marriage.

The ceremony took place in Omaha, Ostrander got under the wire first with his petition for divorce, but Mrs. Ostrander says that was because her lawyers were behind time in getting her annulment petition to the court. Ostrander wants the divorce on the ground of desertion. Mrs. Ostrander wants the annulment because she says Ostrander misrepresented himself.

The 'misunderstanding" was over a diamond ring, a automobile and a baby. Mrs. Randolph already had the baby. It was a year old and was the child by a former marriage with Leo Webber of Sioux City.

"Mrs. Ostrander said he would buy me a $250 diamond ring and an automobile and would take care of the baby," Mrs. Ostrander said: "but after the wedding he wouldn't do any of the three."

The Ostrander were married by County Judge Crawford in the latter's office. After the ceremony they started for the hotel. En route, Ostrander said they would take a wedding trip.

"We will have to make preparations for baby", Mrs. Ostrander said to her husband.

"Oh, get that baby idea out of your head!" she avers Mr. Ostrander said.

Before they got to the hotel, according to Mrs. Ostrander, her husband asked:

'Can you make butter? Do you know how to make good bread?"

"Then it dawned on me what he wanted was a housekeeper and not a wife," Mrs. Ostrander declares

"I asked him about the diamond ring and the automobile. He said 'Nothing doing!'

The Ostranders' courtship was carried on by mail. Ten years ago Mrs. Ostrander's mother was housekeeper for Ostrander The girl, Josephine, was just 12 years old then.

"Mr. Ostrander used to object to my putting sugar on my oatmeal and butter on my bread," said Mrs. Ostrander, "but I never thought of that until we were being married. It was too late then to say anything."

Osrander tells a somewhat different story.

"She left me a couple of hours after the ceremony," he said. "I don't know what she did it for. She refused to go on a honeymoon trip, refused to occupy the same suite with me at the hotel and refused to go to my farm as my wife.

"As for the diamond ring and the automobiles I promised her—well, they were "after thoughts" in her mind."

UPPER LAKE REGION SWEPT BY A STORM.

SAULTE STE. MARIE, Mich., Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press).—The upper lake region was being swept to-day by windstorms that halted lake traffic. A dozen or more steamers were reported in sheltered harbors this morning. None of the vessels were known to be in danger. The gale was accompanied by a sharp drop in the temperature and a heavy snowfall.

Dr. Coue Tells How To Practice Conscious Auto-Suggestion Method

Every morning before getting up and every evening as soon as you are in bed shut your eyes, and repeat twenty times in succession, moving your lips (this is indispensable), and counting mechanically on a long string with twenty knots, the following phrase:

"Day by day, in every way, I am getting better and better."

Do not think of anything particular, as the words "in every way," apply to everything.

Make this auto-suggestion with confidence, with faith, with the certainty of obtaining what you want. The greater the conviction, the greater and the more rapid will be the results obtained.

Further, every time in the course of the day or night that you feel any distress, physical or mental, immediately affirm to yourself that you will not consciously contribute to it, and that you are going to make it disappear.

Then isolate yourself as much as possible, shut your eyes, and passing your hand over your forehead, if it is something mental, or over the part which is painful, if it is something physical, repeat extremely quickly, moving your lips, the words:

"It is going, it is going—," etc. ,etc. ,as long as it may be necessary.

With a little practice the physical or mental distress will have vanished in 20 to 25 seconds.

Begin again whenever it is necessary.

Avoid carefully any effort in practising auto-suggestion.

EMILE COUE.

A Commissioner Coming to City

PUBLIC SPEAKING COURSES POPULAR

Class Organized at the Y. M. C. A.—First Meeting Last Evening.

The course in public speaking at the Y.M.C.A. got off with a splendid start last night. Sixteen students were enrolled and in attendance at the initial lesson which was introductory to the main course of lectures. Mr. Joseph Wearing, the teacher of the class, who is especially well fitted by his training and experience, started without loss of time, and at once demonstrated that the choice of the teacher was indeed a fortunate one. Every one in attendance last night was delighted with their first experience, and all are looking forward eagerly to the work of the coming weeks. At the conclusion of the hour the class organized. Mr. J. W. Meyers, of the Peterborough Cereal Company, was elected president of the class, and Mr. E. G. Brown, secretary. There were some who signified their intention of taking the course who were not on hand last night, but they can be assured that starting next Monday evening they will receive the full benefit of the course. One or two enquiries were made yesterday by men who were unable to be present last night. These men and any others desirous of improving their ability to speak in public, either in a small gathering or on the platform, are urged to be on hand next Monday evening at 7 o'clock sharp. Classes start sharp on time.

These classes should be especially valuable to members of the Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club and other organizations in which members are often called upon to speak without notice. In such an emergency this training would save embarrassment and humiliation and would give the speaker that feeling of pleasure and satisfaction that comes to one who is able to speak while on his feet without confusion and embarrassment.

SAYS WILL IS SLAVE OF THE IMAGINATION

Emile Coue's Own Story of His Remaxkable Discovery for Curing All Diseases.

SELF-INFLUENCE

Following is the first of a series of 18 articles by Dr. Emile Coue, which have been secured by the Examiner, and which will be published daily. They give a complete exposition of his system of auto-suggestion. Dr. Coue's formula, "Day by day in every way I am getting better and better," is already familiar throughout the world. The method has taken Europe by storm nd it is claimed by many that it will revolutionize medicine.

BY DR. EMILE COUE.

Suggestion or rather auto-suggestion, is quite a new subject, and yet at the same time it is as old as the world.

It is new in the sense that until now it has been wrongly studied and in consequence wrongly understood.

It is old because it dates from the appearance of man on the earth.

In fact, auto-sugestion is an instrument that we possess at birth, and in this instrument or rather in this force, resides a marvellous and incalculable power, which according to circumstances produces the best or the worst results.

By knowing how to practice auto-suggestion consciously it is possible, in the first place to avoid provoking in others bad autosugestions which may have disastrous consequences; and, secondly, consciously to provoke good ones instead, thus bringing physical health to the sick, and moral health to the neurotic and the erring who are the unconscious victims of anterior autosuggestions—and to guide into the right path those who had a tendency to take the wrong one.

Conscious and Unconscious Self.

In order to understand properly the phenomena of suggestion, or again to speak more corectly, of autosuggestion, it is necessary to know that two absolutely distinct selves exist within us.

Both are intelligent, but while one is conscious the other is unconscious.

Let us take for instance the following examples :

Everyone has heard of somnambulism. Every one knows that a somnambulist gets up at night without waking, leaves his room, goes down stairs, walks along the corridors, and after having executed certain acts or accomplished certain work, returns to his room, goes to bed again, and shows next day the greatest astonishment at finding work finished which he had left unfinished the day before.

What force has his body obeyed if it is not an unconscious force, in fact his unconscious self?

Let us now examine the case of a drunkard attacked by delirium tremens. As though seized with madness, he picks up the nearest weapon—knife, hammer or hatchet, as the case may be—and strikes furiously those who are unlucky enough to be in his vicinity.

Once the attack is over he recovers his senses and contemplates with horror the scene of carnage around him, without realizing that he himself is the autor of it.

Here again is it not the unconscious self which has caused the unhappy man to act in this way?

Unconscious Self's Sure Memory.

If we compare the conscious with the unconscious self, we see that the conscious self is often possessed of a very unreliable memory. The unconscious self on the contrary, is provided with a marvellous and impeccable memory which registers without our knowledge the smallest events, the least important acts of our existence.

Further the unconscious self is credulous and accepts with unreasoning docility what it is told.

Thus, as it is the unconscious self that is responsible for the functioning of all our organs by the intermediary of the brain, a result is produced which may seem rather paradoxical to you; that is, if the unconscious self believes that a certain organ functions well or ill, or

ARMENIAN WAIFS DANGER OF DEATH

Thousands Now Living in Boats on the Bosphorus Under Protecting Guns of Fleet.

Last evening in Murray street Baptist church, Rev. H. Vining, D. D., secretary of the Armenain Relief Association, gave an interesting address on Armenia and its need for relief. The United States made a grant of two million dollars for the relief of one hundred and sixty thousand Armenian children who are in immediate danger of starvation and death. For the same purpose the Canadian government made a grant of twenty-five thousand dollars. The Armenian Relief Association is interested in the relief of these children and is trying to interest the Canadian government in a plan to bring two thousand waifs to Canada. They would be established in orphanages until they are eighteen years of age and then farmed out. At present thousands of them are living in boats on the Bosphorus under the protecting guns of the allied fleet. Should they land they would be in danger of death at the hands of the Turks. At the close of the meeting the following resolution was presented and unanimously adopted:

Resolution Re Armenian Relief.

Moved by Rev. W. Harold Young, seconded by Dr. W. D. Scott, and unanimously agreed, that this meeting held in the city of Peterborough on the eleventh day of December ,1922, representative of all classes of the community's life, has heard with horror the shocking story of the treatment of the Armenian people by the Turks. Especially does the plight of the scores of thousands of orphan children appeal to our sympathies and we learn with chagrin and humiliation of the apparent indifferences of our Dominion Government to repeated appeals for assistance in the work of making provision for these children. We are deeply conscious that not alone the common dictates of humanity but also the ties that bind us as a Christian nation to a people which for centuries has suffered untold miseries, rather than abandon the faith in Christ which, with us, they hold, demand some more vigorous action than this country has yet taken, and we unitedly and respectfully pray the Dominion Government to speedily take such steps as will more adequately discharge the plain Christian duty of this favored and peaceful land to the innocent victims of Turkish cruelty and hate.

And further that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Rt. Hon. W. L. McKenzie King, Premier of Canada, to the committee on relief of Armenian children, and to the press.

Rev. Robt. Pogue presided.

UNEMPLOYMENT IS BECOMING SERIOUS

J. G. Cooper Tells of Conditions in Glasgow — 80,000 Are Out of Work.

J. G. Cooper, a well know newspaper man of Toronto, was among the passengers on the Canadian Pacific steamship Metagama, which arrived here yesterday from Glasgow, Scotland. He had been on a visit to England and Scotland, and while there got in close touch with conditions. With reference to Scotland, he said the unemployment situation is very acute, particularly in Glasgow. Prior to his departure for Canada he learned that there were over 80000 men out of work. He explained that thousands of men depend on the shipbuilding industry and allied works for employment and as there has been a market curtailment in this line the vast majority were without the means of obtaining a livelihood. Some of the leading industrial magnates reporting that in the very near future conditions will be better, and this Mr. Cooper said is a source of comfort to all. Should any of the shipbuilding firms be successful in tendering for one or two new battleships, Mr. Cooper says it will tide a large number of workmen over for some time.

Allied Diplomats Agree To Temporarily Disagree

MANY PLANS.

LONDON, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press.)—The London conference on German reparations, generally described as the critical conference, ended yesterday in agreement only on another conference. The next link in the long chain of the Allies' struggles to get together will be forged at Paris on January 2. There will be a fortnight therefore left for the Allies to agree upon some programme.

The moratorium granted the Germans expires January 15, and the next payment on account of reparations, which Germany protests she is unable to meet, will be due on that date.

Another futile round table session of the diplomats would seem to mean only fulfillment of the French plans for independent action, which British opinion believes would spell calamity for the tottering edifice of European prosperity and sow the seeds for a future great war.

The agreement to disagree—only temporarily, the diplomats assert—was consummated in three days, embracing four meetings of the Allied Premiers. The rock on which ahrmony foundered was the British refusal formally to countenance the French project for partial occupation of the Ruhr and the taking charge of important German industries. The British Cabinet met yesterday afternoon and registered its refusal to co-operate with France in such measures .

Steamer on Fire in Mid-Atlantic

ST. VINCENT, Cape Verde Island, Dec .12.—(Canadian Press.)—The United States steamer Eastern Glade, bound from New York, for Table Bay, Cape Colony, is on fire at sea, according to a wireless despatch received from the liner Almanzora, which picked up a radio from the American vessel.

The Almanzora reports that the Eastern Glade has stopped in Latitude 12.50, Northern Longitude, 33.26. She reported that the fire was gaining rapidly.

LIQUOR CARGO LEFT TORONTO

Squad of Police Looked Helplessly On--Boat Had Clearance Papers.

TORONTO, December 12. Canadian Press. — With a squad of police looking helplessly on, there slipped from the docks here on Sunday morning a trim little submarine "chaser" loaded to the gunwales with 500 cases of whiskey. The liquor is said by the police to have been purchased for export to the United States at a cost of $13,000 from a local distillery.

The police were informed on Sunday morning that the boat was being loaded at the waterfront, and Inspector John Pogue and Plainclothesmen soon went on board her.

The captain showed clearance papers from the customs officers at Lockport, N.Y., and also from the Canadian Customs Department, for clearance of shipment from Toronto to Lockport.

Inspector Pogue was shown the receipt for $13,000 purchase price in this city of the whiskey. The police officers made a thorough search of the boat and discovered that one of the crew formerly resided in this city.

The vessel was built during the war for use as a submarine chaser and had been purchased by its present owners from the United States navy.

Unable under the existing laws to seize either the whiskey or the boat the police had to stand on the dock as the ship steamed slowly away and disappeared from view.

YOUNG DANISH PRINCE GOING INTO BUSINESS

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 12.—(Associated Press)—It is rumored here that Prince Axel, son of Prince Waldemar, who recently returned to Denmark after a voyage as captain on board one of the East Asiastic Company's ships, is now considering entering a business life.

He has expressed a wish to learn the commercial side of the company's activities, and he works daily at the offices. It is expected that he will be given a leading position in the company.

COMMISSION IS TOLD HOW GIRL MET HER DEATH

Autopsist Says Blanche Garneau Was Assaulted Three Times and Then Choked to Death.

DAY OF SENSATIONS.

QUEBEC, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press).—Blanche Garneau, a young Quebec girl, was murdered, choked to death, by either a "miscreant" or a "maniac" and she was assassinated after she had been assaulted three times, on the very spot where her body was found on July 28, 1920.

That was the statement made by Dr. Albert Merois, official autopsist for the district of Quebec, yesterday afternoon before the Royal Commission which is investigating all the circumstances surrounding the Quebec "cause celebre", which has been the talk of city and countryside in this province for the last two years and which has led to unprecedented action by the Quebec legislative assembly which appointed the commission after certain charges had been made against members of the legislature and their relatives by the editor of a Montreal weekly paper.

The enquiry will probably be concluded this week.

FARMERS IN FAVOR OF BROADENING OUT.

Leclare Agrarians and City Men Have Many Interests in Common.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press,) — United Farmers of East Middlesex held their annual meeting in the county buildings here yesterday afternoon, and elected George Bogue, of Byron, president. J. W. Freeborn, M.L.A., East Middlesex ,and A. L. Hodgins, M.P. for the same constituency, were on hand however, and delivered short speeches. They favored a broadening out policy for the Progressives and a number of other speakers followed the same lead.

Concerning Mr. Morrison's remarks at Lindsay on broadening out, Mr .Bogue said that the farmer and city man have many things in common. He deplored the idea that there should be the slighest friction between them.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

An Old Resident

The late Mary Ann Tims, who passed away, after a lingering illness, on Thursday, December 7th at the residence of her niece, Mrs. Albert Payne, was born in Ireland almost eighty-three years ago, but had spent the major portion of her life in Mill brook. Deceased came to America with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tims, at an early age being one of a family of three children, two daughters, the eldest of whom was Mrs. M. Pendrie, and one son, Robert, both of whom predeceased their sister by several years Their first home after leaving Ireland, where they had lived both in Dublin and Armagh, was in New York, but not long after they had settled there the father's death occurred; Mrs. Tims, with her three children, shortly afterwards came to Millbook to visit relatives who resided here, the Pendrie and Greer families, and was persuaded to remain with her friends rather than return to New York amongst strangers. After her mother's death Miss Tims made he home with her sister, Mrs. Pendrie, and since her decease had resided with her niece, Mrs. A. Payne. She was a faithful member and supporter of the Methodist church practically all her life, seldom absent from the Sunday services as long as her health would permit and gave an especial allegiance and loyalty to the work of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary. For the past five years, however, she had been unable to attend Divine worship and for about one year previous to her death was a confirmed invalid, confined to her room, but able to be up occasionally an occupy heself with some light tasks. Miss Tims though of a retiring disposition, was a devoted Christian, doing much good in a quiet way ,a fact to which many who have been benefited by her kindness, could bear willing testimony

The funeral was held on Saturday, December 9th, the services being in charge of the Rev. S. T. Tucker, assisted by Rev. J. Wilks. The pallbearers were Messrs. I. E. Needham, W. G. Hetherington, J. Whitfield, A. Payne, W. Pendrie and F. Pendrie. Interment took place in the family burial plot at Gardiner's cemetery.

Mrs. C. Storey of Toronto, is making an extended visit with her sister, Mrs. M. Sutton, Anne street.

Yesterday vessels were storm bound in Thunder Bay by wind and snow.

J. WANNAMAKER DEAD AT HOME.

Eighty-Four Years Old and Continued in Harness Till November.

PHILADELPHIA, December 12.—Canadian Press. — John Wanamaker died at his home here at 8 a.m. He had been confined to his home since early in November, with a heavy cold. The late Mr. Wanamaker was 84 years old.

Mr. Wannamaker was active in his business affairs up to the time he was stricken. He spent much of last winter in Florida, and was in this city all summer, hard at work, with the occasional lapse from the duties of his office for a day or two at the seashore. He was always an early riser and was usually in his mercantile establishment before its doors were opened.

FLEMING WILL RUN FOR MAYOR

Resigns as Manager Toronto Railway Co. to Contest the Coming Election.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—Robert John Fleming, better known to the majority of citizens as "R. J." general manager of the Toronto Railway Company, has relinquished his connection with that company so that he may serve the citizens in another important field of usefulness.

He tendered his resignation to the diretcors of the Toronto Railway Company yesterday and it was accepted. This leaves him free to offer himself as a Mayoralty candidate in the forthcoming muncipal elections.

Premier Bonar Law Refuses to Talk on Meeting of Allied Representatives —Discord Still Reigns.

OVER REPARATIONS.

LONDON, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—Premier Bonar Law, who has remained a Sphinx throughout the three days' conversations between the Allied Miinsters, while the others gave out the news and views regarding the proceedings, is not expected to unseal his lips until he appears in the House of Commons on Thursday to speak on foreign policy in general, but British official circles do not express optimistic views regarding the outcome of the conference.

After Mr. Bonar Law's speech on Thursday the floor will be taken by Mr. Lloyd George.

Throughout the Premiers' conference the policy of force has clashed with that of foresight on the reparations issue, according to the British, with the result that the year 1922 will end with almost as great an Allied discord as did the year 1921. It is pointed out that the French attitude has considerably altered since the summer; even the French no longer hope to exact £6,600,000,000 Sterling as set by the first reparations plan, but there is still a wide difference regarding the methods of obtaining a third of that sum, which it is now considered possible to otbain.

There is said to be hope of further concession on the part of France before the continuation of the conversations at Paris; otherwise there appears to be no certainty that the British and French can accommodate their different viewpoints. A wider breach than now exists between the French and British has been prevented by the recent hardening of the British attitude toward Germany. The Germans, in British opinion, continue to be their own worst enemies. Violations of agree-

DISAPPOINTMENT IN FRENCH CIRCLES OVER CONFERENCE

French Officials Find Some Comfort in the Fact That All the Allies Are Still Friendly.

HOPE FOR FUTURE.

PARIS, Dec. 12. — (Canadian Press.)—Some disappointment is apparent in French official circles over the adjournment of the London Conference without the Premiers reaching even a basis of agreement, but comfort is found in the friendliness of all parties to the negotiations and the definite fixing of a later meeting. This general situation, it is felt, justifies hope for a future agreement.

SIR GEORGE FOSTER ON NATIONS' LEAGUE.

KINGSTON, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press.)—Before a capacity crowd of members of the Canadian Club last night, Sir George Foster spoke for two hours on the League of Nations from its formation. He treated the subject in a masterly manner and at the conclusion of his address the club placed itself on record as in favor of the formation of a branch of the League of Nations Society.

IRISH OBJECT TO CATTLE EMBARGO

Bill Would Place Irish Cattle in the Same Difficulties as Canadians — Provokes Discussion.

LONDON, Dec. 12. — (Canadan Press.)— Discussion in committee last evening of the bill to remove the embargo on Canadian cattle provoked lively protests from and on behalf of the Irish members of the House of Commons. The Bill provides for the detention of Canadian cattle six days at the port of debarkataion and that this restriction also shall apply to Irish cattle.

This bill has already been severely criticized in Ireland. Governer-General Healy and the Ministers of the Free State have protested that any injustice to the Irish cattle trade with England would have a most injurious effect on Ireland.

SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION.

When a special committee appointed by the Rotary Club to consider ways and means of interesting Peterboro's boys and girls in the value of a complete education finds it necessary to report that a campaign along those lines at this juncture would be a wasted effort because of the lack of accommodation at the Collegiate Institute the situation calls for serious thought.

The Rotary report declares that the Institute is so crowded that there is not room for any more pupils and consequently any effort to interest more Peterboro young people in higher education would be futile.

That is a condition of affairs that cannot be allowed to continue.

Firms and individuals desiring to locate in a city usually are insistent that educational facilities must be available.

It is therefore a poor advertisement for Peterboro to have to acknowledge that our Collegiate accommodation is so limited that there is no possiblity of more pupils being taken care of in the present building.

What is to be the remedy?

Apparently the Board of Education is unable to decide.

Side by side with the need of more high school accommodation is the equally pressing need of providing facilities for technical education.

The two requirements or rather the question of the best method of dealing with them seems to have involved the Board into such a tangle of conflicting opinion that it is unable to decide upon a definite proposition.

An attempt to have the ratepayers solve the problem through a referendum has been frustrated by the refusal of the City Council to submit the question to the people and there apparently the matter rests.

Ratepayers should insist that all candidates for the Board of Education should set forth clearly their position in regard to these questions.

THE HESITATING CANDIDATES.

Although municipal candidates in various centres in Ontario are throwing their hats into the ring and lining up for the campaign, Peterboro aspirants for civic honours continue to shiver on the brink like the small boys hesitating to take the first dip of the season.

They prefer a short campaign, as one or two of them have declared.

It is of course to the advantage of a certain type of candidate that the fight should not be prolonged.

A week's campaign does not give the electors a chance to realize how barren of ideas such candidates are or how little in the way of sound counsel, accurate judgment and progressive policies they would bring with them to the city hall in the event of their being elected.

But for the man who has ideas of his own, who sees ways in which he can be of service, who has some insight into the civic problems and a platform that is sound and reasonable should be ready now to let his intentions be known and to place his case before the people.

It is all right for the candidate with nothing definite to offer to hang back as long as possible, for the briefer the campaign the better his chances.

It is the other fellow who has a policy and a platform that the Examiner would respectfully suggest that he should waste no time in buckling on his armour and getting into the fray.

Last minute guesses have in the past resulted in the election of some decidedly useless and inefficient civic rulers.

Earlier entrance into the campaign of worth while candidates might have avoided such a contretemps and at the same time imparted a badly needed fillip to Peterboro's much too lethargic municipal election campaign.

THE ROTARY OFFER.

The offer of the special committee of the Rotary Club appointed to consider a campaign for complete education, to meet privately any local school pupils and discuss with them any line of work in which Rotarians are engaged should not be overlooked by Peterboro's young people.

The Rotarians, each one of whom represents a different profession or calling are in a position to offer sound advice as the various occupations open to boys and girls.

Such advice should be worth receiving.

This question of selecting a proper vocation is too often neglected.

Young people go of their own free will or are pitchforked into positions where they do not fit.

They are round pegs in a square hole.

Advice from somebody able to offer sound counsel and supply the information that is often lacking might change the condition of affairs.

Dean Nicholson of the University of Minnesota in dealing with this subject not long ago deplored the present tendency of students to seek a definite vocational idea early in their school life.

Some boys he said want to be physicians simply because there has always been a doctor in the family."

Similar casual reasons lead others to dentistry and engineering.

As a rule students plunge into a vocation with little thought of their own capability for that particular calling and often with little information as to what requirements they need.

Advice on the selection of vocations by men who have proven successful should be of much help and the Rotary committee in undertaking such an obligation is offering a community service of undoubted value.

"PLAY THE GAME"

Speaking at the formal opening of Goldings, a technical school of the Barnardo homes in Hertford, England, the Prince of Wales exhorted his young hearers, under all circumstances, to "play the game." "Whether you are winning or whether you are losing," he said, "you can always 'play the game:.' It is the proud boast of the Britisher that he knows, under all circumstances, how to "play the game," says the Hamilton Spectator. It is the most cherished and valuable characteristic of the British race. Just recently, Great Britain has been giving conspicious examples of this quality of true sportsmanship, notably in the scrapping of her big warships, in conformity with the spirit of the Washington diarmament conference, to which she was a party. Britain, alone of all the nations, carried out the strict terms of the agreement and, though she is more dependent on sea power than any other country, she was the first to honor her plighted word, even though it might possibly be to her detriment.

The fortunate young people of Canada have less need for fortitude, perhaps than the little Barnardo boys and girls, who have been snatched from a life of neglect and despair. It should be easy for young Canadians to play the game. The best thing about sport is that it teaches one to be a good loser as well as a good winner. In the game of life there will be defeats as well as victories; and in the one case and the other they should be taken with equal philosophy. The important thing is to do one's part conscientiously and to the best of one's ability. "Playing the game" means earnest effort on the part of the individual, and it means also loyal co-operation with others. That is another most useful feature of sport. It teaches the necessity of "team play" without which no set of players, however skillful, can win out. It is sometimes necessary for the individual to sacrifice himself, and according to the degree in which he can do this without complaining and with good grace, his qualities of real sportsmanship are estimated. In life, as in play, to "play the game" means more than mere aggressiveness; it means sound judgment, honesty, fairness and, sometimes, self-effacement. This is all too frequently forgotten.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The price of coal in Lindsay has been fixed at $16.50. Coal dealers announce that they will sell at that price—when they can get the coal.

Ald. Gainey's proposal for a Park's Commision deserved a better fate at the hands of the Council. Some such plan will eventually have to be adopted to replace the present haphazard manner of dealing with the City's parks.

Citizens who are being urged to run for municipal honours declare that they are too busy to accept the responsibility. But the busy man usually makes the best civic representative.

The U.F.O. convention will furnish the answer as to whether Drury's policy will "broaden out" or merely "flatten out."

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Interesting Programme at Young People's Meeting

MILLBROOK, Dec. 12.—A program of unusual interest was given in the Young Peoples' League on Monday evening under the auspices of the Missionary Department, of which Mrs. G. W. Sayles is the efficient vice-president. The evening was devoted to "Who's Who?" contest those taking part representing missionaries and their wives from the field in West China. An imaginary map was illustrated upon the wall with the names of the cities printed in large letters on cardboard slips, and as each read his, or her, message, the "missionaries" were seated under the name of the city, where work is carried on; a great deal of useful information was gained in this way that will more readily be retained in the memory than if given in some more stereotyped form Those who assisted with the program included: Miss Estelle Hetherington and Miss Gertrude Spence, who impersonated Rev. J. P. and Mrs. Joliffe of Loochow, Rev. S. T. Tucker and Miss Marion Spence, representing Rev. E. W. and Mrs. Morgan of Foochow, Mr. Irwin Hatherly and Mrs. P. Stinson representing Rev. A. C. and Mrs. Hoffman of Tziluting, Mr. F. Alcorn and Miss H. Barnard representing Rev. S. E. and Mrs. Annis of Chungchow, Mr. G. W. Sayles and Miss Loretta Barnard representing Rev. C. W. and Mrs. Service (medical) of Chungking, Mr. Arnald Rapier and Miss Bertha Hatherly representing Rev. J. L. and Mrs. Stewart, of the West China Union University, Chentu, Mr. W. G. Hetherington and Mrs. Tucker representing Rev. and Mrs. A. P. Quentin of Kiating, Miss A. Stewart and Mrs. Weatherup representing Rev. E. W. and Mrs. Hibbard, of Chentu and Mrs. W. West and Miss Burnham representing Rev. S. H. and Mrs. Soper of Jenshow. The fact that Rev. E. W. Hibbard is of English parentage, and that nine members of the family are in active missionary work is of particular interest as he and Mrs. Hibbard now represent the Peterboro district 'on the firing-line" he is graduate of Wesley College, Winnipeg, and first went to China in the autumn of 1912 his wife died the following January following an attack of smallpox, and in 1919 he married his present wife who was then a W.M.S. worker in China.

There will probably be no further meetings of the League until January as every Monday evening is taxed up by some special event for the next three weeks at least.

Miss G. Richards, who has been spending a two weeks visit at the home of her brother, Mr. E. C. Richards, has returned to her position in Fenelon Falls, her little neice Gertie accompanying her aunt for a few weeks stay with friends in Fenelon.

The lantern slide entertainment to be given by the Methodist Sunday school when "The Night Before Christmas," and Van Dyke's "The Other Wise Man," are to be shown, has been changed from Wednesday, December 20th, to Tuesday, the 19th inst., at 8 p.m., as the slides have to be returned to Toronto on Wednesday morning ,being needed at another point.

The "Wide Awakes" group of Canadian Girls in Training will not meet again until January as the evenings at present are all taken up with other important gatherings, which make it impossible for the girls to hold their usual session.

A Radio Outfit.

The honor of being the first in town to purchase a radio outfit belongs to Dr. H. A. Turner, who last week installed a first lass instrument which is at present located in the reception room at the rear of the drug store. Probably later the doctor will have it removed to his house. Several have had the pleasure of listening in for the first time and as the instrument has a radius of two thousand miles concerts have been picked up as far south as St. Louis, as well as from broadcasting stations in other parts of the States and Canada.

Had Bad Pains In Her Heart

Nerves Were Very Bad

Mrs. John Case, R. R. No. 4, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I wish to say that I have been bothered very much with my heart and nerves. I doctored with two different doctors, but did not find much relief. I would have such bad pains in my heart, at times, I would be almost afraid to move or breathe, and at night I could not sleep. If the pains in my heart were gone, my nerves would be so bad I could not lie still and would only get a little sleep by being tired out. My stomach was also very bad and I could not eat but very little, and then only certain things or I would have so much distress which always made my heart worse.

I had been suffering for nearly two years until one day I was talking to our druggist about the way I felt. He advised me to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a fair trial. I have now taken five boxes and am feeling so much better, I am able to do my own work, and can eat anything I wish. I cannot praise

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS too highly."

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A. A. MILNE

Antony tried to put himself in Cayley's place—Cayley, when Antony had first discovered him, hammering at the door and crying, "Let me in!" Whatever had happened inside the office, whoever had killed Robert, Cayley knew all about it, and knew that Mark was not inside, and had not escaped by the window. But it was necessary to Cayley's plans—to Mark's plans if they were acting in concert—that he should be thought so to have escaped. At some time, then, while he was hammering (the key in his pocket) at the locked door, he must suddenly have remembered —with what a shock!—that a mistake had been made. A window had not been left open!

And then Antony's sudden appearance! Here was a complication. And Antony suggesting that they should try the window! Why, the window was just what he wanted to avoid. No wonder he had seemed dazed at first.

Ah, and here at last was the explanation why they had gone the longest way round—and yet run. It was Cayley's only chance of getting a start on Antony, of getting to the windows first, of working them open somehow before Antony caught him up. Even if that were impossible, he must get there first, just to make sure.

So he had run. But Antony had kept up with him. They had broken in the window together, and gone into the office. But Cayley was not done yet. There was the dressing-room window! But quietly, quietly, Antony mustn't hear.

And Antony didn't hear. Indeed, he had played up to Cayley splendidly. Not only had he called attention to the open window, but he had carefully explained to Cayley why Mark had chosen this particular window in preference to the office window. And Cayley had agreed that probably that was the reason. How he must have chuckled to himself!

They were outside on the lawn again now, Bill and Antony, and Bill was listening openmouthed to his friend's theory of yesterday's happenings. It only gave them another mystery to solve.

"What's that?" said Antony.

"Mark. Where's Mark? If he never went into the office at all, then where is he now?"

"I don't say that he never went into the office. In fact, he must have gone. Elsie heard him." He stopped and repeated slowly, "She heard him—at least she says she did. But if he was there, he came out again by the door."

"Well, but where does that lead you?"

"Where it led Mark. The passage."

"Do you mean that he's been hiding there all the time?"

Antony was silent until Bill had repeated his question, and then with an effort he came out of his thoughts and answered him.

"We'd better make certain. Could you be a sleuth-hound, Bill—one of those that travel on their stomachs very noiselessly? I mean, could you get near enough to the pond to make sure that Cayley is still there, without letting him see you?"

"Rather!" He got up eagerly. "You wait."

Antony's head shot up suddenly. "Why, that was what Mark said," he cried.

"Mark?"

"Yes. What Elsie heard him say."

"Oh, that."

"Yes . . . I suppose she couldn't have made a mistake, Bill? She did hear him?"

"She couldn't have mistaken his voice, if that's what you mean."

"Oh?"

"Mark had an extraordinary characteristic voice."

"Oh!"

"Rather high-pitched, you know, and—well, one can't explain, but—"

"Yes?"

"Well, rather like this, you know, or even more so if anything." He rattled these words off in Mark's rather monotonous, highpitched voice, and then laughed, and added in his natural voice, "I say, that was really rather good."

Antony nodded quickly. "That was like it?" he said.

"Exactly."

"Yes." He got up and squeezed Bill's arm. "Well just go and see about Cayley, and then we'll get moving. I shall be in the library."

"Right."

Bill nodded and walked off in the direction of the pond. This was glorious fun; this was life. The immediate program could hardly be bettered.

To Antony, who was older and who realized into what deep waters they were getting, it did not seem fun. But it was amazingly interesting. It was like looking at an opal, and discovering with every movement of it some new color, some new gleam of light reflected, and yet never really seeing the opal as a whole. His brain could not get hold of it.

But there were moments when he almost had it . . . and then turned away from it. He had seen more of life than Bill, but he had never seen murder before, and this which was in his mind now, and to which he was afraid to listen, was not just the hot-blooded killing which any man may come to if he lose control. It was something much more horrible. Too horrible to be true. Then let him look again for the truth. He looked again—but it was all out of focus.

CHAPTER XIV

BILL had come back, and had reported, rather breathless, that Cayley was still at the pond.

They stood in front of the row of sermons. Antony took down the Reverend Theodore Ussher's famous volume, and felt for the spring. Bill pulled. The shelves swung open toward them.

"By Jove!" said Bill, "it is a narrow way."

There was an opening about a yard square in front of them, which had something the look of a brick fireplace, a fireplace raised about two feet from the ground. But, save for one row of bricks in front, the floor of it was emptiness. Antony took a torch from his pocket and flashed it down into the blackness.

"Look," he whispered to the eager Bill. "The steps begin down there. Six feet down."

He flashed his torch up again. There was a handhold of iron, a sort of large iron staple, in the bricks in front of them.

"You swing off from there," said Bill. "At least, I suppose you do. I wonder how Ruth Norris liked doing it."

"Cayley helped her, I should think. . . . It's funny."

"Shall I go first?" asked Bill, obviously longing to do so.

Antony shook his head with a smile.

"I think I will, if you don't mind very much, Bill."

"Righto," he said. "Go on."

"Well, we'll just make sure we can get back again, first. It really wouldn't be fair on the Inspector if we got stuck down here for the rest of our lives. He's got enough to do trying to find Mark, but if he has to find you and me as well—"

Antony sat down on the ledge of bricks, swung his feet over, and sat there for a moment, his legs dangling. He flashed his torch into the darkness again, so as to make sure where the steps began; then returned it to his pocket, seized the staple in front of him and swung himself down. His feet touched the steps beneath him, and he let go.

"Is it all right?" said Bill anxiously.

"All right. I'll just go down to the bottom of the steps and back. Stay there."

The light shone down by his feet. His head began to disappear. For a little while Bill, craning down the opening, could still see faint splashes of light, and could hear slow uncertain footsteps; for a little longer he could fancy that he saw and heard them; then he was alone. . . .

Well, not quite alone. There was a sudden voice in the hall outside.

"Good Lord!" said Bill, turning round with a start, "Cayley!"

If he was not so quick in thought as Antony, he was quick enough in action. Thought was not demanded now. To close the secret door safely but noiselessly, to make sure that the books were in the right places, to move away to another row of shelves—the difficulty was not to decide what to do, but to do all this in five seconds rather than in six.

"Ah, there you are," said Cayley from the doorway.

"Hallo!" said Bill, in surprise, looking up from the fourth volume of "The Life and Works of Samuel Taylor Coleridge." "Have they finished?"

"Finished what?"

"The pond," said Bill, wondering why he was reading Coleridge on such a fine afternoon. Desperately he tried to think of a good reason . . . verifying a quotation—an argument with Antony—that would do. But what quotation?

"Oh, no. They're still at it. Where's Gillingham?"

"The Ancient Mariner"—water, water, everywhere—or was that something else? And where was Gillingham? Water, water everywhere—

"Tony? Oh, he's about somewhere. They aren't finding anything at the pond, are they?"

"No. But they like doing it. Something off their minds when they can say they've done it."

Bill, deep in his book, looked up and said "Yes," and went back to it again. He was just getting to the place.

"What's the book?" said Cayley, coming up to him. Out of the corner of his eye he glanced at the shelf of sermons as he came. Bill saw that glance and wondered. Was there anything there to give away the secret?

"I was just looking up a quotation," he drawled. "Tony and I had a bet about it. You know that thing—about—er—water, water everywhere, and—er—not a drop to drink." (But what on earth, he wondered to himself, were they betting about?)

"'Nor any drop to drink,' to be accurate."

Bill looked at him in surprise. Then a happy smile came on his face.

"Quite sure?" he said.

"Of course."

"Then you've saved me a lot of trouble. That's what the bet was about." He closed the book with a slam, put it back in its shelf, and began to feel for his pipe and tobacco. "I was a fool to bet with Tony," he added. "He always knows that sort of thing."

So far, so good. But here was Cayley still in the library, and there was Antony, all unsuspecting, in the passage. When Antony came back he would not be surprised to find the door closed, because the whole object of his going had been to see if he could open it easily from the inside. At any moment, then, the bookshelf might swing back and show Antony's head in the gap. A nice surprise for Cayley!

WON BY A JOKE.

NICKERSON, Kansas, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press.) —Declaring she won in recent election because club women jokingly wrote her name on a ballot, Miss Clara Arnold, 19 years old, protested yesterday when asked to qualify for office of justice of the peace and police judge. "It's a joke," she said. "I don't want to be called Judge Arnold.' 'Informed she must qualify or be subject to prosecution, she said, "I'll qualify, but I don't want the job." Friends declare Miss Arnold is the youngest, if not the only woman police judge in Kansas.

NEW RESIDENTS OF CAMPBELLFORD GET PRESENTATION

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Third Remembered By Seymour East Friends—Campbellford News.

CAMPBELLFORD, December 12.—Prior to their leaving the old homestead, Seymour East, to take up their residence in town, Mr. and Mrs George Third were pleasantly surprised last week when about one hundred of their friends and neighbors assembled to spend a social evening with them. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. George Fry on behalf of those present, presented Mr. and Mrs. Third with a leather couch, two large chairs and a jardiniere stand, an address also being read by Miss Lillian Locke. Mr. Third although taken entirely by surprise, replied on behalf of himself and wife, thanking his friends for their kind remembrance and inviting them to visit them in their new home. The remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent in music and dancing.

The Grave.

There passed away in Campbellford on Sunday, Mr. Thomas J. Haig, one of the town's most highly respected citizens, at the age of 66 years. The late Mr. Haig, who was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Haig of Seymour East, was for some years engaged in farming, until his removal to town some years ago.

The deceased, althoug an invalid for a number of years, bore his sufferings with Christian fortitude and patience and has now gone to his great reward. He was also a faithful member of the Presbyterian church, and the funeral took place this morning from the family residence Booth street, at 10 o'clock, and was largely attended, service being conducted by the pastor of St. Andrew's church, Rev. C. F. McIntosh. The remains were laid to rest in the family plot Burnbrae cemetery.

Deceased leaves to mourn his loss, his widow, formerly Miss Thompson, of Menie, and two daughters, Mrs. James Walters of Seymour West, and Miss Helen at home; also three brothers, Alex. and James of Seymour East, and Dr. A. Haig and Mrs E. Rannie of town. The family have universal sympathy in their bereavement.

CRUSHED BY A LARGE BOILER

Accident to Wm. Hawkrigg at Campbellford—New Industry Hoped For—News Briefs.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 12.—William Hawkrigg, of the firm of Mason and Hawkrigg, steam fitters, met with a serious accident Monday having his back badly crushed and strained, while installing a boiler at the St. Lawrence Hotel. Military Ball.

Stock Shipments.

Wm. Ross of Meyersburg, shipped a double car of lambs (187) to Dunn, Lavack, Toronto, on Monday.

Many Improvements.

Campbellford has the biggest mileage of cement sidewalk of any town of its size in Eastern Ontario. The pas tsummer has marked the completion of nearly all the principal streets and with the finishing up of the Front and Wellington street sewers, unlimited electric power, a motor fire truck of the most modern type, pure spring water from artesian wells, Campbellford practically enjoys all the conveniences of a city. But, strange to say, the population remains stationary. There will be a chance for the ratepayers to vote on a by-law during January, which will mean bringing at least fourteen new families to town in connection with a thriving industry.

Personal News.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCook, of Grand Road, entertained a number of friends at cards on Monday evening.

GILLETT'S LYE

Comparatively few people realize to what extent Gillett's Lye can be used to advantage in every home. For instance, with one can of Gillett's Lye and five and a half pounds of lard or grease, ten pounds of good hard soap can be made. Use one tablespoon Gillett's Lye in gallon of water for cleaning and disinfecting refrigerators, sinks, garbage cans, tiled floors, baths and toilets.

Useful for over 500 purposes.

FRANCE ABANDONS

ments and outrages against Allied officers and various "pin-pricking" measures against foreigners in Germany have so irritated the British that, should the French insist upon carrying out coercive measures and occupy the Ruhr, it is declared there will be no protest from London.

Six months ago the British would have formally protested such action, but now they would merely look on, believing French action to be unwise and likely to foment economic and social disturbances, instead of being productive of the expected results in the way of reparations payments.

It is stated that the attitude of the United States does not enter into the British plans for solving the problems of reparations and Inter-Allied debts. Again and again it has been declared that the American claim would be paid, and at the same time Great Britain can cancel the French debt if the American debts are funded satisfactorily, while Great Britain is willing to accept her share of the German reparations in Category C., which is believed to be cancellation of reparations unless Germany proves able to pay much more than is now expected.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Asked about domestic conditions brought about by the unemployment, Mr. Cooper said that there is no doubt they would be distressing were it not for the fact, that married and single men are receiving a pro rata allowance from an unemployment insurance fund.

The pronounced success of the Labor party at the general elections this month. Mr. Cooper, attributes to the unrest in industrial areas in Scotland. While it was expected that this would improve their strength north of the Tweed, he said it was never anticipated that they would win so many seats. Asked about the cost of living Mr. Cooper, said it is down approximately in comparison with the last year or two, but that the working classes complain that wages have dropped to a greater extent than the prices of commodities In many instances, he said, the wages have practically reached a pre-war basis

Be a Thoughtful Santa Claus this Year!

BE a thoughtful, rather than an extravagant Santa Claus this Christmas. Give her something personal if you wish, but give her also something which shows you sympathize with and understand her housekeeping problems. Give her a whole new, beautiful, shining set of Diamond Ware, Pearl Ware, or Crystal Ware—those wonderful, clean, lovely enameled wares.

Makes Food Taste Better

Perhaps she has been struggling along with a motley collection of all sorts of cooking utensils, doing her best on cheap wares, slaving away half the evening cleaning up her all-metal pots and pans.

Do you realize that those wonderful meals of hers could be still more wonderful if she had the proper utensils to work with—Diamond Ware or Pearl Ware? They make food taste better. They have the smooth, clean finish of finest crockery without the breakage. They give no taint, no metallic flavor, to the food.

And they are so easy to clean and keep clean. Where other utensils require special cleaners, Diamond Ware and Pearl Ware just need a quick wash with soap and water. SMP utensils clean as easily as a china platter or bowl.

Cut Down Fuel Bills

Diamond Ware and Pearl Ware utensils heat quicker and retain even heat, thus cutting down fuel bills. They give far better satisfaction, and if given fair care will outlast any kitchen ware made. Good hardware stores sell SMP Wares.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

A Trying Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Detroit, Michigan—"During the Change of Life, I had a lot of stomach trouble, and was bothered a great deal with hot flashes. Sometimes I was not able to do any work at all. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your little books and took it with very good results. I keep house and am able now to do all my own work. I recommend your medicine and am willing for you to publish my testimonial." Mrs. J. S. Livernois, 2051 Junction Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Queer Feelings at Middle Age

Sheboygan, Wisconsin—"I was rundown, tired and nervous. I could not even do my own housework, could not sleep at night and all kinds of queer thoughts would come to me. Finally, I gave up going to the doctor and a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After the first bottle I could sleep better and I have kept on improving ever since." Mrs. B. Lanser, 1639 N. 3rd St., Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Knightington, Ontario.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable compound at the Change of Life for troubles women often have at that time. I had not been well for a year and was not really able to do my work. A friend who had taken the Vegetable Compound herself recommended it to me, and I highly recommend it to all women with troubles like mine." Mrs. Daniel J. Tracey, Knightington, Ontario.

Let the Compound Help You

The critical time of a woman's life usually comes between the years of 45 and 50, and is often beset with annoying symptoms such as nervousness, irritability, melancholia. Heat flashes or waves of heat appear to pass over the body, cause the face to be very red and often bring on headache, dizziness and a sense of suffocation.

Another annoying symptom which comes at this time is an inability to recall names, dates or other small facts. This is liable to make a woman lose confidence in herself. She becomes nervous, avoids meeting strangers and dreads to go out alone.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted to help women at this time. It exercises a restorative influence, tones and strengthens the system, and assists nature in the long weeks and months covering this period. Let it help carry you through this time of life. It is a splendid medicine for the middle-aged woman. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

WOULD CENSOR FILMS, GIVE BAD BOOKS AWAY.

Spaeth Says Pictures, Not the Printed Words, Can Corrupt Youth.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Censorship of motion pictures but not of books was advocated by Dr. J. Duncan Spaeth, Professor of English at Princeton University, in a lecture before the League for Political Education at the Town Hall here.

"There is all the difference in the world between the book and the motion picture," he said. "I wouldn't censor any books. I wouldn't allow books which I considered indecent or lascivious to be sold, I would give them away, for that would stop a good many from reading them.

"It requires experience to interpret literature. A boy can look up the words 'father,' 'mother,' 'or love' in the dictionary, but he will never know their meanings except through experience. Every dictionary gives a different meaning.

"I would let my children read through every word of Shakespeare or the Bible, unexpurgated but if I were reading the Bible to you today, or Othello I would surely expurgate some passages.

"Pictures create new experiences, making it simple for the spectator to grasp everything he sees. I would let my children read 'Jurgen,' which the Society for the Suppression of Vice attempted to suppress, for all they would get out of it is a lot of fun from the queer names mentioned in the book.

"But that is not true of moving pictures which are so often to life and the things we see all the time. I think that public opinion ought to control this whole matter of the moving picture because it touches the life of the growing generation and brings about new experiences in a way in which nothing else does."

MOTHER OFFERED CHILD TO ATONE FOR ONE KILLED

But Woman Whose Baby Had Been Crushed to Death by Auto Refuses the Sacrifice.

SHE IS ILL IN HOSPITAL

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 12.—A mother offered her only child in court to atone for the life of a child that had been killed—it was the greatest sacrifice she could make.

And the mother whose baby is dead turned away the proposal—better no child at all for her than a child who would unwittingly only serve to remind her of her loss.

Mrs. Charles Buckley is the mother who offered to yield her own baby to compensate so far as is humanly possible for the life that had been taken. She and her husband were motoring through the city, with the husband at the wheel, when their machine ran down and crushed 4-year-old Marian Newton. The infant died in the arms of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Newton.

Mother in Hospital.

Charles Buckley was arrested. Mrs. Newton suffered a mental collapse as her child died and was hurried to St. Joseph's Hospital, where she is critically ill.

The Buckleys are also suffering severely from the shock of the tragedy. In his cell the husband cried:

"Would to God that I had died instead of that child. I'd willingly go to my grave now if that would bring the little girl back."

It was Mrs. Buckley who suggested that they offer their own baby to the Newtons to take the place of the dead girl. Isabel Buckley is 5 years old, a year older than the victim of the speeding motor. The woman went to the attorney for her husband, weeping:

"I'll do it—I'll do it, if it kills me. Ask them if they will take little Isabel. Charles and I are, oh, so fond of her. I don't know how we can part with her. But I'll do it. I'll do anything. Let them have her."

Mother's Offer Rejected.

The attorney carried the proposal to Frederick Newton as he was about to visit his wife. He shook his head, then after seeing the patient, gave this answer.

"It's hopeless. The thing cannot be considered. Nothing can bring Marian back to us and we only want Marian, our own child."

The old law may say "a life for a life," but the old law was not intended to cover such problems. Charles Buckley offered in addition to place himself under bond never to drive or ride in an automobile as long as he lived.

It is charged that he was intoxicated when the child was killed. He denied this, but he did admit that he had been drinking, and added:

"I was not intoxicated nor was my wife. I had only two small drinks of wine. The lights of another automobile, coming head on, blinded me, so that I hit a traffic monument and the car careened into the throng on the safety station."

Motor Mortality High.

Dr. T. W. B. Leland reported that in the year just ended, ninety-nine deaths by automobiles have been the subject of inquests in the city, and he added:

"Since July 1 the rate has increased enormously. In the last four months forty-nine persons have been killed here. Two detectives have been given permanent details to investigate these deaths."

In September last there were 435 motor accidents in which more than 214 persons were injured. Three men are held under charges of manslaughter at present.

SAYS WILL

that we feel such and such an impression, the organ in question does indeed function well or ill, or we do feel that impression.

Not only does the unconscious self preside over the functions of our organism, but also over all our actions whatever they are.

It is this that we call imagination, and it is this which, contrary to accepted opinion, always makes us act even, and above all, against our will, when there is antagonism between these two forces.

The Will Always Yields to Imagination.

If we open a dictionary and look up the word "will" we find this definition: "The faculty of freely determining certain acts."

We accept this definition as true and unattackable, although nothing could be more false. This will that we claim so proudly, always yields to the imagination. It is an absolute rule that admits of no exception.

"Blasphemy! Paradox!" you will exclaim. "Not at all! On the contrary, it is the purest truth," I shall reply.

Suppose that we place on the ground a plank 30 feet long by one foot wide. It is evident that everybody will be capable of going from one end to the other of this plank without stepping over the edge.

But now change the conditions of the experiment, and imagine the plank placed at the height of the towers of a cathedral. Who then will be capable of advancing even a few feet along this narrow path?

Before you had taken two steps you would begin to tremble, and in spite of every effort of your will you would be certain to fall to the ground.

Why is it then that you would not and why should you fall if it is raised to a height above the ground? Simply because in the first case you imagine that it is easy to go to the end of this plank, while in the second case you imagine that you cannot do so.

Notice that your will is powerless to make you advance; if you imagine that you cannot, it is absolutely impossible for you to do so.

If tilers and carpenters are able to accomplish this feat, it is because they think they can do it.

Vertigo is entirely caused by the picture we make in our minds that we are going to fall. This picture transforms itself immediately into fact in spite of all the efforts of our will.

Men Unable to Sleep.

Let us now consider the case of a person suffering from insomnia. If he does not make any effort to sleep, he will lie quietly in bed. If, on the contrary, he tries to force himself to sleep by his will, the more efforts he makes the more restless he becomes.

Have you not noticed that the more you try to remember the name of a person which you have forgotten, the more it eludes you, until, substituting in your mind the idea, "I shall remember in a minute," to the idea "I have forgotten," the name comes back to you of its own accord without the least effort?

Let those of you who are cyclists remember the days when you were learning to ride. You went along clutching the handle bars and frightened of falling. Suddenly catching sight of the smallest obstacle in the road you tried to avoid it, and the more efforts you made to do so, the more surely you rushed upon it.

What was the state of mind of each person in these different circumstances? "I do not want to fall, but I cannot help doing so"; "I want to sleep, but I cannot"; "I want to remember the name of Mrs. So-and-So, but I cannot"; "I want to avoid the obstacle, but I cannot."

Following Example of Others.

As you see, in each of these conflicts it is always the imagination which gains the victory over the will, without any exception.

To the same order of ideas belongs the case of the leader who rushes forward at th head of his troops and always carries them along with him, while the cry, "Each man for himself," is almost certain to cause a defeat.

Why is this? It is because in the first case the men imagine that they must go forward; and in the second, they imagine that they are conquered and must fly for their lives.

"Panurge" was quite aware of the contagion of example, that is to say, the action of the imagination, when, to avenge himself upon a merchant on board the same boat he bought his biggest sheep and threw it into the sea, certain beforehand that the entire flock would follow, which indeed happened.

We human beings have a certain resemblance to sheep, and involuntarily, we are irresistibly impelled to follow other people's examples, imagining that we cannot do otherwise.

I cannot pass by in silence this fact, which shows the enormous power of the imagination, or, in other words, of the unconscious self in its struggle against the will.

Drunkard Impelled by Imagination.

There are certain drunkards who wish to give up drinking, but who cannot do so. Ask them, and they will reply in all sincerity that they desire to be sober, that drink disgusts them, but that they are irresistibly impelled to drink against their will, in spite of the harm they know it will do them.

In the same way certain criminals commit crimes in spite of themselves, and when they are asked why they acted so, they answer, "I could not help it, something impelled me; it was stronger than I."

And the drunkard and the criminal speak the truth; they are forced to do what they do, for the simple reason they imagine they cannot prevent themselves from doing so.

Thus we who are so proud of our will, who believe that we are free to act as we like, are in reality nothing but wretched puppets of which our imagination holds all the strings. We only cease to be puppets when we have learned to guide our imagination.

WORLD DELEGATES AT LAKEFIELD.

Distinguished Visitors From Abroad Talk on Prohibition.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 12.—A largely attended meeting was held in the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, which was addressed by several delegates to the World's League Against Alcohol's first annual convention just closed in Toronto.

Rev. P. L. Jull was in charge of the opening exercises, which were brief. The well known hymn, "Oh God Our Help in Ages Past," was sung, after which Mr. Jull offered a prayer and then put the meeting into the hands of Mr. Lee, who in a few words explained that he had led these delegates on a tour through Eastern Ontario, going to Perth, Renfrew, Pembroke, Ottawa, Campbellford and Peterborough and other places. These men were delegates to the convention held in Toronto, at which 67 countries were represented and there were 1,101 registered delegates. There were originally seven in Mr. Lee's group, but two (Rev. Alfred H. Horsfal of Australia and Gustave Corwin, of France), were obliged to leave at Belleville.

Interest in Canada.

The first speaker was Villow Ernets of Esthonia. Mr. Ernets has a limited knowledge of English and his message, which he read, was not clearly understood by all. After an apology for his inadequate English, he proceeded to express his pleasure at being able to visit Canada, which he found very interesting. Esthonia, one of the new states bordering on the Baltic Sea, was a free state 700 years ago, was under Russian domination many years, but the Great War and the Russian revolution brought many changes, and Esthonia proclaimed her independence after a long war with the Bolsheviks. Now Esthonia's status is recognized and she is a member of the League of Nations. The churches are not as well organized against the drink evil there as in Canada and the United States, but the signs of the times show progress as the people are doing the best they can and in due time the effect will be apparent not only there but in neighboring states.

Spoke in Spanish.

Franklin Albrecias of Spain, was the second speaker. Mr. Albrecias had not sufficient English to give his address in that language, so he spoke in Spanish and Rev. W. P. Harwood of New Mexico, interpreted for him. His father is a Methodist minister in Spain and he is training to follow the same calling. It was a great pleasure, he said, to be in a Methodist church, as there are only two in all of Spain, in one of which he had worked for the past twelve years. He was much impressed by the convention, which took work, money and organization to bring together all these people with one ideal, to unite against alcoholism. Ontario, United States and Iceland were the first countries to adopt prohibition, the battle for which is being waged all the world over. We cannot imagine conditions in Europe where prohibition is hardly known. Some countries see the danger and are battling against strong drink. In Spain they are doing their best to achieve total prohibition, though it is a hard fight, as working men, soldiers and authorities all drink This is also true of France and other countries cursed with the evils of alcoholism. This convention and the visit to our prohibition province has been a great inspiration he concluded, and it is to be hoped that we in Ontario realize our responsibilities and will help in all ways possible by example, money and prayers and sacrifice.

Magnetic Personality.

Otto Forteret of Switzerland, was the third on the list. A bright faced young man of magnetic personality, he is the leader of the young people's movement in Switzerland. He also derived inspiration in the Toronto convention and felt that something more than just prohibition brought these people from all over the world together. Canada, this great and wonderful country, was the right place to hold such a meeting. This great country is free, he was glad to know, but his own people are in slavery to the liquor traffic. Many European countries, although nearly bankrupt, are spending more and more on drink. In France the saloon keepers are a powerful organization and each year thousands of babies are dying there because of the evil of drink. The battle of temperance vs. liquor is being fought more fiercely than ever before. Canada is the example of Europe as one sees happiness and prosperity everywhere in this country. Inventions and discoveries have made the world seem smaller and smaller and what we need is more co-operation among nations.

Proud of Results.

Rev. Wilson Stuart of England, was the next speaker. He is proud to see what prohibition has done for us in Ontario and hopes very much to see the same conditions in England before many years.

There are so many glorious things about England, he said, it is painful to talk of its evils.. In England there is spent more on the trade (as the liquor traffic is termed) than on our army, navy, air force, railways, shops or dwellings. The aftermath of the war has brought a huge housing problem to the great cities, and in London, Liverpool, Birmingham, Manchester, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dublin and Belfast and other cities thousands of families are living in places which are not fit to house pigs. But there is more beer drank than milk and the children suffer in consequence. During the war Lloyd George said we were fighting three enemies, Germany, Austria and drink, and the greatest of these was drink. It was noted in the war that the higher the wages paid to labor the greater the amount of money spent on drink, and the greater amount of lost time. In 1915 the infantile mortality rate was higher in Edinburgh than in any year since 1851 when statistics were first taken. A Royal Society, with the King as patron, has been formed for the prevention of cruelty to children, largely the result of drunken parents. Work is proceeding favorably along these lines in England.

Sang in Spanish.

Rev. W. P. Harwood sang a hymn in Spanish after which he spoke for a few minutes only as the hour was late. He expressed himself as agreeably surprised on meeting the people of Canada. He had never thought much about this country, being too far south to be troubled with rum-runners and bootleggers. He never had such a good time as at the Toronto convention and now he thinks more of Canada and its people than ever before.

In regard to prohibition in the U. S., Uncle Sam is not going to fall down in tihs matter. Good President Harding is determined to rigidly enforce the law and banish bootleggers, rum runners and blind tigers; New Mexico carried prohibition by a State law two years before it was carried in the Union. Arizona carried it two years previously and the great hope is that it may be carried all over the world.

Rev. C. S. Reddick pronounced the benediction.

AND MME. SKOVGAARD

Axel Skovgaard, the Danish violinist, ably assisted by his wife, Alice McClung-Skovgaard, pianiste, entertained a fairly large audience at the Royal Theatre last night in the concert arranged by Mr. Frank Whitehouse. As an experiment for the early season it was in every respect gratifying, although it deserved a larger attendance than three hundred. In acknowledging the patronage of so many local musicians and the no less eager, if not so critical, unprofessionals, Mr. Whitehouse intimated that other artists would appear at the Royal this winter.

The generous programme of some twenty numbers included many that were familiar. Interest at the outset was perhaps centred in Skovgaard, and while he fulfilled all the encomiums that preceded him, the audience discovered in his wife a pianiste of fine musical instincts, broad attainments and appealing personality. There was nothing assertive or obtrusive about either of this talented couple, and least of all in Alice McClung-Skovgaard. They shared the honors about evenly, but the pianiste's skill and insight first noticed in her accompaniments transpired as a delightful surprise in her solo numbers.

Skovgaard's opening display selections were well received, but the popular note in his later offerings evoked a warmer and more emphatic applause. This was evidenced in several Kreisler arrangements, Traumerei, and a little number entitled Melodic by Lemare. A beautiful tone, big and flowing, marked these selections, and an andante from a Mendelssohn concerto was a striking example of Skovgaard's musicianship. The theme of a sonata by Sjogren was impressively developed, and an allegro from Nicolieieff afforded additional opportunity for his brilliant technic.

Mrs. Skovgaard's two first numbers won instant approval. The "Frolic of the Waters," by Ravel, and Percy Grainger's arrangement of Tschaiknowsky's "Waltz of the Flowers" were full of charm and grace, a wealth of shading and rythm, and a phrasing that was clear cut and eloquent of expression that flowed from an easy and commanding technic. A Lisst etude was a beautiful little vignette, and in the same style was "Arabisque" by Debussy. The familiar Wedding March by Greig was thoroughly satisfying, and in a contrasting contemplative mood was the No. 10 Prelude by Rachmaninoff. Mrs. Skovgaard is not only a talented and resourceful artist, a splendid concert and salon pianiste, but these gifts she delicately colors and accentuates by a charm that glows in all her work. She is not lacking in strength and breadth of tone, but in it this lighter quality of the spirit that her art finds captivating expression.

THE MARKETS

CASH GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 12. —(Canadian Press.) — The trade in cash grain in the local market yesterday was rather quiet on account of the fact that buyers were not disposed to pay the advanced prices asked by western shippers. There was no change in spot prices but the tone of the market was firm. A firm feeling prevailed in the flour market. A fair business was passing in mill feed and there was a good market for rolled oats. The demand for baled hay showed no improvement. The local market for eggs was without any special feature, the tone being firm under a steady demand. The potato market was rather more active. A much stronger feeling developed in the butter market and prices were up 1-2 cent to 1 cent per pound. A feature of the cheese market was the increased demand from English importers for supplies of finest September-October make.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—At some points the price of fresh egg specials is a little easier, due to heavy supplies. The market for storage stocks continues very firm, however. Canadian stocks are low but importations from United States continues.

Toronto, specials jobbing 90 to 95, extras 75, storage extras 44 to 45, firsts 38 to 39, seconds 35.

Montreal, a few specials are moving at prices ranging from 80 to 90. These are costing 75 to 85, at Ontario points. Market for storage eggs is very active, extras jobbing 40, firsts 35, seconds 31.

Saskatchewan storage extras jobbing 40, firsts 35, seconds 29, retailing 35 to 45. Practically no fresh eggs are moving.

Alberta, practically no fresh arriving, storage extras jobbing 40 to 42, firsts 35, seconds 25.

British Columbia local fresh 30, country points, with 52 offered for specials. Specials jobbing 58 to 60, extras 56, pullets 42, local storage firsts 35, seconds 30.

WINNIPEG CATTLE.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 12.—(Canadian Press.)— Receipts 3,320 cattle and calves, 2,200 hogs and 650 sheep and lambs.

The caitle market was slow yesterday morning and a price range had not been established up to noon. Good handyweight butchers in fair demand but offerings generally lack quality.

Hog market unsettled. Local packers bidding 8.75 for thick smooths while outside buyers took several loads at 9.00.

Early sales for good lambs ranged from 11.50 to 12.00 and good lightweight sheep from 7.50 to 8.00.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—Expectance of a cold wave likely to endanger much of the winter crop caused the wheat market yesterday in the face of heavy profit-taking sales on the part of holders. The close was unsettled at one cent net decline to a like advance, with May $1.20 1-4 to $1.20 3-8 and July $1.10 3-8 to $1.10 1-2. Corn finished 3-8c. off to 1-4c. up; oats unchanged to 1 1-8c. higher, and provisions varying from two cents decline to 27c. gain.

COX'S BODYGUARD KILLS SELF WHEN LEADER RESIGNS.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Dec. 12.—Following the resignation of the suspended chief of police, Thomas Cox, which was accepted by the city commission to-day, Charles Ginnane, a detective who for four years has been Cox's personal bodyguard, committed suicide by shooting himself late this afternoon.

Ginnane, it its said, feared he would be indicted by the special vice grand jury, which had indicted Cox on charges of conspiring to protect vice and stealing a city automobile. Ginnane, it is said, has been brooding since Attorney General Brundage began his investigation of vice conditions here.

Cox was suspended as chief Sept.27 when the police and fire commissioners charged that the police department was demoralized. His suspension resulted in the gang war which laid the way for the crime inquiry.

Rock Island has been without a police chief since Cox's suspension, Mayor H. M. Schriver having discharged the police board which must appoint the chief of police. Rock Islanders have refused to accept posts on the board.

Knights Defeat the Wildcats in a Soft Ball Semi-final Game

Game Went to Eleven Innings Before a Decision Was Reached — Finals Thursday Evening.

The Knights of Columbus won the semi-final Soft Ball game last evening by a score of 19 to 16. They had one of the hardest times they ever had to do it for the Wildcats were right out to make the fur fly and carried the game to eleven innings before a decision was reached At the end of the ninth frame, the score keeper added up and found the tally was 15 to 15, another inning netted one run each but the Caseys found what they were looking for in the eleventh and when the smoke had settled three runs had crossed the pan. The Wildcats tried valliantly to overcome the lead but couldn't make the grade, going to the bench in one-two-three order.

The Knights started off like a whirlwind and scored six runs in the opening frame and things looked rather blue for the Wildcats til they grabbed five runs in the second and took three more in the third to tie the score. Neither team was able to score in the fourth but the Knights too took one in the fifth and three in the sixth. The Wildcats retaliated again with four in the seventh. Two in the eight again put the Caseys in the van but once more the Wildcats rose to the occasion and picked up two of their own in the ninth. Both scored one run in the tenth but three for the Knights in the eleventh proved too much for the Wildcats to handle.

The game was a fast one from start to finish and though the Wildcats lost they deserve great credit for the great battle they put up. The Caseys, however, were the strongest team and deserved their victory. In the matter of hits the teams were on even terms with sixteen each. Murphy did the twirling for the winners and Bradley for the loosers. They broke even on the number of passes issued with five apiece, but Murphy fanned seven to Bradley's one. Both pitchers received good support.

The winners will meet the Raybestos gang on Thursday evening at 8:30 for the City Championship finals. This game will also be played at the Armoury. Both the teams are playing in tip top form and both have an unusual string of victories behind them. As a result this game is expected to be the last and fastest of the whole schedule. An admission charge of 25 cents will be made and the proceeds will go to the Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association.

The players last evening were:

Wildcats—Bradley p, Delahaye c, Ward 1b, Johnson 2b, Elliott 3b, Cooper lf, Cheu rf, Miller ss, Whitehouse ss.

Score by innings:

Knights	611013120l3—19
Wildcats	053000412l0—16

P.A.A.A. CAMPAIGN NOW UNDER WAY

Sport Activities Boost This City in Many Parts of Dominion.

It will surprise some citizens to learn that since the organization of the Peterborough A.A.A., a little more than a year ago, Peterborough has received more helpful newspaper advertising in all parts of Canada than it received in ten years before the association was formed. That is one of many reasons why the Association is a good thing for the city.

The membership drive is on to-day and teams of workers will endeavor to complete their districts by the end of the week. The schools of the city are included in the present campaign.

Already a goodly number of memberships have been renewed and new members added.

RECORDS ARE OFFICIAL

MONTREAL, Dec. 12.—At the A.A.U. of C. meeting Saturday the official record 9 3-5 seconds, for the 10 yards dash was credited to Cyril Coaffee of Winnipeg on the unanimous vote of the meeting after there had been some discussing concerning the accuracy of the time. Coaffee will be presented with the gold medal of the A.A.U. of Canada in recognition of the fact that he made a world's record.

ABBOTT IS PRAISED BY MAJOR LEAGUES.

Spencer Abbott, famous minor league manager, will handle the Reading, Pa., International League team next year. Abbott succeeds Chief Bender as manager. Last year he was in charge of the Memphis team of the Southern League.

Abbott has always gone big in the minors; winning pennants is his specialty.

"Reading made no mistake in choosing Spencer Abbott," is the opinion of John McGraw.

"He is a thoroughly competent man," is the way Barney Dreyfus sums up Abbott's baseball ability.

AGITATION FOR DRAFT RETURN

Majors Likely to Discuss Matters Again — Five Minor Opposition Leagues May Grow.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The draft question that has been agitating baseball circles ever since five of the largest minor leagues exercised the option given them under the 1921 major-minor agreement and refused to grant the selective privilege, either to the majors or to minors of other ciassification, may receive fresh attention this week when major and minor leagues hold meetings in this city.

The majors, supported in their views by Commissioner K. M. Landis, desire to amend the present draft statutes, as embodied in the 1921 agreement, so that all minor leagues will be obligated by tis provisions and given no choice in the matter. Unsuccessful overtures were made a year ago by the advisory council and since have been repeated in an effort to secure a new understanding with the five recalcitrant minors, who insist upon keeping in force the present law, which was made effective for seven years, or until 1928.

As an alternative solution of the situation, a number of major league clubs are known to favor an enlarged player limit, to afford a larger range of player selection. On the other hand several other minor leagues, now affected by the draft, are believed ready to join the other "hold-outs" and nullify the selective privileges as far as they are concerned.

Exemption from the draft, by "any league so desiring" is specifically provided under the terms agreed upon jointly by the majors and minors on Jan. 12, 1921. At the same time a league exercising such exemption automatically forfeits any right to draft players from other circuits.

The five leagues that have taken this course are the American Association, International and Pacific Coast Leagues, the Western League and the Three I League.

THOMPSON SOLD TO PACIFIC COAST.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—A wire received yesterday from President Lol Solman from New York conveying the information that the Toronto ball club had sold Pitcher Harry (Tommy) Thompson to the Sacremento club of the Pacific Coast League.

Thompson is a left hand twirler who has been with the Toronto club for a number of years, with the exception of one season, when he was with the Baltimore. He gave promise of being one of the most useful utility men in the game, as he was a fine fielder and a good hitter as well as a clever pitcher. His pitching arm has been causing him trouble for some time and has affected his usefulness to a great extent.

Banquet For Winners Gordon Football Cup

PRESENTED CUP.

G. N. Gordon.

Quaker Oats Company Entertained Players of Championship Soccer Team.

CUP PRESENTED.

The Quaker Oats football team winners of the city championship, was last night presented with the Gordon Cup, emblematic of its honour. The presentation was made by G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., the donor of the cup, at a banquet given the members of the team by the Quaker Oats company.

At 7 o'clock the party to the number of twenty four gathered in the large recreation room of the left wing of the factory where a bounteous repast was served under the supervision of competent caterers. After the inner man had been satisfied George A. MacDonald, manager of the local plant welcomed the guests and having told of the good work accomplished by the team introduced Mr. Gordon.

In presenting the cup Mr. Gordon told of some of the difficulties the team had to overcome in order to win it. The Quaker Oats team entered the league for the first time this year and the fact that they were able to win the city championship, pointed not only to some exceptionally good players but also to good organization and management on the part of the officials of the team. The efforts of those who have been promoting the sport are, he said, a credible service to the city for football as well as developing physical strength teaches a man many of the other mental and moral requirements that are needed for success in this life and helps to find his true place in the great scheme of things.

The devolpment of all lines of sport had in the opinion of the speaker, done more to foster a better manhood and a better womanhood in this city than any other agent aside from the educational centers.

The success of this team in their first year had shown that the players had learned the tactics which are necessary for victory both on the football field and in the great game of life. They had learned that the interlocking efforts of all were necessary to carry any project to a successful end. It matters not where a man may be employed, either in private or public life he will find that success will never come to his efforts unless he can work in harmony with his fellow workers. This he said is one of the many reasons why football goes a great way in making first class British citizens.

President William Perdu of the Quaker Oats Football Club in accepting the trophy thanked Mr. Gordon for both the cup which he had given and the words of praise he had spoken. In congratulating the team on the success of their efforts, he said that they had won more than the cup for they had also won the plaudits of all sport lovers in the city by their conduct on the field.

Arthur Laws, the manager of the team also spoke a few words of congratulation to his charges and pointed out that the prospects were bright for another championship team next year.

A recitation by Joseph Johns and a song by Vernon Morphet completed the entertainment for the evening.

SIKI-CARPENTIER FIGHT A CERTAINTY

So Paris Le Journal Says—Siki Denies That He Suicided.

PARIS, Dec. 12.—A second Carpentier-Siki fight seems a certainty, according to Le Journal, which points out that President Rousseau of the Boxing Federation is inclined to be clement toward the Senegalese.

"I will box Siki under any conditions at a date to be fixed upon my return to Paris this evening," Carpentier telegraphed Le Journal from Brighton, England, Sunday night. "Please say that to beat Siki would be the greates joy of my life" th etelegram said. It added that Georges was to get the opinion of surgeons as to conditions of his hands which were injured in his bout with Siki.

A report is current that Siki has disappeaed, but neither his friends nor the police seem unduly alarmed. The newspapers suggest that he has been spirited away from the clutches of interviewers.

Siki appeared yesterday morning to deny in person that he had committed suicide or that he had been thrown into the river, as had been widely reported.

BIG PLAYERS COME FROM HICK TOWNS

Village Corner Lots Have Developed Most of the Talent in the Major Leagues.

What an ecstatic whaling those born in the little towns would give to the big-city or big-town delegates in baseball.

The small towns carry the class of the game by a most unseemly margin. Something after this order—of which how many were known to you before?

Winters, Tex.—Rogers Hornsby.
Manchester Ohio—Geoge Sisler.
Royston, Ga.—Ty Cobb.
Hubbard, Tex.—Tris. Speaker.
Millerton, N.Y.—Eddie Colins.
Bluffton, Ind.—Everett Scott.
Wales, N.Y.—Walter Schang.
Oakland City, Ind.—Eddie Roush.
Morocco, Ind.—Same Rice.
Hamilton, Mo.—Zach Wheat.
Shamokin, Pa.—Stanley Coveleskie.
Marvell, Ill.—Ray Schalk.
Clear Lake, Wis. — Burleigh Grimes.
Humboldt, Kan.—Walter Johnson.
Brainerd, Minn.—Joe Bush.
Bearsville, W. Va—Wilbur Cooper.

Every city from 100,000 up to 600,000 has almost every corner-lot occupied with baseball talent, Sunday leagues and what not.

Why it is the smaller villages furnish 98 per cent. of the stars of the leading players?

We take at random above fourteen leading names. How many ever heard of the towns they came from—before they came?

Among the few exceptions are Babe Ruth and Ed. Rommell from Baltimore; Shocker, from Detroit; Dick Kerr, from St. Louis; Frank Frisch, New York; Waite Hoyt, of Brooklyn; Hollocher, of St. Louis; and Bill Doak, of Pittsburgh. But there are not many more.

With all the semi-pro, amateur, city league baseball played around New York, Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis, Boston, Philadelphia, etc., the big town would seem to have it over the village, like a circus tent. But it's all the other way.

PETE DONAHUE IS SEEKING WEIGHT.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 12.—Pete Donahue, star pitcher of the Reds, has been ordered to add to his poundage. The order comes direct from President Garry Herrmann. Pete is a whale of a pitcher despite his tall, lean figure. However, it is believed the addition of 20 pounds will greatly improve his work. He finished last season drawn pretty fine. Donahue is a student at Texas Christian University. He has been requested to take a long vacation prior to the opening of the season at the club's expense.

FLYING DUTCHMAN BACK TO OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, December 12. Canadian Press. — Frank Nighbor, the Ottawa Senators' peerless centre ice man has returned to the fold. The "Flying Dutchman" arrived in the city yesterday morning, and was given a rousing reception by his teammates.

Despite the recent announcement that he had come to terms, the failure of the Ottawas to produce Nighbor last week caused severe comment and many fans were doubtful that the management had succeeded in signing the poke check king. Nighbor's arrival has allayed the fears of the fans, and all is well. He appears to be in good condition, and ventured to predict that Ottawas with the acquisition of Darragh would be the team that would travel coastwards in the spring.

The team held its first complete practice this afternoon, and with Nighbor back are fast approaching "mid-season" form.

"King" Clancy's work is especially brilliant.

BALL CLUB FOR SALE.

NEW YORK, December 12. Canadian Press. — Colonel T. L. Huston announced last night that he is negotiating for the sale of his half interest in the New York American Baseball Club. Colonel Huston said that he had received several offers, including one from his partner Col. Jacob Ruppert but had not made a decision.

WEAVER STILL OUT.

CHICAGO, Dec. 12.—K. M. Landis, Commissioner of Baseball, today denied reinstatement of George (Buck) Weaver, former star third baseman of the Chicago White Sox. Weaver was one of those dropped as a result of the scandal in which it was charged certain baseball players and outsiders plotted to throw the 1919 World Series to Cincinnati.

The International League Moguls Hold a Session

Schedule For 1923 Will Open on April 18 and Close September 23—168 Games Will Be Played.

DRAFT DEAD ISSUE.

NEW YORK, December 12 (Canadian Press). — Adoption of a 168-game schedule for 1923, with the season opening 18th April and closing 23rd September, constituted the chief business transacted yesterday at the opening of the International League's annual meeting.

It was understood this schedule was adopted after clubs in the Southern half of the circuit had advocated shortening the season to 154 games. The past season was on a 168-game basis.

The club owners appointed a schedule committee, composed of John Conway Toole, president of the League; G. L. Robertson, president of the Buffalo Club; and Jack Dunn, president-manager of the Baltimore Club.

This committee will meet in February to frame schedule details.

Opening games, with the four northern clubs playing in rival territory, were fixed as follows:

Buffalo at Reading, Rochester at Newark, Toronto at Jersey City, and Syracuse at Baltimore.

This schedule will be reversed on the first swing aound the other part of the circuit.

A threatened attempt by certain club owners to force the hand of Jack Dunn, the Baltimore owner, in connection with his agreement, made last June, to dispose of three of the Oriole stars, who has helped the club to make a runaway race of the pennant contest for several seasons, failed to materialise at yesterday's meeting, according to President Toole. Mr. Toole added that he considered it improbable that any such attempt would be made when the magnates convene again at 11 a.m. to-day for their final session.

Understood to have been sponsored by Walter E. Hapgood, part owner of the Rochester Club, this move was said to have been aimed at drawing from Dunn a definite explanation of his intentions. It was pointed out, however, that the Baltimore owner already has complied with part of his agreement by disposing of Jack Bentley, star pitcher and first baseman, to the New York Giants ,and that he would have until the opening of the 1923 season to sell or exchange other stars, including probably Joe Boley, shortstop; Max Bishop, second baseman; and Jack Ogden, or "Lefty" Groves, pitchers. He has received a number of offers for one or more of these players from both American and National League clubs.

In declaring the draft a dead issue so far as the International League was concerned, President Toole revealed that several other minor leagues planned to seek exemption from the selective law, which, in addition to the International, is not recognized, by the American Association ,and Pacific Coast Leagues as among the leaders in the new insurgent move. While the seven year agreement between the majors and minors, apparently binds for the life of the pact all leagues that accepted the draft, President Toole expressed it as his personal unofficial opinion that a loophole existed.

The terms of the agreement stated that any league not desiring to accept the draft should serve notice to Commissioner K. M. Landis, on or before February 15, 1921, in default of which notice they would be regarded as having accepted the principle. The date of notification however, from the major league viewpoint a year ago, Mr. Toole said, was considered to mean February 15, of any year during the agreement's existence. Such an interpretation, he added, would give a minor league now bound by the draft, the privilege of withdrawing from it at any time.

No change in the International circuit or organization were discussed, according to President Toole. The League's executive's five year term of office as president, secretary and treasurer does not expire until 1925.

Seven of the eight clubs have selected managers for the 1923 season. The exception is the Newark Club, where William Clymer's contract as pilot has not been renewed. It is understood a new leader is being sought and William Ashton, president of the club, declared every effort would be made to bolster the team strength.

Two of the managers chosen are newcomers, Dan Howley, former assistant to Ty Cobb, manager of the Detroit Americans, succeeding Eddie Onslow at Toronto, while Spencer A. Abbott, former manager of the Memphis, Tenn., Club in the Southern Association, replaces Chief Bender at Reading, Pa. Other managers who will remain in charge are: Rochester, George Stallings; Syracuse, Frank Shaughnessy; Buffalo, George Wiltse; Jersey City, Ben Egan; Baltimore, Jack Dunn.

OPPOSE FORWARD PASS.

The Interprovincial Rugby Union, better known as the Big Four, went on record on Saturday at the annual meeting held in Toronto as opposed to the introduction of the forward pass, as talked of in many quarters. The meeting agreed that the present rules are ideal, with the exception of one or two minor suggested changes which will be carried to the Canadian Rugby Union annual meeting by Dr. Lawson of Toronto, and Tom Clancy of Ottawa, the Big Four delegates. The opposition of the Big Four to the forward pass is one strong peg in the argument of those who claim the trend is too much toward the adoption of the U.S. code. The Big Four also oppose any change in the present interference rule. The suggestions made by the Big Four on minor changes are regarding the reduction of penalty for off-side, the giving of yards on a catch and several others of lesser importance.

Burdock Blood Bitters

It regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, purifies the blood and tones up the entire system.

Mrs. H. Poole, Port Dover, Ont., writes:—"My system was run down and my blood out of order, and I suffered a great deal from pains in my head which made me feel very miserable. A friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle and before it was used I found it was doing me good. I kept on until I had taken three, and now I feel like a different woman.

My husband also took it and it has built him up."

For the past 44 years B.B.B. has been manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

In the days of P. T. Barnum, when it was announced that, in one year, the great showman had spent $50,000 on advertising, few people believed it, the sum, for that purpose and at that time, seeming so large.

Capitol Entertainment

Anthony Hope's famous novel, "The Prisoner of Zenda," is one of the few works of fiction that has now increased public favour by presentation in moving picture form. The story has passed through three stages of popularity. It was probably one of the most widely read novels ever written. When it was dramatised some years ago in the days before the moving pictures were thought of, it was a leading stage favourite season after season. Then its greatest triumph was achieved when the stroy was prepared for the screen. "The Prisoner of Zenda" is the feature picture at the Capitol for the first half of this week, and last night it was greeted by an audience that almost completely filled the large auditorium. The famous portrayal of life in a European capital, when the vocation of royalty was in better esteem among the people than it is to-day, but when there were intrigues among the members of the Court, still possesses a charm for the masses. The plot of the play is too well known to call for any description. The picture has been prepared at an enormous cost. Nothing of interest in the original story has been left out, and nothing has been exaggerated. No attempt has been made to add modern touches, which so often result in nothing, so much as turning points of historic interest into so much burlesque. There is lifelike vividness in all the royal scenes, of the plotting and the working out of the intrigues, in the coronation ceremonies, and the duels are all the work of experienced swordsmen. Every part is well sustained throughout, the work of the star, Alice Terry, being of a sufficiently high order to recall that of her illustrious namesake. The orchestra, under the direction of Miss Florence Gladman, has prepared special music, which affords a fine setting for the picture.

AT THE GRAND.

"RICH MEN'S WIVES."

The most appealing picture that Peterborough has seen in some time is "Rich Men's Wives," the Gasnier feature production that is the piece de resistance of the splendid bill at the Grand for the first three days of this week.

A picture that involves a logical story, a theme of intense interest, clean art photography and masterly work by a well-balanced cast, leaves little to be desired. "Rich Men's Wives" has all these ingredients, but, above all, it has a heart appeal that is irresistible. This cleverly executed story of mother love rising triumphant above the degenerating effects of a super-abundance of money and a total lack of responsibility gets home to the spectators as few pictures do. At the same time dramatic power is not lacking. There are scenes that cause a thrill of excitement just as there are episodes that bring a moisture to the eye. The interest never flags, and the superb atmosphere of the play as conceived by the producer makes it a notable example of screen work of the highest type. To tell the story would spoil it for those who have not yet seen "Rich Men's Wives," one of the great successes of the season.

Too much cannot be said of the work of the cast, notably the splendid performance given by Claire Windsor, whose picture of the mother fighting for her child will not be forgotten. The principal masculine roll is taken by House Peters in his usual effect style, and Rosemary Theby, Myrtle Stedman and other well-known silver sheet favorites are of much assistance. The child part of Jackie Masters is outstanding.

The vaudeville numbers are away above the average. Herb Camp, eccentric violinist, scores heavily in his act which opens with a masterly rendition of Brala's famous "Souvenir," and includes some Italian patter and a song, "Not for me" that go over big and winds up with some clever comedy on the violin. Rattach and Miller also score a hit in their singing and comedy act, the male member of the act doing some especially pleasing yodelling, while the two have a "kidding" dialogue that is effectively handled.

The Grand announces a double feature bill for the last three days of this week, for, in addition to Dorothy and Lilian Gish in "Sisters," the seven-reel feature, "Partners of the Tide" will be given. There will be vaudeville numbers as well, making a program full of good things.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

At the ROYAL—To-night and To-morrow.

FARNUM'S OATHBOUND SCORES BIG SUCCESS

'Oathbound,' a picture produced by William Fox, with Dustin Farnum as the star, and presented at the Royal Theatre last night for its first local showing, is a story of real interest and a romance of exceeding charm. Dustin Farnum, like his brother William, is an actor of peculiarly virile force and a pleasing personality. In "Oathbound" he has a role that displays these characteristics to great advantage. His success, like that of smugglers and river pirates. He details his brother to assist him in running down the thieves. Much mystery surrounds the identity of the "dock rats" and scenes showing them making off with their plunder are more than exciting. A speed boat race between "Miss Los Angeles II," William Farnum's speed boat which won the Pacific coast trophy, and "Rip," one of the fastest motor boats in the world, is a real thriller. To add an additional touch of excitement a hydroplane takes part in the race. This race is one of the most sensational that has ever been shown in Peterboro.

Norman Selby, known in the prize ring as "Kid McCoy," the famous pugilist, and "Lefty" Flynn, onetime star football player, who has since made his mark in the moving picture world, are supporting Dustin Farnum. Ethel Grey Terry handles the principal feminine role in admirable style.

There is a delightful touch of comedy to relieve the tension.

RECEPTION AND SOCIAL COMMITTEE IS FORMED.

New Organisation Connected with Y.M.C.A. Promises Big Things.

A most important meeting was held at the Y.M.C.A. last evening at 8 o'clock. This meeting was called for the purpose of forming a Reception and Social Committee of the Association. Mr. J. H. Wallace, manager of the Sun Life Insurance Co., who had agreed to accept the chairmanship of the committee, presided, and very quickly had the organization rounded into shape with the various members assigned to the following sub-committees: Programme and Music, K. K. Anderson, chairman. Refreshments, F. Herbison, chairman. Tournaments, L. L. Smith, chairman. Moving picdence, 1,033 Water Street, to Little Introductions, F. H. Taylor, chairman. M. It was decided last night to make Friday evening each week the big social night, and special programs will be held on these nights, commencing this week. The various chairmen of sub-committees were instructed to get busy right away and arrange for moving pictures, music and refreshments for the coming Friday evening. Members and their friends are invited to attend. It was also decided that a program for New Year's afternoon be arranged as this is reception day in the "Y" in almost every city.

The new organization promises big things, and every member present showed a willingness to work and to accept responsibility. Mr. Wallace has the happy faculty of securing enthusiastic co-operation and will look for results from those delegated to get things done.

WOMAN SHOULD NOT USURP PLACE MAN

DALLAS, Tex., Dec 12.— "Woman should not usurp the place of man," is the philosophy of Mrs. Edith E. Willmans, famous attorney here.

Yet that is exactly what she has done, say some of her male opponents. For she is the first woman to enter the Texas Legislature as a member of the lower house. Further, she plans to propose legislation which would permit married women in Texas to sell property in their own name.

But that's as far as she will go, Mrs. Willmans.

"I am opposed to this equal rights law that many women are urging," she says. "I am for the feminine in women."

Mrs. Williams is a widow and has three daughters. She has been practicing law for the last five years and has been active in social and political life.

TO ASCERTAIN POWER RIGHTS FOR THE CITY

Ald. Jas. Hamilton Objects to Letters Regarding Peterboro's Power Problems.

RESOLUTION PASSED

"It's a damned shame that any person can attack an institution like the Hydro for his own damned selfish interests and glorification," said Ald. James Hamilton, presiding as chairman of the Manufacturers' committee of the Council, while Mr .R. R .Hall's letter in regard to local power matters was under consideration.

Mr. Hall's communication along the lines of those which have appeared from time to time in the Examiner suggesting that a public meeting be held at which Sir Adam Beck might discuss the Hydro power service to Peterborough, was referred by the Council to Ald. Hamilton's committee.

"The Hydro are supplying us all the power you need at cost," said the chairman with a little emphasis on the word "cost."

"What are we here for?" queried Ald. Jones. "We have been discussing this for years and we are no closer to it than ever. What does Mr. Hall want and how can we obtain that?"

Ald. Gainey— We can find out how much power can be developed at dams 4 and 5 and at Burleigh Falls.

Ald. Holloway— Mr. Hall represents a certain faction.

Ald. Hamilton—Himself, nobody else.

Ald. Holloway—He claims we can develop that power profitably. The Hydro won't come here unless they are invited.

City Clerk Armstrong suggested that what might be ascertained was whether these power resources could be secured, and how much would their development cost.

Ald. Holloway—Mr. Hall has said he isn't afraid to meet the Hydro representatives.

Ald. Hamilton—Why didn't he go before the Gregory commission. The best thing you can do is have the new Manufacturers' committee get Gaby to come down and talk to you.

Ald. Holloway moved, seconded by Ald. Jones, that the Utilities Commission communicate or confer with the Hydro-Electric Commission and the Ontario government for the purpose of ascertaining whether Peterborough could acquire the power rights at dams Nos. 4 and 5 and Burleigh Falls, and also what would be the cost of developing power at these dams if they can be acquired.

ANNUAL MEET OF LADIES' AUXILIARY

Mrs. R. J. Devey Was Elected President -- A Strenuous Year's Work.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A., was held on Monday evening, the president, Mrs. Jos. Mills, presiding.

Secretary Mrs. Welch read a most interesting report of what was the most strenuous year of the Auxiliary's history.

Almost tragic was the silence when Mrs. Bugg reported on the work of the Visiting committee, of which the late Mrs. Massey-Cooke was the convenor for five years, and accomplished splendid work.

Treasurer Mrs. R. J. Devey reported that more than $1000 had been spent on wood, coal and food.

Before the election of officers, Mrs Mills, on behalf of the Auxiliary, presented Mrs. McIntosh with a set of doylies in slight recognition of prominent work in the recent bazaar Retiring Treasurer Mrs. R. J. Devey was also presented with a handsome pair of candlesticks, marking the Auxiliary's apreciation of five years' faithful work as treasurer.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres., Mrs. W. R. Morris.
Hon. Past. Pres., Mrs. Jos. Mills.
Hon. Past Pres., Ms. E. V. Frederick.
Pres. Mrs. R. J. Devey.
First Vice-Pres., Mrs. McIntosh.
Secretary, Mrs. Welch.
Treas., Mrs. Patterson.
Convenors, Visiting, Mrs. Johnson, Kitchen, Mrs. Devall; Sewing, Mrs. Wiggins; Social, Mrs. Clark. With the addition of Mrs. W. Sharp and Mrs. McNeely, the above form the Executive Committee.

Mrs. Mills thanked the officers and members for their support, and the G. W. V. A. are to be congratulated on having such a splendid body of women as those forming the local Auxiliary, who devote themselves quietly but effectively to working and visiting in the homes of returned soldiers.

ELECTED PRESIDENT

Mrs. R. J. Devy completes five years service as treasurer of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the G.W.V.A., and is elected President. Mrs. Devey was also presented with a pair of handsome candlesticks.

ELECTED OFFICERS CREAMERY ASSN.

Seventh Annual Meeting of Organization at Toronto

TORONTO, December 13 (Canadian Press). — The first of a two-day session of the seventh annual meeting of the Canadian Creamery Association was held here yesterday, when more than a hundred delegates fom all over Ontario were present.

Chief interest was centred in the grading of cream, and F. A. Keyes, Elmir , strongly advocated a grading system and the selling of higher quality cream at better prices.

Others pointed out the difficulty some farmers would have in observing regulations governing the quality of the cream.

No action was taken.

Officers elected were: President, J. I. Johnson, Lindsay; 1st Vice-President, G. A. Gillespie, Peterborough; 2nd Vice-President, B. A. Reddy, Cornwall; directors, J. A. Hughes, Laurel; W. W. Wright, Renfrew; H. F. Newman, Gambridge; Harold Jackson, London; and F. A. Keyes, Elmira.

THE WEATHER

The ground is to-day covered with an immaculate coating of white, but while there is sufficient snow in town for fair sleighing, a little more is required on the country roads to have the sleighing classified as "good." The lowest temperature last night was 6 degrees above zero.—W.P.

FRANK BARBER AND ALDERMEN PARTICIPATE IN A LOVE FEAST

The Result Will Be a Settlement of Mr. Barber's Claim Against the City for $8,500—Mr. Widdifield Relates His Version of the Settlement—Counter Claim Dropped.

"That's the first time Frank Barber and the City of Peterborough have been satisfied since they first got together," Mayor W. H. Taylor remarked after the final reading at a special meeting of the Council last night of a by-law incorporating an agreement of settlement for $8,500 of the balance of Mr. Barber's engineering fees in connection with the construction of the Hunter Street Bridge.

His Worship and Ald. Turner explained that they had interviewed Mr. Barber in Toronto last Friday. He agreed to accept $8,500 as the lowest sum for releasing the city from his last claim.

In answer to Ald. M. McIntyre's question, City Solicitor Widdifield said that Mr. Barber had previously asked for $11,000, so that by the concluding arrangement the city had saved $3,000. The agreement was contingent upon its ratification by the Council within one week and the payment of the money in another week, and also the withdrawal of the city's counterclaim for $50,000.

Mr. Widdifield explained this counter-claim to Ald. Jones. The city had contended that Barber engaged an engineer to make borings for test pits for the piers. What this engineer reported as solid rock turned out to be nothing more than hard pan, and excavations had to be carried nearly twice as deep. The city had taken the position that it had lost about $24,000 by Barber and his agent not making correct borings. Mr. Widdifield said that Barber's contention was that the city had engaged the man to make the borings. Mr. Barber had been warned by the Engineering Institute and Ed. Conroy about the underground formation, and it had also been pointed out to him as an indication of the probable conditions that the river was shallow in the middle of the bridge and deeper at each side as if there had been an upheaval some time under midstream.

"We looked on it as a real good settlement," said Ald. Turner, "and thought the city would be well advised to get rid of the whole thing at the $8,500 figure."

While the representatives of the Council were discussing the terms of settlement with Mr. Barber in his office, City Solicitor Widdifield had been purposely left at the hotel, Mayor Taylor said, in order that the negotiations might be freely discussed first and the legal aspects taken up later.

"It was just as well we did," said Mr. Widdifield, "for in the afternoon Mr. Barber flew off the handle several times, especially at the mention of the counter-claim, and it took three Aldermen to hold him down."

The Council granted Mr. Widdifield a bonus of $300 for his work in this matter and also to cover the expense of so much of his time having been taken up in this special case. In making this gratuity the Council was following precedents which were urged by members last night.

EX-ALDERMAN TURNER WILL BE A CANDIDATE

Has Been Persuaded to Enter the Mayoralty Contest --This Clears the Air for a Lively Contest--A Second Term Witheld.

So far as the municipal situation shapes itself in regard to the Mayoralty, the air has been cleared somewhat. It has been assumed that if a contest were to result that possibly one of the aldermen who under the requirement that calls for retirement, (or re-election) might have ambitions to enter the field. Enquiry has settled such a proposition so far as the retiring aldermen are concerned.

Ald. James Hamilton has, it is understood, definitely decided to withdraw from municipal work, and leave the Council. Though he might be induced to reconsider and remain in the field. But with no thought of contesting the Mayor's seat.

Ald. Harry Gainey has decided that while he might offer for re-election as alderman not to take up the Mayoralty contest, as was rumored he felt like doing. Ald. Robert Jones says that it is out of the question that he aspire to be mayor, having had experience as an alderman sufficient for him. Ald. Robert Morrison has decided that he will not offer for the mayoralty, as was at one time anticipated.

The outlook at present seems to be that ex-Ald. J. J. Turner will enter the field as an opponent of the sitting Mayor. In fact he has so assented. His many friends feel convinced that at the last election he was rather misjudged in the eye of the electorate ,and so many have assured ex-Ald. Turner of a change of heart and purpose, that he has consented to stand. The margin by which he was left out was not large, and his friends feel that such may be recovered in the present contest. While he had at one time decided not to take up municipal matters, on representations he has consented otherwise.

Mayor Taylor, being in the position that a second term, (by courtesy) being withheld will no doubt make a strong bid for re-election, so a lively run for the Mayoralty is anticipated.

Those who offer for the vacancies among the aldermen are not as yet in sight, though the next week may bring developments. No doubt several of those who have been in the council may offer again, basing their claims for support on the work undertaken and done during the last two years.

Shoppers May Leave Parcels in the G.T.R. Baggage Room Till Wanted

Through the courtesy and co-operation of the local officials of the Grand Trunk Railway a special convenient service to the travelling public shopping in Peterborough during the Christmas season has been arranged by the local branch of the Retail Merchants' Association through the Chamber of Commerce.

Out-of-town shoppers will now be able to have parcels forwarded to the baggage-room of the G.T.R. Station and secure them before train time. Merchants co-operating in this service should use colored indentification tags with a number corresponding to the ticket supplied to the customer.

Owing to the fact that there is usually a rush at the baggage-room of the station just at train time, the public availing themselves of this service would make it more convenient by securing their parcels at least fifteen minutes before train time, otherwise it would be possible that parcels could not be secured in time.

THERE IS NOTHING NEW IN BELIEF HELD BY DR. COUE

But While His Plan Helps Its Practice Will Not Kill Bacteria, Says Prominent Medical Man

Commenting on the Coue theory for eliminating many of the ills of mankind, a prominent medical man says:

"There's nothing new in what Dr. Emile Coue says in his articles which started in The Examiner yesterday.

"Christain Science," this physician contends, "is little more than auto-mental suggestion. Its aims to keep people in a happy mental state.

"Hypnotism is about the same thing. What Coue describes is virtually self-hypnotism when he tells people to will to go to sleep. The method he describes is a lulling of the conscious self until sleep comes.

"There are people who appear to have greater powers of concentration than others.

"Medical science has recognized for a long time that there is no such thing as an hypnotist, in that such a claimant differs from other people. He has merely achieved greater power of mental concentration. This is shown in a 'seventh son of a seventh son,' who believes that he has been endowed specially by God Almighty. As a matter of fact it is only that he has convinced himself. The same power is vested in almost everybody, and Coue teaches that.

DR. COUE DOES GOOD.

"I thing Coue does a whole lot of good. All doctors know that many illnesses exist in the minds of their patients. Dr. Coue's suggestions would make these people well by showing them how to help themselves.

"Of course it would be fallacious to say that organic diseases can be cured by suggestion. Dr. Coue's mental treatment applies very well to those who have no organic cause, but that is as far as it goes. It does not kill bacteria or correct a diseased condition.

"If his suggestions were followed a large proportion of sicknesses would vanish.

"I believe that 'healing' is sometimes harmful. In my own practice I found a 'healer' trying to get a reaction from a man who was raving with diphtheria. Obviously that is absurd. But I do know that there is a great deal of unnecessary disease which people could get rid of themselves by thinking right."

TRUE BILL SENDS WINCH TO TRIAL

Case Against L. W. Wickson Dropped and No Bill Brought in—Scott Case Nears End.

The grand jury returned a true bill against Reginald Winch, who is thereby indicted for obtaining money from Solomon Seigel under false pretences, but no bill was their decision in the case of L. W. Wickson, who had been charged with the theft of photographs of the Birmingham car, a list of the company's subscribers and several small office pictures of the Birmingham.

The late Byron Lederer was the chief witness against Wickson and had been active in pressing the case in the preliminary hearing, but the Crown adopted the course of "nulli prosequi" before the Grand Jury, and in brief the case was dropped and erased from the docket.

This morning's session saw the conclusion of the Scott-Dickson case. Argument of counsel ended at 1.30 o'clock this afternoon, and Judge Huycke decided upon an adjournment until three o'clock when, he said, he would address the jury.

In his review of the case to the jury, Mr. Kerr contended that County Constable Dickson had exceeded his authority in entering the Scott home as he did on Nov. 10th, 1921.

The revolution in Russia, Mr. Kerr said, was to a large extent due to police repression, but British law and government was based on the idea that every man's home was his castle, and a policeman going into that home was not licensed to do anything he sees fit or to stay there, but to walk warily while he is there and to do those things that are only absolutely necessary to prevent a quarrel.

When Dickson went with Mrs. Scott to her home and, at her request, it was not unlawful for him to go there, nor was it unlawful for him to prevent an assault on her if there had been one, but it was unlawful for him to use more force than was necessary to prevent it. And when he uses force, backed up with his baton, to enable furniture to be taken out of a home, he is exceeding his lawful authority. As soon as Scott asked Dickson to show the papers of his authority, Dickson's invitation, if ever he had any, was at an end, and it was his duty to retire. Dickson had no right to make himself a master in Scott's home, and say this piece of furniture might go and this other stay.

Mr. Kerr said he was not criticising the police as a body. They were doing splendid work, but when it came to a case of club law it was time that any man with Irish or English blood in his veins to say we are loyally upholding the law, but no country can be carried on by the club. That was the point Scott took.

"Next Witness" Sounded Like "Nick Doukas"

Acting Police Sergeant Thomas has a new joke. His sense of humor suspected it at first sight while he was on duty in the County Court Tuesday afternoon and a casual query confirmed his suspicion.

When the examination of one of the witnesses in the first case was completed, Judge Huycke raised his voice a tone or two and called "Next witness." A man in the public gallery was observed to drop his coat into his seat, and walk down the aisle and through the railing that bounds the special precints of the Court. He passed through the gate and proceeded on his way to Mr. Gordon's desk. A momentary conversation and then a little flustered, he turned about and retreated to his seat.

Sergeant Thomas asked him in friendly curiosity why he had gone inside the railing, and he answered, "I thought the Judge was calling me."

He is a local Greek merchant, proprietor of the Marathon Candy Kitchen, seeking naturalization.

His name is NICK DOUKAS.

UNCONTROLLED IMAGINATION BRINGS PAIN

Two Classes of People Are Unable to Understand the Danger of Auto-Suggestion.

ARTIFICIAL ILLS

(By Dr. Emile Coue)

It is sufficient to think a pain is going, to feel it indeed little by little disappear. Inversely, it is enough to think that one suffers in order to feel the pain begin to come immediately!

I know certain people who predict in advance that they will have a sick headache on a certain day, in certain circumstances. On that day, in the given circumstances, sure enough, they feel it.

They brought their illness on themselves, just as others cure theirs by Conscious Autosuggestion.

I know that one generally passes for mad in the eyes of the world if one dares to put forward ideas which it is not accustomed to hear.

At the risk of being thought so, I say that if certain people are ill mentally and physically, it is that they imagine themselves to be ill mentally or physically.

If certain others are paralytic, without having any lesion to account for it, it is because they imagine themselves to be paralyzed. It is among such persons that the most extraordinary cures are produced.

If others, again ,are happy or unhappy, it is that they imagine themselves to be so. It is possible for two people in exactly the same circumstances to be the one perfectly happy, the other absolutely wretched

Neurasthenia, stammering, aversions, kleptomania, certain cases of paralysis are nothing but the result of unconscious Autosuggestion, that is to say the result af the action of the unconscious upon the physical and moral beiug.

But if our unconscious is the source of many of our ills, it can also bring about the cure of our physical and mental ailments. It cannot only repair, the ill it has done, but cure real illnesses, so strong is its action upon our organism.

Shut yourself up alone in a room, seat yourself in an armchair close your eyes to avoid any distraction, and concentrate your mind for a few moments on thinking:

"Such and such a thing is going to disappear", or "Such and such a thing is coming to pass."

The Power of the Will

If you have really made the Auto-suggestion—that is to say, if your Unconscious has assimilated the idea that you have presented to it—you are astonished to see the thing you have thought come to pass. (Note that it is the property of ideas Auto-suggested to exist within us unrecognized, and we can only know of their existence by the effect they produce.)

But above all, and this is an essential point, The will must not be brought into play in practising Auto suggestion; for if the Will is not in agreement with the imagination—if one thinks: 'I will make such and such a thing happen", and the imit, but it is not going to be" — not only oes one not obtain what one wants, but even exactly the reverse is brought about!

This axiom is of capital importance. It explains why results are so unsatisfactory when, in treating moral ailments, one strives to re-educate the will. It is the training of the imagination which is necessary. It is thanks to this shade of difference that my method has often succeeded where others—and those not the least considered —have failed.

From the numerous experiments that I have made daily for twenty years, and which I have examined with minute care, I have been able to deduct the following conclusions which I have summed up as laws:

1 When the Will and the imagination are antagonistic, it is always the imagination which wins, without any exception.

2. In the conflict between the Will and the Imagination, the force of the Imagination is in direct ratio to the square of the Will.

3. When the Will and the Imagination are in agreement, one dogs not add to the other, but one is multiplied by the other.

4 The imagination can be directed. (The expressions "in direct ratio to the square of the will" and "is multiplied by" are not rigorously exact. They are simply illustrations drawn from mathematics destined to make my meaning clearer.)

A Dangerous Instrument

After what has just been said it would seem that nobody ought to be ill. That is quite true. Daring and unlikely as my statement may seem, every illness, whatever it may be, can yield to autosuggestion.

(I do not say does always yield, but can yield, which is a different thing.)

But in order to lead people to practice Conscious Autosuggestion, they must be taught how, just as they are taught to read or write or play the piano

Autosuggestion is, as I said above an instrument that we possess at birth, and with which we play unconsciously all our life, as a baby plays with its rattle.

It is however a dangerous instrument it can wound or even kill you if you handle it imprudently and unconsciously. It can on the contrary save your life when you know how to employ it consciously. One can say of it as Aesop said of the tongue: "It is at the same time the best and the worst thing in the world."

I am not going to show you how everyone can profit by the beneficent action of Autosuggestion consciously applied. In saying "everyone". I exaggerate a little, for there are two classes of persons in whom it is difficuplt to arouse conscious autosuggestion:

1 The mentality undeveloped who are not capable of understanding what you say to them.

2. Those who are unwilling to understand.

(Copyright by the American Library Service.)

Dr Coue will reveal, in to-morrow's article, "How to Teach Patients to Make Autosuggestion."

France Grimly Determined To Force Germany to Pay

Failure of Conference a Blow to Plans For Reparations--France Ready to Go Ahead Alone.

WILL SEIZE RUHR.

PARIS, December 13. Canadian Press. — France last night was very gloomily taking stock of another reparations failure at London. Premier Poincare returned to Paris with a worried air, and Parliamentary, as well as governmental circles, are deeply disappointed.

There is an air of forced hope in some of the newspaper comments in which it is suggested that France may yet induce the allies to approve the seizure of the Ruhr and other guarantees at the resumption of the Inter-Allied conference here on Jan. 2nd. France's grim determination to go it alone, if necessary, in order to lay her hands on something tangible that will make Germany act, is the dominant note in the newspapers and political discussions.

There is some criticism that the Government has already delayed too long and there is great concern over the impending necessity of France acting independently.

M. Poincare will state his case before the Chamber of Deputies Friday, although a full Cabinet meeting has been summoned for this morning which may change his program. The Premier is still determined that there shall be "no moratorium without guarantees,"for as Jacques Bainville says in La Liberte, "it is clear that if guarantees are abandoned, or even if there is no longer belief in the usefulness of seizing guarantees, then there is nothing left. Reparations will become nothing more than a dream," with a succession of cancellations of Inter-Allied debts predicated upon a reduction of Germany's debt until "the slate is wiped clean, clean for everybody except us, who bear the burden."

The Temps brushes aside "the polite interpretations of the London adjournments," and after referring to the condition of the French finances repeats, "no moratorium without a guarantee of the Ruhr." As for British cancellation of the French debt, the Temps says, "It would not help the French treasury for a moment."

The Journal des Debats regrets that there is so much talk about the Ruhr, leading the British to think it a "punitive expedition" and the world to consider the seizure of the Ruhr as France's main object, instead of its being merely a means to an end, which is pressure on German industrials to make them clean house and prepare to pay.

ENGINE EXPLODED

JOLIETTE, QUE, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press). — Three men were badly scalded and fourteen cars were derailed blocking the main line so that seven cars had to be burned, when the engine of a freight train from Ottawa exploded four miles from this town yesterday. The victims are Engineer T. J. Martin, Fireman A. Flamond and Brakesman M. Horard, all of Joliette. It is believed all will recover.

COMMITTED SUICIDE

RIDGETOWN, Ont., Dec. 15. — (Canadian Press).— Malcolm McGregor, aged 58, was found about noon yesterday hanging from a beam in the barn on the farm of his son, Alvin McGregor, 7th Concession Howard. Mr. McGregor who came he re from Essex county a few years ago and purchased a farm on the 11th concession, sold out a few months ago and had recently purhased a farm near Chatham. Worry over the price paid is said to have affected his mind. Besides a widow he leaves three sons.

AFFIRMS BINET WAS GUILTY IN GARNEAU CASE

Acquitted of the Murder Charge Two Years Ago, and Chief Lorrain Thinks He's the Assassin

Quebec, December 13. Canadian Press. — Raoul Binet who was tried for the murder of Blanche Garneau, in Quebec, two years ago, and was acquitted by a jury, is in the opinion of Chief Lorrain, head of the Quebec Provincial Police Detective Department, the actual assassin.

Chief Lorrain was again the principal witness yesterday afternoon before the Royal Commission which is investigating all the circumstances surrounding the death of the young girl.

He declared that he believed Binet guilty and would continue to believe it until he had been shown clear proof that he was innocent.

Lorrain had never been advised to direct his activities in any one special channel nor had he been requested or instructed to protect or shield any person or persons, he told the commission. He had been criticized because he did not obtain better results at first and had been warned to leave nothing undone to try and get the murderers.

In the course of his examination he stated there were 13 unsolved murder mysteries in the province of Quebec since 1920, and 11 murders had been reported to his department during the present year, only four of which had so far been solved.

During the morning session another witness who had been a convict in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, swore Raoul Binet had confessed to him and to two fellow convicts that he (Binet) had actually choked Blanche Garneau to death.

Most of the time at both the morning and afternoon sessions was taken up by a description by Chief Lorraine of the Provincial Police of what had been done by his department in an effort to discover the murderers.

SEVERE COLD WAVE

OGDENSBURG, N.Y., Dec. 13. —(Canadian Press).—A severe cold wave, accompanied by high wind, put an abrupt halt to navigation on the St. Lawrence River yesterday when three large coal vessels, unable to continue their course were towed to this port. Two barges loaded with anthracite also were forced into port. The coal was placed in local yards.

Canadian canals are covered with ice several inches thick.

LAWS TO COMBAT TUBERCULOSIS IN CANADIAN CATTLE

Regulations Providing Machinery to Stamp Out Disease Were Approved Yesterday.

RESTRICTED AREAS.

OTTAWA, Dec. 13.— (Canadian Press.)—Machinery for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis is provided in regulations providing for the formation of restricted quarantine areas in which attempts will be made to stamp out tuberculosis among cattle. The regulations were approved yesterday.

Under them the federal government will assist in the eradication of bovine tuberculosis from restricted areas on application from the provincial Minister of Agriculture, stating the location and boundaries of the proposed area; approximate number of cattle in the area; that two-thirds of the cattle owners in the area are in favor of having their cattle tested for eradication of tuberculosis and that the provincial government whenever so requested by the federal department of agriculture, will assist in the enforcement of the regulations by conducting the prosecution of persons obstructing or refusing to assist federal inspectors in the making of tests or of persons who in any way refuse to obey the regulations.

The restricted areas are to be laid down by proclamation, and these areas are to be quarantined insofar as bovine tuberculosis is concerned. The movement within and through the areas will be only under prescribed conditions.

Provision is also made that feeding of animals within restricted areas on by-products of cheese factories, skimming stations and butter factories is prohibited unless such by-products have first been sterilized by heat.

LINDSAY, December 13. (Special) —Last night about 6 o'clock the residence of Mr. Thomas Moon, Verulam, just east of Emily Creek, was totally destroyed by fire together with most of its contents.

A defective chimney is believed to have been the cause. The fire was a spectacular one and its reflection could be seen in Lindsay.

The stables were saved after hard fighting. Mr. Moon had no insurance.

Conference of Premiers Collapsed Completely

Lord Balfour's Note Was Premature — Britain is Ready to Cancel War Debts Under Certain Circumstances—Must See Some Ultimate Gain Before She Can Shoulder the Debts.

LONDON, December 13. Canadian Press. — The collapse of the Allied Premiers' negotiations here, it is becoming evident, was even more complete than at first supposed, since the one outstanding development which had been sized upon by the optimists namely the scrapping of the Balfour note by Great Britain, is now said to have been premature.

Premier Bonar Law admitted as much in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon and from other sources it is learned that the haste on the part of the continental press to consider Lord Balfour's utterance a thing of the past is unwarranted.

It is stated that Mr. Bonar Law in talking with the other allied Premiers only indicated that Lord Balfour's principle (refusal to consider any remission of the war debts) could be superceded as Great Britain's contribution to a general European settlement of the war debts and reparations questions, but with a definite gain for Britain in view and not merely because she wished to be generous.

The British policy is said to be centered on the re-establishment of trade and commerce stabilization, of exchanges and the bringing to an end the almost continuous allied conferences and disputes over reparations and war debts.

The pessimists believe that such stabilization of Europe's economic life would not be realized through Britain's cancellation of the debts due her if at the same time the French were permitted to carry out coercive measures to obtain their indemnity from Germany.

According to the official view the British are willing to make great sacrifices but the other allies must also sacrifice some of their interests.

Unless Great Britain sees an ultimate gain through the policy of cancellation, it is stated, the government could not carry out such a program, for the British taxpayers would rebel at having to shoulder the debts without any benefit.

Millions Cannot Produce Aridity

WASHINGTON, December 13 (Canadian Press). — The appropriation of $9,000,000 carried in the Treasury Supply Bill for the enforcement of Prohibition during the next fiscal year was declared by Senator Broussard, Democrat, Louisiana, in a speech in the United States Senate yesterday, to be inadequate to make the dry law effective even among Government officials, and "among those who force the Eighteenth Amendment . . . the Volstead Law upon us."

KING'S MESSAGES SENT TO IRELAND

Message to Governor-General Healy Was Read in the Free State Parliament Yesterday.

DUBLIN, Dec. 13. — (Canadian Press.) — The King's message to Governor-General Healy, which was read in the Free State Parliament yesterday, after formally announcing the enactment of the Constitution of the Free State, says:

"It is my earnest hope, that, by faithful observance by all sides of the pact so concluded, peace and prosperity in Ireland may be secured. In the spirit of that settlement I have chosen you to be the first representative of the Crown in the Irish Free State.

"With all my heart I pray that the blessing of God may rest upon you and the ministers of the Irish Free State in the difficult task committed to your charge."

Governor-General Healy's reply to the message from the King was as follows:

"I have the honor to acknowledge the gracious message by which Your Majesty has inaugurated the self-governing dominion of the Irish Free State.

"The terms of the message will touch all hearts, while the thought which inspired it must everywhere invoke the admiration of men of good will.

"May I, too, humbly join Your Majesty in beseeching the Almighty that the reign of freedom now established in Ireland will bring early peace and assured prosperity, as well as a lasting reconciliation between the British and Irish nations."

SCHEME ADVANCED TO CENTRALIZE ALL COLLEGES OF EAST

Proposal Would Consolidate All Colleges in Maritime Provinces in Halifax

HALIFAX, N.S., Dec. 13. Canadian Press. — Great strides were made today and yesterday in the direction of Maritime University Federation, when the conference representative of the Universities, colleges and governments of the Maritime Provinces and the Dominion of Newfoundland, meeting under the chairmanship of the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, Hon. R. E. Harris, in the province building here, adopted a scheme of federation which represents a consolidation of all the schemes put forward as satisfactory by all the interests involved. This approved scheme will next be placed before the Universities and the governments involved for their formal action and a report on the progress made together with an invitation for any further directions they may wish to make will be submitted to the Carnegie Foundation, whose report on the educational situation in the Maritime Provinces initiated the present movement for confederation.

The scheme of federation adopted yeserday as a workable basis for the final scheme provides for the removal to or setting up in Halifax of the following institutions:

Acadia University, Wolfville, N. S.
King's University, Windsor, N.S.
Mount Allison University, Sackville, N. B.
A Roman Catholic College.
A Presbyterian College.
A Non-Dnominational College.
A French Acadian College.

It also provides for the establishment of a central university, embracing the Faculties of Arts and Pure Science, Law, Medicine, Dentistry and Applied Science, and charged with the work of organizing as rapidly as its resources permit, the Faculties of Agriculture, Pharmacy, Forestry, Fine Arts and Education.

Dalhousie University, Halifax, which would form the neuclus of the University, under the scheme adopted, reserves the right to enter the federation as a non-denominational college, or to merge with any other body or bodies wishing to set up a non-denominational college or to give her funds and property set apart for arts to a body or bodies wishing to form the non-denominational college.

Under the scheme adopted yesterday Dalhousie would turn over to the Central University all its professional schools at present in operation and all its property and endowments not specially earmarked for arts purposes. The other universities and colleges involved would turn over the libraries and scientific apparatus to the Central University but would retain their present properties and endowments. The constituent colleges would teach roughly the first ten years in arts, full courses if they wished so to do in philosophy psychology, economics, pedagogy and history, a full course in divinity, but would hold in abeyance their degree conferring powers except in divinity. All examination would be set and conducted by the central university.

The approved scheme provides for an interim board of governors and after six years from its inauguration a permanent board consisting of the president of the university, ex-officio, one person appointed by the board of governors of each of the constituent colleges, six elected by the associated alumni of all the constituent colleges, one of whom shall be a resident of Newfoundland, and one a resident of Prince Edward; three persons appointed by the Lt.-Governor of Nova Scotia in council, two persons appointed by the Lieut.-Governor of Prince Edward Island in council, and one person appointed by the Governor of Newfoundland, the appointment of the governments of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island and Newfound land to be made only in the event of each making an adequate annual grant to the university.

DECEASED WAS WELL KNOWN IN HAVELOCK

Sayer of this town, has removed a former well known business man of Havelock and Hastings, as well as Colborne. He married a Miss Ward, of New Brunswick, who with five sons and four daughters survives him. Mr. Sayer was a member of the Presbyterian church and also of the Masonic Order and of the Oddfellows. Mr. J. J. Sayer of this town, spent a month with his brother, returning home only a few days before his death. The funeral took place at Charleston.

FIRE CAUSES GREAT LOSS TO NEWSPAPER PLANT IN LINDSAY

Dental Office Over Lindsay Post Gutted—Heavy Loss Results From Damage Done By Water.

CAUSE UNKNOWN.

A serious fire, the loss from which will amount to many thousands of dollars, broke out last evening in the dental offices of Dr. Sutton in Lindsay and raged for over an hour before it was brought under control. The office is situated in the Post block and is on the floor immediately over the quarters occupied by the Lindsay Post. The dental offices were completely gutted as were the offices of F. R. Wilford, a contractor, who has his rooms on the same floor as that occupied by Dr. Sutton.

The Lindsay Post suffered the greater part of the damage. The firemen were pouring water into the building for over and hour and all of it came through into the offices occupied by the newspaper. Four linotype machines, which cost several thousand dollars apiece, were put out of commission as well as considerable damage being done to the press and other machines in the building. The business offices were completely flooded out, entailing a great loss to the furniture and contents and hundreds of dollars worth of paper stock was also destroyed.

The top floor of the building is occupied by the Masonic Lodge rooms. The lodge was in session at the time of the fire and the members discovered their danger when the smoke came curling through.

The fire had gained considerable headway before it was discovered and the fact that the firemen had to climb a stairway to get at it made it increasingly difficult to fight. The origin of the fire is unknown and the exact loss has not been estimated.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1922.

MAKE IT KNOWN.

With the old tradition that a chief magistrate should receive a second term by acclamation no matter what his record during the first year may have been, the Examiner cannot associate itself.

The business of a municipality should be carried out on business principles, and when a mayor has not proven himself efficient there is neither logic nor common sense in returning him for another twelve months.

No private business enterprise would be likely to appoint an executive for a second term who had failed to make good in his first year.

Opposition to the return of Mayor Taylor by those who do not believe that he has measured up to the mark of efficiency they consider is essential is consistent, therefore, with business principles.

But His Worship is entitled to be treated with ordinary courtesy.

If he is to be opposed at the coming elections then his opponent or opponents should make the fact known at the earliest possible date.

Gossip connects the name of this man or that with the mayoralty campaign, and some of the citizens named refuse either to confirm or to deny the reports.

That attitude is not fair to Mayor Taylor, who surely has the right to know at this stage of the game whether or not he is to have a second term by acclamation.

To leave the matter in suspense until nomination day is an injustice to the city's chief magistrate and is, at the same time, treating the citizens generally rather cavalierly.

SLACKER NON-VOTERS.

It is agreed that the greatest detriment to civic advancement and the chief reason for the election of inefficient municipal rulers is the failure of large numbers of the electors to take an active interest in the nomination and election proceedings.

From year to year this condition of affairs has grown worse, not only in Peterborough, but generally throughout the country.

In Toronto, for example, it is estimated, while twenty years over 41 per cent. of eligibles voted for aldermen, at the last election only 20 per cent. of the voting citizens participated.

That means that Toronto's Council this year is the choice of only one-fifth of the electors.

The others may as well have been disenfranchised, for they took no part in choosing their representatives.

Other centres, including Peterborough, do not make a much better showing.

The Examiner has for several years endeavoured to hammer home to the citizens their duty in this most important matter.

It cannot be claimed that our efforts have been more than modestly successful.

There is no desire to keep on preaching on this theme, yet it seems so essential a factor in Peterborough's development that the electors should evince a lively interest in the municipal elections that the Examiner feels constrained to once more attempt to awaken Peterborough's citizens to a realization of their responsibility to the city in which they live.

The average man would fight tooth and nail if somebody attempted to rob him of his privilege of voting. Yet year after year hundreds deliberately disenfranchise themselves by remaining away from the polls.

The non-voter is simply a slacker and deserves just the kind of municipal government he usually gets.

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Off hand, it is difficult to think of anything that is more needed in Peterborough than the course in public speaking that has been commenced in the Y. M. C. A.

This community is singularly devoid of orators.

The good public speakers could be easily counted upon the fingers of one's two hands, and if the clergy were left out of the list one hand only would be needed.

There are, of course, plenty of talkers, men who are willing to take the floor when called upon, and often when not called upon. But the majority of them could not be classed as eloquent.

In this respect our friends in the country promise to leave us far in the rear.

The debating league organized by the United Farmers and embracing many of the clubs in the district is teaching the young people to talk in public with conviction and without embarrassment or confusion.

Debates are held at frequent intervals on subjects of general interest, and the spirit of competition engendered by a regularly prepared schedule which calls for debates at home and abroad, is producing admirable results.

With a year or two of that kind of training the young members of the U.F.O. will be able to discuss important matters with a lucidness and a surety that are totally lacking in the average city man who is called upon to speak in public.

Fortunately, oral composition has a place in our high school curriculum at present and present day students may gain what was impossible before its adoption—some useful training in the art of expressing themselves.

THE MURDER MANIA.

While newspaper readers cannot fail to be impressed by the large number of cases of homicide in the United States, it is shocking nevertheless to hear that there were more murders in 1921 than ever before and that the rate is steadily increasing, according to Dr. Frederick L. Hoffman, consulting statistician of the Prudential Insurance Company.

"The reckless killing of human beings goes on at a pace in excess of our population increase" declares Dr. Hoffman. "At the present time murder prevails in this country to an unheard of extent in the experience of civilized mankind."

In 28 cities of the United States last year there were 7,910 murders, equivalent to a rate of 9.3 per 100,000 of population.

The figures are appalling and Dr. Hoffman declares that the homicidal mania remains as "the greatest blot upon the civilization of the United States."

Canadians are inclined to assign the failure of the American police and law enforcement officers to secure the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties as the principal factor in this unprecedented record of killings across the line.

The statistician agrees with the diagnosis "admitting that" there are abundant reasons for believing that the punishment for capital crimes or of those guilty of all offenses against the person is now more lax than at any time in our history."

At the same time he confirms the contention advanced by the Examiner on several occasions that the sale of dangerous weapons and of poisonous substances must be greatly curbed.

The Examiner would go further than that.

By far the largest number of murders are carried out with revolvers.

The majority of killings are done with this deadly weapon so sure in its result, so easily concealed and alas so easy to obtain.

If the manufacture and sale of revolvers by private firms were abolished both in the United States and Canada, many of the crimes of violence would be eliminated.

STRIKES AND FARMERS.

Wholesale food prices are now 16.2 per cent. higher than a year ago, and are now advancing at the rate of about one per cent. a week. Such increases in the cost of living make it imperative that most people purchase their necessaries with care and discrimination. In the circumstances, it would be well if all would give thought to the meaning of the facts. This is always beneficial. It is not expensive, and a more popular use of thought could not be otherwise than helpful in solving the problems of the market basket and other matters of domestic economy.

This morning the public is offered something good in this line by the Secretary of Agriculture. The cost of labor, he says, is one of the largest elements in determining the price the farmer must pay for what he buys, whether it be transportation, fuel, implements or clothing. Again, he says that the effect of the transportation strike will be felt by the farmers long after the men are back at work. Here is something for everyone to think about because the living of all is affected.

The Secretary shows that the farmers, by hard work and long hours, produced crops worth one and a quarter billion dollars more than last year, yet their purchasing power is increased but little, if any. When the farmer sends his products to market he must pay higher freight rates. When he takes the proceeds of the sales of those products to buy necessaries he must pay from 50 to 100 per cent. more for them than in 1913. In consequence, his purchasing power is greatly reduced, and all business suffers. The largest consuming class cannot afford to buy heavily with a depreciated dollar.

This is because the labor cost of transportation and manufacturing is still out of proportion to the farmer's prices. Organized labor receives from 50 to 100 per cent. more than the pre-war level, while the farmer has gone back to pre-war prices. The effect of this is to decrease the price received at the producing end and increase it at the counsumer's counter. The transportation strike, in its effect upon the farmers, was like Germany invading Belgium with whom it had no quarrel in order to strike at France. The farmers lost millions of dollars through failure to deliver perishable products and livestock. Any deterioration in transportation facilities will be a source of future loss to them. They also paid a part of the costs of Mr. Lewis' coal war. Even such a matter as inability to obtain coal for threshing purposes, involved a loss and deterioration to the grain crops.

When agriculture suffers the whole country feels it. The people—all who eat food, or wear clothes or consume other necessaries—will be indirectly paying the expenses of the coal and transportation strikes for months to come. They will also be continually paying the advance in wages which now average within ten per cent. of the grossly inflated 1920 level.—Wall St. Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Middlesex United Farmers almost to a man favor Drury's broadening out policy. Is J. J. Morrison losing his grip?

Toronto is planning a summer course in the city's public schools. The move is a wise one, for with so much money tied up in school plants it seems a pity that the buildings should be in use for only a fraction of the time.

Logic seems to be lacking in some of the Toronto newspapers. After eulogizing Sir Henry Thornton for his Montreal speech, in which he deprecated narrow sectional pride, they endeavour to convince him that Toronto should be the headquarters of Canada's National Railways.

Judging by the drop in temperature, Medicine Hat must have left the door open again.

As the Globe puts it, when the cold weather and cold prices go to the mat together it is not difficult to tell which will rise first.

E. W. Backus declares that he works eighteen hours a day. That does not leave him much time to read what the Telegram has to say about him.

Premier Drury and J. J. Morrison are to meet at catch weights and battle to a decision on Thursday night. It promises to be a titanic stuggle, for while the Premier's foot-work is undoubtedly better, the Farmers' Secretary carries a punch in either hand.

Among the things that should be prohibited in Ontario in the winter months are advertisements that talk about the balmy climate of California or Florida, where Old Sol laughs at Old King Coal, and all that sort of thing.

The Ontario Government might as well make a cabinet appointment in the case of Mr. Gregory, K.C. Why not appoint him Minister of Special Commissions?

Toronto Liberals will endeavor to have a Toronto man appointed to the Senate to succeed the late Senator Proudfoot. Peterboro passed over so often surely has some claim for consideration when this appointment is being decided.

Canada's fire losses for the first eleven months of the year total $37,390,455, as compared with $30,932,110 for the whole of last year. No wonder the Fire Prevention League was organized.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDR

Hospital For Sick Children
College St., Toronto.

Dear Mr. Editor,—

Realizing that the trend of public opinion is swinging more and more towards the equilization of the burdens which each citizen of Canada must bear, that the helping of those who are unable to help themselves occupies a much larger place in our minds, may I draw your attenion to the fact that this Hospital is accomplishing great things in a field that is untouched by any other organization.

Little children from all parts of the Province, irrespective of class or creed, children who are sickly and mained, come here and are made strong and healthy. Is not this itself a wonderful work?

The service and the duty of the Hospital is far-reaching. As well as personal attention, both surgical and medical, for all the tiny patients, doctors and nurses are also trained to extend the mission of healing to the uttermost parts of the Province.

The entire function of the Hospital must commend itself to you and your readers. It is a CHILD WELFARE work well deserving of the support of your suscribers.

Of late a new and unfortunate factor has added to the responsibilities which the Hospital must assume. You have noticed, no doubt, the alarming increase in the number of motor accidents throughout the Province in the majority of which little children are the chief sufferers. Many of them are little waifs of the poorer sections where the streets are the only playgrounds.

Here are the average day's figures for 1922 attendance:

Cot patients 256
Out-patients 199

The carrying out of this great work is your responsibility as well as that of the people of all Ontario. Every contributor to the Hospital is a friend, indeed, to these little mites of humanity, and has the satisfaction of knowing that the result of his individual contribution is bringing joy into at least one home by assisting to care for somebody's child.

The service of the Hospital depends on the continued support of the public and the conversion of dollars into health and strength will, I am sure, meet with your approval. Each minute of mercy costs over fifty cents, so you will see that much money is needed to carry on this GREAT MOTHER CHARITY.

Every day sees a large number of additional patients on the Hospital's register. Owing to the advanced costs of surgical and medical appliances maintenance is mounting until now nearly twice the usual amount of money is essential for the fulfilling of our duty. With the approach of Christmas, may I place these facts before your readers in connection with the 47th Christmas appeal of the Hospital for Sick Children?

Faithfully yours,
I .E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Appeal Committee.

A WORKING SCHEDULE FOR WOMEN OF HOMES

Stock Up When Prices Are Low —Standarized Homes.

NEWARK, N.J., eDc. 12.—Standardize the home!

Elizabeth Hallam Bohn, consultant in home economics hopes thus to rally the legion of discouraged housewives who never can find time for an afternoon of bridge or a session at the civic uplift club.

Miss Bohn would begin with prunes.

"There are 40 or 50 different kinds," she says, "and yet the average housewife says to the grocer, 'Send me a pound of prunes.'

Matter of Prunes

"A much better way would be to inform herself what brand is best for the money and stock up when the price is low.

"Prunes are but typical. The housewife can follow the same pocedure with practically every other article on her table.'

A working schedule whereby the housewife knows just how much time to give daily to each household task, the employment of "Marthas by the day" in preference to permanent servants, and the use of household saving devices are included in Miss Bohn's "standardization' program.

Fifteen Waste Motions

"The New England housewife in her ample kitchen," she states, "employs 22 motions in faking a cup of tea; the New York woman in her little kitchenette, seven.

"Not until she adopts a schedule allowing just so much time to each task, from the time she rises until the end of the day, can the housewife be assured of certain definite hours for leisure and relaxation."

"My Heart Would Palpitate, I Had Weak Spells"

Mrs. L. Whiting, 202 King St. West, Brockville, Ont., writes:—

"I took very sick with my nerves and stomach, and seemed to be all run down. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate so and I would take such weak spells in the pit of my stomach that I sometimes thought I would never get better. I had almost given up hope when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did not stop until I had taken twenty-five boxes. It has done wonders for me and I want to recommend it to everyone."

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A. A. MILNE

"Come with us?" Bill said casually, as he struck a match. He pulled vigorously at the flame as he waited for the answer, hoping to hide his anxiety, for if Cayley assented, he was done.

"I've got to go into Stanton."

Bill blew out a great cloud of smoke with an expiration which covered also a heartfelt sigh of relief.

"Oh, a pity. You're driving, I suppose?"

"Yes. The car will be here directly. There's a letter I must write first." He sat down at a writing table, and took out a sheet of notepaper.

He was facing the secret door; if it opened he would see it. At any moment now it might open.

Bill dropped into a chair and thought. Antony must be warned. Obviously. But how? How did one signal to anybody? By code. Morse code. Did Antony know it? Did Bill know it himself, if it came to that? He had picked up a bit in the Army—not enough to send a message, of course. But a message was impossible, anyhow: Cayley would hear him tapping it out. It wouldn't do to send more than a single letter. What letters did he know? And what letter would convey anything to Antony?. . .

C for Cayley. Would Antony understand? Probably not, but it was just worth trying. What was C? Long, short, long, short. Umpty-iddy-umpty-iddy. Was that right? C—yes, that was C. He was sure of that. C, Umpty-iddy-umpty-iddy.

Hands in pockets, he got up and wandered across the room, humming vaguely to himself, the picture of a man waiting for another man (as it might be his friend Gillingham) to come in and take him away for a walk or something. He wandered across to the books at the back of Cayley, and began to tap absentmindedly on the shelves, as he looked at the titles. Umpty-iddy-umpty-iddy. Not that it was much like that at first; he couldn't get the rhythm of it. . . .

Umpt-y-iddy-impt-y-iddy. That was better. He was back at Samuel Taylor Coleridge now. Antony would begin to hear him soon. Umpt-y-iddy-umpt-y-iddy; just the aimless tapping of a man who is wondering what book he will take out with him to read on the lawn. Would Antony hear? One always heard the man in the next flat knocking out his pipe. Would Antony understand? Umpt-y-iddy-umpt-y-iddy. C, for Cayley, Antony. Cayley's here. For God's sake, wait.

"Good Lord! Sermons!" said Bill, with a loud laugh. (Umpt-y-iddy-umpt-y-iddy) "Ever read 'em, Cayley?"

"What?" Cayley looked up suddenly. Bill's back moved slowly along, his fingers beating a tattoo on the shelves as he walked.

"Er—no," said Cayley, with a little laugh. An awkward, uncomfortable little laugh, it seemed to Bill.

"Nor do I." He was past the sermons now—past the secret door—but still tapping in the same aimless way.

"Oh, for God's sake sit down," burst out Cayley. "Or go outside if you want to walk about."

Bill turned round in astonishment.

"Hallo, what's the matter?"

Cayley was slightly ashamed of his outburst.

"Sorry, Bill," he apologised. "My nerves are on edge. Your constant tapping and fidgeting about—"

"Tapping?" said Bill with an air of complete surprise.

"Tapping on the shelves, and humming. Sorry. It got on my nerves."

"My dear old chap, I'm awfully sorry. I'll go out in the hall."

"It's all right," said Cayley, and went on with his letter.

Bill sat down in his chair again. Had Antony understood? Well, anyhow, there was nothing to do now but wait for Cayley to go. "And if you ask me," said Bill to himself, much pleased, "I ought to be on the stage. That's where I ought to be. The complete actor."

A minute, two minutes, three minutes . . . five minutes. It was safe now. Antony had guessed.

"Is the car there?" asked Cayley, as he sealed up his letter.

Bill strolled into the hall, called back "Yes," and went out to talk to the chauffeur. Cayley joined him, and they stood there for a moment.

"NOT BAD-LOOKING, IS SHE?"

"Hallo," said a pleasant voice behind them. They turned round and saw Antony.

"Sorry to keep you waiting, Bill."

With a tremendous effort Bill restrained his feelings, and said casually enough that it was all right.

"Well, I must be off," said Cayley. "You're going down to the village?"

"Thats' the idea."

"I wonder if you'd take this letter to Jallands for me?"

"Of course."

"Thanks very much. Well, I shall see you later."

He nodded and got into the car.

As soon as they were alone Bill turned eagerly to his friend.

"Well?" he said excitedly.

"Come into the library."

They went in, and Tony sank down into a chair.

"You must give me a moment," he panted. "I've been running."

"Running?"

"Well, of course. How do you think I got back here?"

"You don't mean you went out at the other end?"

Antony nodded.

"I say, did you hear me tapping?"

"I did, indeed. Bill, you're a genius."

Bill blushed.

"I knew you'd understand," he said. "You guessed that I meant Cayley?"

"I did. It was the least I could do after you had been so brilliant. You must have had rather an exciting time."

"Exciting? Good lord, I should think it was."

"Tell me about it."

As modestly as possible, Mr. Beverley explained his qualifications for a life on the stage.

"Good man," said Antony at the end of it. "You are the most perfect Watson that ever lived. Bill, my lad," he went on dramatically, rising and taking Bill's hand in his, "there is nothing that you and I could not accomplish together, if we gave our minds to it."

"Silly old ass."

"That's what you always say when I'm being serious. Well, anyway, thanks awfully. You really saved us this time."

"Were you coming back?"

"Yes. At least I think I was. I was just wondering when I heard you tapping. The fact of the door being shut was rather surprising. Of course the whole idea was to see if it could be opened easily from the other side, but I felt somehow that you wouldn't shut it until the last possible moment—until you saw me coming back. Well, then I heard the taps, and I knew it must mean something, so I sat tight. Then when C began to come along I said, 'Cayley, b'Jove'—bright, aren't I?—and I simply hared to the other end of the passage for all I was worth. And hared back again. Because I thought you might be getting rather involved in explanations—about where I was, and so on."

"You didn't see Mark, then?"

"No. Nor his— No, I didn't see anything."

"Nor what?"

Antony was silent for a moment.

"I didn't see anything, Bill. Or rather, I did see something; I saw a door in the wall, a cupboard. And it's locked. So if there's anything we want to find, that's where it is."

"Could Mark be hiding there?"

"I called through the keyhole—in a whisper—'Mark, are you there?'—he would have thought it was Cayley. There was no answer."

"Well, let's go down and try again. We might be able to get the door open."

Antony shook his head.

"Well, look here, as we said we were going into the village, and as we promised to leave that letter, I almost think we'd better do it."

"Oh! . . . Oh, very well."

"Jallands. What were you telling me about that? Oh, yes; the Widow Norbury."

"Cayley used to be rather keen on the daughter. The letter's for her."

"Yes; well, let's take it. Just to be on the safe side."

"Am I going to be done out of that secret passage altogether?" asked Bill fretfully.

"There's nothing to see, really, I promise you."

"You're very mysterious. What's upset you? You did see something down there, I'm certain of it."

"I did, and I've told you about it."

"No, you haven't. You only told me about the door in the wall."

"That's it, Bill. And it's locked. And I'm frightened of what's behind it."

"But then we shall never know what's there if we aren't going to look."

"We shall know tonight," said Antony, taking Bill's arm and leading him to the hall, "when we watch our dear friend Cayley dropping it into the pond."

CHAPTER XV

THEY left the road, and took the path across the fields which sloped gently downward toward Jallands. Antony was silent, and since it is difficult to keep up a conversation with a silent man for any length of time, Bill had dropped into silence too. Or rather, he hummed to himself, hit at thistles in the grass with his stick and made uncomfortable noises with his pipe.

"What about tonight?" he said finally after a lengthy blow at his pipe.

"Try a piece of grass," said Antony, offering it to him.

Bill pushed it through the mouthpiece, blew again, said, "That's better," and returned the pipe to his pocket.

"How are we going to get out without Cayley knowing?"

"Well, that wants thinking over. I wish we were sleeping at the inn. . . . Is this Miss Norbury, by any chance?"

Bill looked up quickly. They were close to Jallands now, an old thatched farmhouse.

"Yes—Angela Norbury," murmured Bill. "Not bad-looking, is she?"

The girl who stood by the little white gate of Jallands was something more than "not bad-looking," but in Bill's eyes she must be judged and condemned, by all that distinguished her from Betty Calladine. To Antony, unhampered by these standards of comparison, she seemed, quite simply, beautiful.

THE DAY'S DOINGS AS RECORDED BY THE EXAMINER'S STAFF OF CORRESPONDENTS.

MILLBROOK RATEPAYERS HEAR ADDRESS ON SCHOOL QUESTION

Continuation School Inspector of Toronto Was the Principal Speaker—Thirty Thousand Dollars Needed for Extensions.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 13. — The stormy weather on Tuesday evening unfortunately lessened the attendance at the important public meeting when Mr. J. P. Hoag, of Toronto, Continuation School Inspector, and Col. Odell of Cobourg, Public School Inspector, were present to deliver addresses, and an opportunity given to discuss the proposed addition to the school building here, and the entire school question generally as it affects this municipality. As there has been some opposition to enlarging the present building, on the score of increased taxation, by a certain percentage of the ratepayers, and a counter petition was presented at the last council meeting asking the latter not to pass the by-law until it had been submitted to a vote of the people, it was hoped that those not in favor would be present and voice their objections when an opportunity was given. This however, was not the case, but a fairly representative audience gathered, and at 8.15 p.m. Reeve W. T. Wood took the chair and after explaining that $30,000 is the amount asked for by the School Board, and that the council now has the power to pass the necessary by-law without a popular vote being taken, if they thought best, called upon Col. Odell as the first speaker.

Spirit of Progress.

The fact that so many came out on so disagreeable an evening, the Colonel stated, was just another evidence of the deep and general interest now being taken in the educational welfare of our children. The question is in the air because humanity is progressing, and this makes us see the insufficiencies of our present system, equipment, and buildings; the curve in matters relating to education is very decidedly upward— we are no longer satisfied with doing things the way our grandmothers and grandfathers did them, if we were we should be like the servant who was entrusted with talents and made no increase therewith. There are several reasons for this spirit of progress, one being the active, keen competition in all walks of life, and without education no individual, to-day, is properly equipped for successfully holding his own in the industrial world; cities, towns, villages and rural centres are now seized with the fact that work without science is blind work, and unless we move with the upward curve of progress we shall be left behind and become second-rate villages, rural communities, cities, even a second-rate Dominion will be the ultimate result. The Government has become seized with the same fact and has done its utmost in money, professional advice, etc., the appropriations by the Ontario government have $2,000,000 two years ago to $4,000,000 gone up by leaps and bounds, from 1922-23. All good things are expensive, and the important question is not "where does the money come from?" but "where does it go?" $22,000 was apportioned in grants in this inspectorate (five townships, Cavan, Hope, South Monaghan, Hamilton and Haldimand) last year; of this Millbrook has reecived $1,040 and will yet have $1,080 before the end of the year. One year ago towns and villages were put upon an equal footing with those in rural sections in the distribution of legislative grants towards salaries, but it is contrary to all Government regulations to take part of a building originally intended for a Public School, as in Millbrook, and use it for a Continuation School; crowding in 40 pupils where only 20 should be accommodated, and in order to get the Government grants it is necessary to comply with the regulations, this is only right and natural. Col. Odell stated that Millbrook, with all its handicaps, had the highest percentage of successful candidates at the last midsummer examinations of any High school or Collegiate, which he knew of; but how much better work could be done, and how many more pupils accommodated if the necessary improvements were made. The building now is as good as it can be made, but still far from satisfactory. His advice would emphatically be to add the extension and equipment required, and there would result benefit to the pupils' health, to the standard of work accomplished, from a financial viewpoint, and in final results in the pupils' lives.

Mr. Hoag's Address.

Colonel Odell's remarks were greeted with hearty applause, and the reeve then introduced Mr. Hoag, who urged that we keep the Anglo-Saxon stock in control in Canada by giving the children an education—that was their best start in life, and the ratepayers' first duty was to provide Public school facilities. This you are not doing in Millbrook because there are 120 pupils in three class-rooms, really in about two and one-half rooms; twenty-five are in a room not half big enough for them. "I like to protect the little folk because they cannot squeal as loud as the older ones." Seventy-eight pupils are on the Continuation school roll, an increase of fifteen over last year; shut out the latter and the present building would suffice for Public school needs, but where would be the advantage financially? Now that the Adolescents' School Act is being more and more strictly enforced ,and, and that Act demands that children must attend school up to 16 years of age, where will the boys and girls of those in moderate circumstances go for their secondary education after passing the entrance if we do not provide locally for their needs? Peterboro is now refusing county puplis because they require all their room for city pupils. There is no saving in overhead as two teachers are necessary to get the government grant, and 100 per cent. can be collected from the county in grants for all outside pupils, and 80 per cent. of capital account costs are also borne by the counties. There is no tendency toward lessening the county grants for high school pupils. The government will give a generous percentage toward the teachers' salaries in continuation, or high schools but does not give any grant toward the building or equipment, feeling that the ratepayers ought to provide these. But the $30,000 being asked for by the School Board will not be a heavy financial burden because it is to be spread over a period of 30 years. If those who erected the present building 30 years ago met the burden then, should not those who have reaped the benefit of their labors be prepared now to build for th children, and grandchildren, of to-day and to-morrow? "Higher education in the end is going to control; the mixed races are being given the best of training; let us give it to the good old stock."

Two Classrooms.

The applause which followed Mr. Hoag's address showed that many in the audience were in sympathy with what he had said, and the Reeve asked Mr. A. A. Smith, secretary-treasurer of the School Board, to add some explanation of the financial aspect of the question. The latter stated that pressure to provide increased accommodation had been brought to bear upon the Board some years ago, and only the fact of the war and the unsettled conditions which followed, had prevented its being brought to a climax before this. But now we must either go ahead, or lose our grants, and though the $30,000 asked for was considerably more than had been anticipated, yet after careful inquiry it was found impossible to do what was required for a less amount.

Two classrooms of full regulation size are to be added, a laboratory, and a library: the latter could be utilised for a classroom also, if need arose.

In a most carefully thought out manner, and with figures to prove all he claimed, Mr. Smith showed conclusively that the cost of erecting and equipping the proposed addition would not be unduly burdensome upon the municipality, that the Government and county grants were most generous, and also showed that no advantage would accrue, but rather the reverse, if the Continuation School were cut off altogether. We would lose the $900 now received towards salaries, and grants for $3120, a total of $4020; supposing we continue as we are doing and lose the amount stated, it would mean an increased expense here in Millbrook of $4500 and to the Township of $1170, which of course is out of the question; it would really mean $1500 more for the village than we will be asked to do if we proceed with the building, and $526 more for the Township. Our only alternative is to close the Continuation School and if our boys and girls have then to go elsewhere (providing they can get in at some other point), for the from two to four years they will have to continue at school after passing the entrance, though the cost of board and transportation will be borne by their parents, the cost of their maintenance will revert to the County from which they come.

Several questions were asked of the speakers by interested parties in the audience, some rather amusing incidents occurring in connection with the latter, before the meeting adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem.

Grain and Clover Mills Working Hard to Close Up the Season — Cavan News.

CAVAN CENTRE, Dec. 13.—The threshers have been busy in the neighborhood during the past week, tow grain mills and a clover mill at work. For a few days the weather was unfavorable for the job. The grain mills had to stop work for a short time owing to the windy weather. Every person is anxious to get finished with threshing before Christmas.

Mrs. Richard Matchett entertained the Cavan Methodist Ladies' Aid on Thursday afternoon. The weather was not pleasant but there was a good attendance. There was quite a little business as this was the first meeting since the fowl dinner; the report of which was highly gratifying to the ladies who had worked hard to make it a success. A pleasant social time was spent after the business and devotional exercises, and a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

Mr. Leonard and Miss Bertha McNeil visited their cousin, Mrs. Percy McGill (nee Margaret Fair) at her home at Janetville on Sunday.

Women's Institute.

The December meeting of the Cavan Women's Institute will be held at the home of Mrs. Creighton Carr Thursday, Dec. 14th. This is a week earlier in the month than is usual, but the third Thursday would bring the meeting too near Christmas.

Mrs. M. Sutton, Millbrook, will give a report of the annual Institute convention which was held in Toronto.

Mr. Bert Rae and family intend moving to Peterborough very soon. Mr. Rae has alerady started to move some of his effects.

Mr. Reginald Sutton, teacher at Bridgenorth, spent the week end with his mother and sister.

Mrs. Nettie Bothwell (nurse) is nursing Edwin Thorndyke, Millbrook, who has not been so well the last couple of weeks. His many friends will be glad to hear that he is slightly improved.

Miss Helen Syer of Peterborough Normal school, spent the week end with her parents.

Miss Ruth Keegan has passed her third period of probation in the Homoepathic hospital in Rochester and has been accepted as a nurse-in-training.

The engagement is announced by Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson, Lifford, of their youngest daughter Blanche, to Mr. Delbert Armstrong, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Armstrong, Bailieboro. Miss Wilson is a sister of Mrs. Richard Matchett, Cavan. The marriage is to take place during the Christmas season.

Miss Hazel Hunter, who has been nursing in Toronto, came home last week to attend her mother, Mrs. J. W. Hunter, who had the misfortune to sprain her ankle. Mrs. Hunter is much better.

Rev. Mr. Rorke occupied his own pulpit on Sunday night. He preached an excellent sermon on "The Church."

AGNES TALKS TO FARMER WOMEN

Miss MacPhail, M. P., Heard in a Spirited Address at Toronto.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press.) —If you want to look after your own business as farmers, do it yourselves. If you want other fellow to look after it for you, he'll do it all right. He'll look after it, he'll go after it and he'll get it," declared Miss Agnes MacPhail, M. M.P., in her spirited address before evening meeting of United Farmer Women of Ontario, at their Convention in Forester's Hall yesterday. Miss MacPhail stated that there were three big interests in Canada to which farmers had been just so much food for consumption Canadian manufacturers Association, banking interests and transportation interests had been three lashes which drove farmers in organization, she said, and added that Conservatism and Liberalism had simply been cloaks under which a special privilege had got what it wanted.

THE PARLIAMENT OF NOWHERE MET IN THE CITY OF YONDER

From the Entrance of the Lieutenant - Governor to the Ministry's Ignominious Defeat, the Proceedings Proved a Whale of a Success.

In George St. Assembly Hall, or school room, was held on Friday evening, December 8, a session of the Parliament of the Province of Nowhere, the members meeting in the City of Yonder. As Parliaments, either Dominion or Provincial, go it was a whale of a success. From the entrance of the Lieut.-Governor until the ignominious defeat of the ministry the proceedings provoked one continuous roar of laughter and applause. The audience had one good, fervent and everlasting good laugh. Well worth the price of admission. The proceeds cleared well up to a hundred dollars, which will go to good objects. The entertainment was put on by the Young People's Society and drew a crammed house.

The gentleman reporting the seance had to take a couple of days to think it over. His general impression of the concussion was a mixture of astonishment and consternation. All Parliamentary rules were fractured, for it was a Progressive night, entirely. That sect came attired in the habiliments of the farm and their minds and speeches were equally fervent. On rising to speak they dashed off their coats and waded in. Rolling periods matched the gesticulations. Having come to Rome they did as the Romans, hit wherever a head showed. The fine art of heckling was well illustrated. The Government was badgered profusely and to the point.

Address From Throne

The opening address from The Throne, by His Excellency, was a model of decisive firmness and let the House understand where it got off at. This document is reproduced in full, that Hon. Mr. Drury, the Attorney-General and other magnates of the Ontario House may profit. In simplicity of language, diction and belligerent earnestness the address was a peach. Smacked somewhat of the Ramsay Macdonald style, now so popular in the Imperial House in London. His Majesty was impressively garbed and while the House was receiving him was the only interval of silence of the evening. All parties were overawed.

Honor Roll

The Roll of Honor follows. With forty-two people on the platform and all to talk time fled. One out the proposed bills had to be cut for want of time. Doing so by a miracle, let the audience get away about eleven o'clock. Otherwise the proceedings must have been prolonged. Only space may be taken for a brief running comment on the records made by those who conspicuously participated. For to have given everybody full opportunity the Session would have to be followed on the lines of thePassion Play and taken three days, with, of course, thre admissions.

The Speaker, Harold Young, was unique. The attention of the Deputy Speaker of the Dominion House is called to the agility, (verbal) resourcefulness and dexterity of the presiding officer. Many a time he pulled members of the Government out of a hole, and set them going again. Dr. Harvey, as the Leader of the Progressives, almost before his Honor had left the House, set to work to pitch into the Premier, and his party became perfectly and delightfully rowdy. They had been put up to it, not a doubt. The Leader has a lot to answer for. Should the House be called together, in a Special Session, this party will be known as the Concussionists. For by their fruits ye shall know them.

The machinery of the House was in good hands. Sam Oke made a most impressive Sergt.-at-Arms, and his costume was a bright spot of color on the platform. Sam had of the seats of the mighty, being mounted on a step-ladder. Miss Eva Fusee, as Clerk of the House, had the duty of reading the several Bills and it is suggested, to the Deputy Speaker, if a change is desired at Ottawa, in this function, that Miss Fusee may be communicated with. Excellent and distinct reading and helpful. Jack Baird and Cliffe Ash made alert and serviceable Pages.

The Ladies' Party

The Ladies' Party, leader, Miss Stella Bennett, was about as strong, (numerically), as the Government, and owing to the base machinations of the Leader of the Progressives, and being so led astray, so to speak combined with the Progressives to defeat the Government. In speaking to the Bills the Ladies upheld woman's traditional perogative to say disturbing things to the men. Several of the speeches of the young ladies were distinctly good, to the point and added to the interest of the session.

A Novel Feature

A novel feature, during the discussion of the bill to regulate the fashions, was the introduction of three models, (the Misses Carrie Coon, Gladys Coon and Marion Powell), that the House might be impressed. On these young ladies reaching the platform, members of the Government became exhuberant and could with difficulty be restrained from joining in the show. The model feature was tooled by Mr. A. V. Lillow, and was a pronounced success. Mr. Lillow pointed out the attributes of the several costumes, doing so with easy reference to woman and her invariable right to make herself look as nice as possible in all circumstances. It is assumed that Lillow has been taken to task, (at home) for statements which he may have to live up to. Of course, he can get out of it by explaining that his remarks were in some respects a matter of conjecture.

The Government was entirely on the defensive. The combined weight, (oratorical, of course) of the Progressives and the Ladies, was used ruthlessly. The Roll shows the members who spoke. The addresses were ample and conclusive, but the opposition was deaf to verbal appeal. Perhaps the disturbing effect of a flask handed about in a surreptitious way among the members of the Government, may have hastened dissolution. Questions, pointed and evasive, were hurled at the Government, and the several ministers had both hands and mouths full in endeavoring to reply.

The bitter end came, when the House rose and rejected the Bill to afford safety to drivers of cars. Despite the pleading of J. A. Fowler, (Fowler's Corners), the House scoffed at the provisions of the bill, and turned out the Government. As a result the Lieut.-Governor was sent for, appeared, grasped the situation, beamed on the Ladies' Party, smiled on the Progressives, and with hardly a look at the Government, dissloved the House, a new head to take charge of the Ship of State.

The House, however, set a fine example to other executive bodies, in that a presentation was made to the Premier, on his going out of office, and which was acknowledged.

Following is the budget of business prepared for the August assembly, together with the personnel of the House:

Speech From The Thsone by His Honor, Lieut.-Col. H. G. Walker, K.C.B., X.Y., Etc.

Mr. Speaker and Ladies and Gentlemen, members of the Legislative Assembly, of the Province of Nowhere, Greeting:

It affords me a distinct pleasure to welcome you to the performance of your respective duties at this the Third Session of the present parliament of this Province.

As the Province has been running for only a limited number of years I can understand that most of you have acquired a vast inexperience, but having myself to refer to it is expected that things will proceed decently and in order. If they don't, then, I shall come into action. I want it thoroughly understood that your father is no spring chicken when it comes to handling the intricate problems of the monopolist, the Protelariat, and other disturbing factors of the community. So look out. I am the man who put the "press" in suppressed.

Since I last had the honor of meeting this House we have had changes. Oh, yes, many. A lot of you, I am told, are here on sufferance, but if you behave there will be no unhappy results. Most of our Provincial Houses of Incarceration are jam full, as they are intended to be, but we don't want to have to rent other premises to take care of the overflow from this House, should necessity arise. And on this understanding I anticipate a peaceful time. And this House might just as well know where it gets off at.

Among other agreeable things we have had conferred on this Dominion, a new Governor-General. I have not had the pleasure of viewing His Excellency, but I understand that as a civilian Pontiff he is most acceptable. In fact much said and printed about him is thoroughly well deserved. He will be with us for some time yet.

We deeply regret the effects of the disastrous forest fire in the Near East of the Province. Many homes destroyed and a serious loss of life. I am glad to report that action taken by the Cabinet has resulted in a measure of relief. Public contribution has been a little reluctant, but on the whole, considering the increased cost of running our autos, there is some excuse for not contributing ad libitum.

May I call attention to the several measures to be submitted to the House. These propositions have been conceived by Advanced Thought and looking to the imperative needs of the Future, that is such a future as we have:

"A Bill to Improve Sowing of Wild Oats."

With the amount of money in circulation, with the ability of our young men to spend all they can get their hands on or extract from father, it is time that the sowing be not done by the way-side, but sprinkled where it will do the most good. This House is asked to indicate better facilities and weld them into a law, or statute.

"A Bill to Standardize and Enforce Compulsory Saving."

I understand that this bill is framed on the time-honored maxim that birds that can sin and won't sing, ought to be made sing. So that people that should save, will not try, don't feel like saving, and haven't any inclination to save must be turned around and compelled to put by at least a part of earnings against a time of future privation. It is proposed to enact legislation effecting this painful proceeding.

"A Bill to Establish Prevailing Fashions in Woman's Apparel."

Various and divers bodies of our Social Service Work, including the Sons and Daughters of I Will Arise, the Society for the Protection of Homeless Cats, the Go-Home-Alone Society, and other estimable bodies, all of whom make use of clothes, have urged, (very strongly urged, I understand) the passing of a measure to combat the insidious efforts being made to lengthen the feminine skirt, to promote the introduction of th Crinoline, the Shake Bonnet, and other habiliment, as in such cases made and provided. This measure may be illustrated by models.

"A Bill to Assist Impecunious Spinsters."

It seems to me that this proposed measure fills a long felt want. Its provisions are both mandatory and conciliatory. It inculcates the beautiful thought that if bachelors harshly decline to afford opportunities to be proposed to and being reluctant to secure wives that the bachelor should be taxed, properly and with liberality. We are told that it is not good for man to live alone. And it has been pointed out to me that such contention is open to discussion.

"A Bill For Better Protection of Drivers of Automobiles."

The increasing number of casualities incurred by people who insist in getting in the way of autos, and the consequent grief and embarrassment to drivers of cars, point to one thing, and to that thing, only. That all streets and walks must be given up to the users of cars, and that the proletariat and other classes must look out for themselves.

To this effect, I understand, that streets and sidewalks shall be forbidden to pedestrians and baby carriages, both of which are annoying to the pilots of cars. Your Honorable House will be asked to make provision that all sidewalks shall be hung from the street sides of buildings, with means of ingress and egress, ad libitum, and so forth. These propositions are referred to in the Bill, and will no doubt have the concurrence of the members.

Ladies and Gentlemen

I wish you a comfortable and profitable session. You will conduct your proceedings in concord and order, I hope. But, and this is cautionary, if the Speaker of the House has to send for me to suppress an insurrection, why I will execute the same with elegance and precision.

(Sgd.) H. G. WALKER,
Lieut.-Gov. in Charge.

SOUR GOES WITH SWEETS IN NEW WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

Wife Endorser Liable on Husband's Note—Special Protection.

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 12.—Women married and unmarried now the equals of men before the law in Wisconsin, must bear the responsibilities of their new privileges granted by the women's rights bill enacted in 1921, the Wisconsin Supreme court decides to-day. It held woman liable in her separate property and business when she indorses a note of her husband incurring financial liability for him.

When the First National bank of Wisconsin sued the Milwaukee Patent Leather company, William P. upheld the decision of the lower court that the equal rights law removed the former privilege of wives of indorsing their husband's notes without personal liability.

Special Protection Not Involved

The lower court held that "when special protection of the health or physical condition of women for the general welfare is not involved, the statute was intended to put women on the same basis as men,' and held that Mrs. Jahn was liable as indorser of her husband's note for $8,000.

Mrs. Jahn's defense was that the statute was intended primarily to secure women equal political and civil rights, while preserving to them all the special protection and privileges accorded them before its passage. She did not impose new liabilities upon women but rather granted additional rights and privileges.

Sex Basis Not Obliterated.

Justice Rosenberry, writing the opinion held that recent legislation giving equality of right and privilege to both sexes before the law, "does not and should not strike down sex as a basis of classification in the enactment of law relating to the health, morals, and general welfare of the people."

The court decided that the disability of a woman at common law to make a contract now done away with by the Wisconsin statute was not a special protection or privilege which she enjoyed for the general welfare.

TORONTO, December 13 (Canadian Press). — Initiation of steps looking to a radical re-organisation of the whole business undertaking, the retirement of R. W. E. Burnaby from the presidency and directorate, and the conditional adoption of a recommendation for the closing out of retail stores, featured yesterday's annual shareholders' meeting of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company here.

After much discussion at the evening session, it was decided that the directors name a representative committee to consider the "question of co-operative organisation for business purposes, with special reference to co-operative organisation on a commodity basis," and report at the next annual meeting.

WARM WELCOME FOR ROTARIANS.

Peterborough Delegates Hear Rotary President in Toronto.

TORONTO, Dec. 12.—Rotarians from the farthest parts of Ontario joined with the Toronto Rotary Club last night in welcoming their International President and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Havens of Kansas City, who visited this city for the first time. It was a tribute of which Mr. Havens could not have been insensible—the presence of scores of delegates from distant clubs who had come, in some cases, hundreds of miles to hear his message. And in his subsequent address, where in he eloquently expounded the basic principles of Rotary, Mr. Havens expressed the conviction that such gatherings tended far toward the creation of international goodwill and the solution of vexatious world problems.

Headed by the white-haired veteran, J. W. Farewell, the Oshawa Club was represented almost to a man, 42 strong. This splendid display of Rotary loyalty was warmly acclaimed by the gathering, and Mr. Farewell, now in his 82nd ear, was by unanimous demand installed at the head table. Almost equal enthusiasm was aroused by the entrance of the 27 delegates from Peterboro. Brantford sent 23 representatives, and practically every large town of the Province had its delegation, even to distant Kenora.

Work for Everyone

Mr. Havens aroused great enthusiasm in his opening remarks by announcing that Toronto would be the scene of the International Rotary Convention in 1925. He complimented the Ontario clubs upon their excellent attendance records and the not able work which they had accomplished in charitable and public enterprises.

Before the universal application of the tenets of Rotary—honesty, fairplay and unselfishness—he saw the political boundaries of countries melt away. Rotary was as essentially international as the smile and warm handclasp which were its outward manifestations. It was, he said, the expression of an age-old ideal which men of business had long striven after. That brought him to discuss the function of business men. They had been inclined hitherto to leave the conducting of Rotary meetings overmuch to the orators. They had been entirely too dormant. He reminded them that the ultimate liberation of the world from the aftermath of war rested with the men of business. It was not the scholars, the artists or the scientists for whom Europe was calling, he said, but the hard-headed business men.

A Man Seldom Says What He Wants for Christmas So We Have Compiled a Whole List of Goods and Prices For the Aid of Women Shoppers

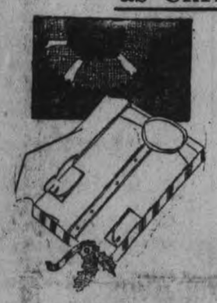
Have You Noticed? He Needs a Scarf

A series of beautiful scarfs to keep the throat warm and the collar clean. Care has been taken in the selection of colors.

A number of men prefer silk-knits. They like the handsome club stripes that give an air of distinction to the wearer. We have many of these. The grey ones mottled with black and striped with a single or double contrasting colored stripe are particularly attractive—the stripe may be red, green black or white. Others are plain shades. Priced at $3, $4 and $4.50.

At $1.55 a whole range of silk and fibre knit combinations in two-toned effects. Good choosing in a series of colors. Jaeger Wool Scarfs come at $2.50. Lovat, heather and camel shades. Some plain and others with colored bordered ends.

Men Like Shirts as Christmas Gifts



A new shirt adds a bit of spice to a man's wardrobe—especially if it be one of the many beautiful fabrics that we have here. It is a most acceptable Christmas Gift to most men. You'll find a selection of individuality and unusual variety here.

A wide variety of Russian cords, English madras, Scotch Zephyrs and English silk broadcloths. These fabrics comprise the best in shirt material and we believe we have selected the very best in patterns. Handsome stripe effects in fine cluster and narrow effects and some with tiny dice designs. The English silk broadcloths at $5.50 are worth looking into. They possess wearing qualities that most silk shirts lack. For formal dress wear we recommend the "Donchester," an Arrow shirt with a non-bulge front. Marked at $3.50.

Shirt prices from $1.00 to $5.50.

An Abundance of Handsome Neckties

We're back to the good old days in the matter of quality in men's neckties. They are the best seen in many seasons. We are speaking of both the qualities and the patterns. The best way to be convinced is to see them .

The prices range from 79c to $2. Your taste will be given plenty of scope. If you are inclined to invisible, unobtrusive designs, then you'll find them at any of the prices. If you like stripes in contrasting shades that express quiet dignity, then you'll have plenty to select from. Again we want to emphasize their superiority over those of former seasons. The $2 ones are "Del-Park" brand and are the last word in workmanship and genuine goodness throughout.

A beautiful assortment of English-made knitted ties are marked at $3.50. All-silk and full fashioned. Some plain and others fancy stitched self patterns.

OUR CLOTHES SHOP FOR MEN will be at their service to aid them in any way it can to solve the problem of what to give him. It is well qualifitd to do this because, year after year, it has been attending to the wants of men. Among those who take pride in their appearance it has an enviable reputation for Good Style, Quality, Service and Fair Dealing.

We cannot catalogue all the goods and all the prices in so small a space, but there is a fair representation of good practical gift suggestions that all men need.

If you are unfamiliar with men's stores and do not know where to go for his gift, then let us say that the Cressman Clothes Shop is conducted in the same thorough way that characterizes the entire Cressman establishment.

Lounging Robes and Smoking Jackets—Two Things a Man Seldom Buys for Himself

There are two things of apparel that a man seldom buys. One is a lounging robe and the other a smoking jacket. New ones here for Christmas selling are in plain tweed fabrics with a soft brushed surface and braid trimmed.

Made with long roll lapels in brown, fawn and camel tones. The edges are bound with a contrastisng color, likewise the pockets. A silk cord to match makes a pretty finish on the edge as well as protecting the garment from wear. They fasten with loops and frogs of the cord. Priced at $13.50 and $15.50.

The lounging robes are the same as the jacket except in length. In addition to the above colors there is French blue with a deeper blue trim. Also a camel shade trimmed with French blue. Priced at $17.50 and $19.50.

Indian patterned robes of Beacon cloth come in heavy weights and attractive designs. Priced at $11.50 and $12.50.

Are You Going to Give Gloves?

If you are these selections will be of real assistance to you. You do not have to know the ins and outs of glove details—these possess every element of style and good fit.

Did You Ever See a Man With Too Many Socks?

You never did or never will. Hosiery is one part of a man's wardrobe that always needs replenshing. Knowing this and realizing that there would be a great demand for socks of THE RIGHT KIND we bought liberally of the most attractive and best to be had.

A man's man likes something distinctive but quiet. We recommend these of silk and wool. You have choice of the following colors undershot with white—clerical grey, black, brown or buff. Priced at 98c, 3 pairs for $2.85, $1.25 and $1.50.

Plain blacks can be had with white, blue or purple clocks. Also, black clocks. Moderately priced at $1.50.

An Old Favorite Handkerchiefs for Gifts

If one handkerchief seems too little to give, then make it three or four, a half dozen or a dozen, keep adding until you reach the amount you wish to invest. A number of pure-linen ones would make a very handsome gift.

You can pay as litls as 25c or 35c for one of linen lawn. They are fine but not pure linen. Genuine Irish linens with fancy initial come at 50c. Plain pure linen of beautiful fineness range anywheer from 50c to 60c.

They are unexcelled at the price. Choice of wide or narrow hems.

Many men have taken a liking to colored silk handkerchiefs with contrasting colored borders. There is real good chosing in these at 75c, $1 and $1.50.

I feel so well and strong and can do every bit of my work and not a pain in my back now. I recommend your medicine and you can use this letter as a testimonial." — Mrs. Phil. Masek, 801 Winslow St., St. Paul, Minn.

Just another case where a woman found relief by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many times these tired, worn-out feelings and pains about the body are from troubles many women have. SIX-YEAR-OLD HAD BRONCHITIS EVERY WINTER

Bronchitis generally begins with chills, followed by fever and a harsh dry, hacking cough. There is a raising of phlegm, whi at first is of a light color, but, as the trouble progresses it becomes of a yellowish or greenish color and is sometimes streaked with blood.

All those who are troubled with bronchitis will find in Dr. Wood's Pine Syrup a remedy that will stimulate the bronchial organs, subdue the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts, and loosen the phlegm.

Mrs. Oliver C. Lepage, South Rustico, P. E. I., writes:—"My little six-year-old girl had very bad attacks of bronchitis every winter. In the evening and during the night, she would have fever and chokie up, and had a wheezing in her chest. We tried several cough medicines, but they never seemed to do her any good. A neighbor advised us to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which we did, and after she had taken two bottles she got perfectly well."

Price 35c and 50c a bottle; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited Toronto, Ont.

A THOUGHT

And when the people complained it displeased the Lord.—Numbers 11:1.

To be honest, to be kind—to earn a little and to spend a little less, to make upon the whole, a family happier for his presence; to renounce when that shall be necessary and not be embittered; to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation—and above all, on the same grim condition, to keep friends within himself—here is a task for all that man has of fortitude and delicacy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

A TERM WORTH KNOWING.

"Freezing" is a term applied to what happens to the piston if the cylinder is not cooled. It is as liable to happen in summer as in winter. The piston, due to lack of lubrication, expands to such a point that it has much friction in the cylinder, and, on account of the high temperature, becomes fast, or is said to "freeze."

Warden of County

In last week's issue of the Examiner a most interesting list of the Wardens of the County since 1861, who had resided in Omemee, was given. he following is a short history of each,— early rpesidents of Omemee, as "Squire" Cottingham was warden in 1861 and again in 1866. At that time Peterborough and Victoria were united counties and the county council was held in Peterborough. Squire Cottingham was one of our first settlers and owned all of Omemee, then known as 'Cottingham's village' as well as the greater part of the Township of Emily. He was the first Reeve of Omemee. In religion he was a member of the English church his business interests were wide, and he employed many men and women in the carding and woollen mills. He also conducted a grist mill and saw mill and was a successful lumber merchant.

In 1880 Dr. George A. Norris was Warden. He conducted a large practice and drug store and was the son of the Rev. Jas. Norris, who was stationed in Omemee, when the country was practically all forest.

In 1889 Dr. Cornwall was Warden of the County. The doctor was born in the Port of Spain, when he first came to Canada, he located at Niagara Falls, Ont., and was a most successful physician. Dr. Cornwall, passed away a few years ago, after an illness of several years duration His family are still residentts of Omemee.

Mh. T. H. McQuade was Warden of the County in 1890. He was the Reeve of Emily for several years Mr. McQuade is a son of the late Arthur McQuade, M.P., and although not of a robust health as formerly, he still takes an active interest in county politics.

Mr. W. C. Switzer, now resident of Peterboro, served the county as Warden in 1896.

The late R. J. Mulligan was warden of the county in 1915, having served the village as reeve for several years previous to becoming warden. Mrs. Mulligan and son, Dr. C. V. Mulligan are now residents of the county town.

The late Robt. Wilson served long and faithfully the rate payers of Emily township as Reeve, later becoming Warden of the County in 1920. Mr. Wilson was a faithful member of the Methodist church and a loyal Orangeman.

The present Warden, Mr. R. J. Patterson needs no introduction, suffice it to say, "He is the right man in the right place."

BITTER TILT BETWEEN KERR AND GORDON IN FIRST CASE

Disparaging Reflections in Several Verbal Brushes During Course of Scott-Dickson Action in the County Court--Fraternal Respect Strained.

CASE ADJOURNED

Sharp personalities were exchanged by G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., and F. D. Kerr, K.C., opposing counsel in the first case before the General Sessions of the Peace and December sittings of the County Court which opened Tuesday afternoon before Judge Huycke and a jury.

While Mr. Kerr was cross-examining, and demanding direct answers to questions that seemed to irritate a witness, Mr. Gordon made an objection in which he referred to Mr. Kerr's manner of enquiry as that of a division court lawyer.

Mr. Kerr protested, and addressing the bench said he should be protected from the insults of Mr. Gordon.

"When you two get together the fur flies, and I can't stop it," Judge Huycke remarked.

Mr. Kerr said he might describe Mr. Gordon's methods as those of a police court lawyer, and that such a statement might be true.

"Oh, well, Mr. Kerr used to be a police court lawyer till they got rid of him down there," Mr. Gordon rejoined.

Shortly after this encounter, the two King's Counsel at closer range and in lower but no less biting tones were overheard calling each other clowns of various degrees.

Finally, when they were standing on either side of the witness box, Mr. Gordon was seen to glare at Mr. Kerr and snap some remark at him that failed to carry to the press table, and probably didn't reach the bench. It had all the visible expression of bitterness, but fortunately for the decorum of the court these acerbities stopped short of open hostilities.

Claimed $500 Damages

The first case on the civil list to be tried by jury was the claim of Robert T. Scott, formerly of Asphodel township, and now of Peterborough, against William Dickson, county constable, also of Asphodel, for $500 for alleged assault, trespass and wrongful conversion of a piano. Mr. Kerr represented the plaintiff, and Mr. Gordon the defendant.

It transpired that Scott and his wife had disagreed in their home life, and that Mrs. Scott has decided to move out, and come to Peterborough with her two sons. On November 10th, 1921, Dickson accompanied her to her home and was present when she took away some of her household belongings, and with them a piano.

Examined by Mr. Kerr, Scott testified that he had been born in Asphodel and had spent most of his life there. For seven years prior to the day of the affair in this case he had lived on the farm at lot 17, concession 2, with his wife, mother-in-law and his two sons. On that date, after an absence of several days, his wife returned with County Constable W. T. Dickson, his son and Scott's two sons.

"Dickson walked in ahead of the missus and told her to go ahead and pack up the things," plaintiff said. "I asked Dickson what authority he had for doing that, and I asked him to show me his papers. He showed me no papers or any sign of authority. I asked him a second time, and he said I'd get enough papers after awhile."

Dickson said, "Bob, you are nothing but a dirty slut. I wouldn't allow this woman to live with you again. You're worse than a brute." He grabbed me by the throat and pushed me backward, and pulled out a club as if he was going to hit me."

Pushed Through Kitchen Door

"He was pushing me through the kitchen door. I braced myself with my feet. I put my left hand against his shoulder. I said, 'Don't dare hit me with that club.' I was afraid he would. He opened the door with his foot and pushed me through it on to the verandah. He said, 'There, you brute, get out there.' The push sent me clear across the verandah.

"I followed Dickson in again. I still wanted him to show me what authority he had. They were beginning to gather up things about the house.

"Dickson said to my wife, 'How about this piano?' She said she wouldn't take it, and couldn't cart it away.

"Dickson said, 'We can get a truck.' He started to pull it from its position. He saw a bed in the spare bedroom and he asked the missus, 'What about this bed?'

Take Whole House

"I said, 'Bill, you'd better take the whole house.'

"He told me to get out and stay out. I said I'd get out when I liked. With that he pushed me out a second time. I again asked him to show me his authority for entering my home.

A telephone message to Peterborough brought out Eddie Reid. When he arrived the piano was out on the verandah. Scott went to a neighbor's for assistance. He said he saw Dickson load the piano on a truck. The piano was taken without my consent I demanded his authority for taking it, he said 'you shut up,' and pushed me away.

Mr. Kerr—What necessity was there for Dickson to be there to protect your wife? Not any.

Plaintiff said that Dickson and the rest drove away in two cars with the piano. The only reason other furniture was taken was that the truck couldn't hold it.

Was Reconciled

Scott told of the reconciliation with his wife about four weeks after the piano was taken. He saw it again in the house in Peterborough. where his wife had moved to, and where they had resided together since that time.

To Mr. Kerr plaintiff said he had bought the piano from an agent named Taylor in Peterborough. It was a Newcombe worth $275. Scott made a cash payment with an organ which he said he owned.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Gordon, plaintiff recounted he had prepared to divide the household effects with his wife. He had interviewed Chief Newhall, saying he wanted some one to keep his sons from piling on. Newhall gave him a letter asking Dickson to go over to Scott's "and stand around while the things were divided up."

Plaintiff met his wife and mother-in-law in company with Dickson driving toward Peterborough and then handed him the letter. Scott declared that Dickson "turned traitor" on him after coming into Peterborough and talking to Chief Newhall.

He said that what he wanted to get were some things from a trunk which was locked and in a room occupied by his wife and her mother.

To Mr. Kerr plaintiff said there was no arrangement for dividing all the household effects, and no reason why Dickson should have come to the house.

It was brought out that Scott and his wife had been reunited through the efforts of Adjutant Buntin, and that last Spring he understood that this action had been settled.

Dickson's Story

William Dickson, the defendant, testified that he had been a county constable for thirty years. Examined by Mr. Gordon, he said he went to Scott's on November 10, after a telephone conversation with Chief Newhall. "Mrs. Scott began packing up certain household articles. Her husband said, 'Damn you, you're not going to take that stuff.'

"I told him I was there to protect his wife as she was afraid he might do her some harm," said the defendant. "Scott began to swear. I caught him by the back and put him out. I didn't pull out a club. I had a club on my wrist but I didn't take it off or threaten him. I pushed him out of his wife's way; that was all. He was damning and swearing all the time. I believe if he had kept quiet his missus wouldn't have left him that night.

"Mrs. Scott gave the order to take out the piano. Her husband said, "Damned if he cared whether they took it or not." Scott made no objections. He gave it a shove on to the truck and then quit. He offered to pay Reid for taking the piano away."

Dickson said he took the piano into his house, at the request of Mrs. Scott, until she was settled down in Peterborough.

Had No Warrant

Mr. Kerr—You haven't observed that some constables get pretty bossy? No, sir.

"You don't have more say now than when you were first on the job?" "I'm just the same as ever."

"You went there without a warrant?" "Yes."

"Without papers from a magistrate?" "Yes."

"You knew she was going to take goods away?" "Yes."

Dickson said he went there as a neutral.

"Did you fear a breach of the peace on Mrs. Scott's part?" "I couldn't tell."

"Did you have it in mind she might?" "I couldn't tell."

"You can't tell whether you had it in mind or not?" "Can't say."

"If you feared no breach of the peace, why were you going there?" "Because I was asked by Mrs. Scott."

"Have you any idea whether the sheriff here is likely to commit a breach of the peace?" "You never can tell."

Judge Huycke—If you ask him about yourself and Mr. Gordon he might be able to tell.

Baton Up Sleeve

"You went there with your baton up your sleeve?" "I mostly do."

Defendant said he told Scott he was there on the advice of Chief Newhall to see that Mrs. Scott packed up her goods.

"And you were going to see the goods she claimed as hers," Mr. Kerr suggested.

"Were you ever a defendant in a police court?" "Not on a case of this kind."

"Weren't you tried for assault of your son?" "Yes, and I won it. My son testified for me."

"Was that the only assault charged against you?" "No."

Dickson said he had been fined before he became a constable, and 'paid good big fines.'

"I used to like fighting. It cost me a lot of money."

He refused to give up the piano to Henry Clements who applied for it on behalf of Mr. Scott, because he had promised Mrs. Scott to keep it for her.

"From what Scott said did you think he wanted you to take the piano away?" "I don't know what he thought. From the way he acted I thought he wasn't right in his mind."

"When Scott says you swore at him and lost your temper, that's not correct?" "It's not correct.

Dickson denied having pushed him on to the verandah, but had told him to shut up.

Pestered The Chief

Chief Newhall told of frequent visits from both Mr. and Mrs. Scott during their days of discord. "They pestered me to death. Scott wanted to get a trunk. The two boys and the wife wanted to play rag time music on the piano, but Scott said he wanted hymns, otherwise they could 'take the damn thing out' he told me. The real trouble was that the boys were loafing around, taking out the horses and not helping in the work."

The case was adjourned until Wednesday morning.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, it does the work without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief. 40c and 75c, at all druggists.

BUILDING TRADES ARE VERY QUIET.

A Paucity of Permits Issued By City Engineer.

The building permits issued by the City Engineer for the first two weeks of this month are very small compared with previous months. This aso shows a general decrease in employment, for carpenters and builders.

The following permits were issued during the first two weeks:

C. L. Huffman, 526 Sherbrooke street, erect a garage, $60.

Higgins Hardware Co., 137 Hunter street, to erect a covered runaway, $50.

Edward Freeman, 486 Cambridge street, to erect a garage, $25.

M. P. Coughin, Court House to alter partitions, $825.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

The custom of having all bridemaids dress alike at a wedding had its origin back in the primitive days when evil spirits were supposed to attend wedding ceremonies and see how much trouble they could stir up So the bride and bridegroom always were surrounded by friends of their own age and sex, similarly dressed, to make it more difficult for the spirits to single out the happy couple and carry out their evil designs. c

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup at home. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

ANNUAL MEETING W.M.A., ST. PAUL'S.

Reports Were Encouraging and Showed Progress —Officers Elected.

At the forty-sixth annual meeting of St. Paul's W. M. Auxiliary reports were submitted and officers for the ensuing year elected.

Secretary's Report.

The secretary read the following report:

To the President and members of St. Paul's W.M.S. Auxiliary I beg leave to submit the following:

The first meeting of the year was observed as a special prayer service.

On Jan. 19 the executive met and arranged the programme of work and study for the year. The study book chosen was "The Planting of the Faith." This book was written by veteran missionaries and secretaries who know the problems facing us in these days of unrest and change, and the result of our missionary efforts as they relate themselves directly to the problem of Christian citizenship and indirectly to the many philanthropic and social service efforts carried on by other Christian organizations.

Needless to say this proved a very interesting and instructive study.

We have a membership of 156 with an average attendance at our meetings of 43. The Messenger section reports 125 subscribers. The Messenger is the official organ of the W. M.S. and it is the only magazine that gives a full account of the work of the Women's Missionary Society and should be read by every member.

A bale valued at one hundred and thirty-eight ($138.00) was sent to Albernie school and $7.50 in cash sent for boots. Hospital supplies were sent to Canora.

The Home Helpers' secretary reports thirteen home helpers and a contribution of $10.61 to the general fund. Six subscribers for the Messenger and four home helpers joined the Auxiliary during the year.

The Strangers' secretary made 19 visits to strangers in the city. The hospital visitor made over 30 visits to sick people in the hospital. The Literature secretary reports literature sent regularly to Halls' Bridge.

March 3 was observed as a day of special prayer. The W.M.S. Auxiliaries of all denominations in the city joining in a very impressive service hed in Murray street Baptist church.

Delegates were sent to the Provincial W.M.S. meeting at Ottawa, the general council meeting at Galt and the Presbyterial meeting at Brighton.

Reports of these meetings were given by the delegates. In May a systematic canvas for new members was made with very encouraging results.

At our thank offering meeting in October Miss Lanacster gave a very interesting Thanksgiving address. The thank offering amounted to $080.55.

On Nov. 9 a sectional meeting of the Presbyterial was held in Lakefield; Miss M. Dickson presided and Miss McGregor, one of our field secretaries, gave an address on "work among the new Canadians and Indians of the west. A number from our Auxiliary attended that meeting, deriving both pleasure and profit from it. The next day Miss McGregor gave an address at our regular meeting, speaking of the same subject as at Lakefield. Her addresses on both occasions were most interesting and encouraging, as she told us some of the results of the work being done among these people by the W.M.S. and of the great woork yet to be done.

We have lost one of our members by death, Miss Iosbel Hall. She was regular in her attendance at the monthly meetings as long as her health permitted, and she also contributed generously to the funds of the society. She has finished her work here and gone home to be forever with the Lord she loved and served while here.

Our loving sympathy is extended to those of our members who have suffered bereavement during the past year, and we pray that the God of all love and comfort may comfort them and draw them closer to himself.

Now, at the close of another year, would it not be well to ask ourselves have we realized our responsibility in carrying out the command of our Lord, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature ,and have we taken hold of the promise that goes with it, "Lo I am with you always," and felt the power and confidence which it gives.

Agnes Porteous, Secretary.

Other Reports.

The treasurer's report shows a total of contributions of $156,105.

The Faithful Workers' Mission Band reported an encouraging year and contributed $55 to the general fund.

Owing to sudden illness Miss Palethorpe of Korea, was unable to be present and Mrs. Rollins very kindly gave a splendid address on the first missionary and their teacher (Christ and His disciples), showing that the training Christ gave his disciples is just the same as we need to-day for missionary work.

Officers Elected.

The following are the officers for 1923:

President—Miss C. Dickson.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. Pogue.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Roger.
3rd Vice-President— Mrs. Robt. Hall.
4th Vice-President—Miss Lancaster.

Treasurer—Mrs. G. S. McKee.

FOUR ARE MURDERED BY POISON AND HOLMES SOLVES THE MYSTERY

A Few Pieces of Gravel Leads to Solution of Complex Problem By the Famous Detective.

KILLED OWN KIN.

Down by the sea for a much needed rest, Sherlock Holmes and his friend, Dr. Watson, called at a country house to inquire the way to an inn. Looking through a window, they were horrified to see, stiff and cold in death, two men and a woman seated upright around a table, on which stood a lamp, he been for some time .

Holmes carefully examined the scene, and as he approached the table, on which stoop a lamp, he noticed a strange odor, and then found some black powder on the shade above the lamp. He took some of this powder for further examination.

At this time Dr. Sterndale, a neighbor the inspector of police and Mortimer Tregennis, brother of the three dead persons, arrived, Tregennis explained that he lived apart from his sister and brothers owing to a quarrel they had over some property many years before, but that the difference had been forgotten, and they occasionally met for a game of cards, as they had done on the preceding evening. He had left early, he said, and strolled back to "The Lodge," where he lived with the vicar.

Holmes decided that the footprints of a man running from the house proved that Tregennis was lying, and as he discussed the case in their rooms that night he told Watson he would advise the inspector to arrest Tregennis in the morning.

But the morning brought another surprise. Before he could ask for the arrest of Tregennis, Holmes was informed that he had been found dead at the vicarage. Fumes in the room led Holmes to examine the lamp, and on the shade he found more of the black powder.

On the window sill outside Tregennis' bedroom Holmes found some damp, bright-colored gravel which was unlike any to be found about the vicar's lodge. An inspection of the whole neighborhood showed that the only place where this sort of gravel was to be found was along the garden path leading to Dr. Sterndale's residence.

Holmes then returned to his lodging place with Dr. Watson, and after opening the windows and door for safety, undertook to test the black powder he had gathered by pouring some of it into their lamp. The fumes that rose immediately were so virulent that Holmes and Watson were almost overcome before they could stagger to the door and get out into the open air. They saw Dr. Sterndale coming toward the house .

"I want to know why you killed Mortimer Tregennis, Dr. Sterndale," was the detective's greeting.

Dr. Sterndale pretended to be indignant and declared the detective was bluffing, but when Holmes showed him the gravel and told him that the next move in the case would depend on Stendale's explanation the doctor broke down.

"Nearly all my life," said Dr. Sterndale, "I have lived in unknowp countries—beyond the law. For years I loved Brenda Tregennis, but my barbaric ways frightened her, I suppose. I returned home only a few months ago, and I knew Mortimer needed money badly."

Dr. Sterndale then told how he had invited Mortimer to look at the curios he had brought back from the tropical regions of Central Africa, and described how Mortimer had been particularly interested in some powder called "The Devil's Foot," which was unknown to modern science, but which, when heated, created fumes that caused death under conditions of great agony.

"When I saw Brenda and her brothers, dead," said Dr. Sterndale, "I knew that Mortimer had killed them. I recalled his intense interest in 'The Devil's Foot,' and, as there was none of this powder to be had except my specimen, I knew Mortimer had stolen some of it and poisoned his brothers and sister to get the property over which they had quarreled .

"So in the night I went to him, threw at his window some of the gravel I had picked up along my garden walk, and when he came downstairs I forced him to admit me to the house and made him go to his living room, where I held a revolver at his head while he wrote a confession of the murders."

Dr. Sterndale then told how he had taken the confession and told Mortimer that he was "going to die like a dog—as you killed Brenda and the others." He then sprinkled "The Devil's Foot' 'into the lamp, and, holding his revolver leveled at Mortimer, backed to the window and stepped onto a porch, closing the window after him. As Dr. Sterndale had locked the door of the room on entering, Mortimer was helpless, and died in agony.

Holmes reprimanded Dr. Sterndale for taking the law into his own hands, but asked what he intended to do if his act of justice had not been discovered. Dr. Sterndale declared he had intended to bury himself in Central Africa for good to finish the work that he had but half completed.

As they saw the inspector of police approaching, Holmes grabbed Mortimer's written confession from Dr. Sterndale's hand, and when the inspector asked if Holmes had any news he turned the confession over to the police official.

"This proves," said Holmes "that Mortimer Tregennis killed his brother and sister by burning poison on the lamp shield. I think you will find he committed suicide in the same way."—Written from the film.

DUBLIN, December 13 (Canadina Press). — In his address to Parliament, the Governor-General referred to the Irregular troops, and declared that while they had failed utterly to upset the treaty and involve their country in renewed strife with Britain, they had struck deadly blows at the economic prosperity and the unity of Ireland.

The motion for the closure made by Stanley Baldwin carried at 6.30 this morning, and was hailed with cries of "Shame," "Gag," and "Scandays," while epithets of a personal character were hurled at the Treasury bench.

NEW MAE MURRAY PICTURE GEORGEOUS

In "Broadway Rose," Mae Murray's latest production, to be presented by Robert Z. Leonard at the Capitol Theatre on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, the famous Metro star has another of those roles which have come to be associated with her name and which porvide opportunities for magnificent settings, gorgeous costumes and the dance episodes without which no Mae Murray picture is complete.

It is the story of a country girl who has become a Broadway favorite and won fame as a dancer. Admired by many men, surrounded by the flattery and luxury which comes to those who are successful in catching the adulation of the Gay White Way, Rosalie Lawrence finds hope for happiness in the love of Hugh Thompson, whose parents are wealthy and of the socially elect.

Rosalie discovers, however, that the passage from Broadway to Fifth Avenue is not easily accomplished. The Thompsons have other plans for their son. Marriage with a Broadway dancer is not included in their social code. They have picked out the wife for their one and only son in Barbara Royce, a debutante of their own set. And so Rosalie consents to a secret marriage in order that there may be no break with his parents.

The results of this step involve Rosalie in a series of stirring incidents which threaten her with disaster but she eventually finds happiness.

The scenes of "Broadway Rose" are elaborate and lavish, representing the playgrounds of the idle rich and the gilded haunts of New York's night life. The costumes are striking in their originality and beauty and the original dances conceived by Miss Mae Murray add to the interest of the picture.

"Broadway Rose," a Tiffany production, directed by Robert Z. Leonard, was written by Edmund Goulding, who also wrote the scenarios of "Peacock Alley" and "Fascination." The photography is by Oliver T. Marsh and the art settings by Charles Cadwalder.

Supporting Miss Murray is a cast of unusual excellence containing such well known players as Monte Blue, Ward Crane, Ray Bloomer, Alma Tell and Mrs. Jennings.

Adventure Number 2 of the Sherlock Holmes Picture will be shown on these days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday—these short subjects have proven very popular wherever shown, all round this show will be very entertaining including the music by the Capitol Concert Orchestra.

FARNUM BACK AGAIN ..... IN BIG SEA PICTURE

Once more Dustin Farnum has proven that he is an actor of great capabilities. This was made manifest last night at the Royal Theatre. The photoplay is a William Fox production and is a real thriller.

Farnum is cast as a millionaire shipowner whose vessels are being raided by river pirates. For several months the depradations have been going on when the owner himself decides to take a hand in the capturing of the crooks. The chase which follows, in which two of the speediest motor boats on the Pacific coast engage, is one of the most spectacular scenes ever flashed on the screen here.

Kid McCoy, whose right name is Norman Selby and who was at one time a leading pugilist; Maurice "Lefty" Flynn, who a few years ago was acclaimed one of the greatest of football players and who has since become a successful screen actor and Ethel Grey Terry are member of a strong cast supporting the Fox star.

Other noteworihy features make the picture one of the best ever presented to local audiences.

Many fights have occurred in moving pictures, but the pitched battle between a millionaire shipowner, assisted by detectives, and river pirates, which is a feature of Dustin Farnum's latest picture, "Oathbound," is one of the best ever presented and will be shown for the last time to-night.

For Thursday, Friday and Saturday

Starting with a matinee to-morrow Thursday for the last half of this weeks, will find an exceptional program at the popular Grand Opera House. Two big feature pictures will be offered together with the usual high class refined vaudeville numbers furnished by "Georgee" an amusing comedian, known as one of the Idle Class; and Black and Lynn" an exceptionally clever team of Eccentric Acrobats, who have just finished a tour of the Loew Circuit

The double feature picture program consists of the sensational 7-reel production of "Partners of the Tide" a thrilling photo-drama taken from the novel of the same name by Joseph C. Lincoln. The picture version is full of heart interest throughout. A death-grapple beneath the waves a full-rigged Schooner sunk at sea another sturdy craft destroyed by fire, intrigue, humor and a charming love story. These are the elements which Irwin V. Willat has woven into his greatest production.

The second feature brings to the picture fans the two most beloved artists of the day in Lillian and Dorothy Gish in a beautiful little story that will appeal to all. The productions of "The Sisters" the story in which the Gish girls will be seen at the Grand during the last 3 days of the week is something entirely new to the screen or in which these favorites have ever appeared, and a treat is in store for all who attend.

Vitally Important to Farmers

Our candid and absolutely sincere advice is:——

There is nothing that a Farmer can invest in that will return him the same result in Money, Health, Comfort, Happiness and Satisfaction as a

Fordson Tractor

Delivered on his farm at $450

Right now is the time to bargain for it, and to consider disposing of your surplus horses, every one of which it takes the product of five acres annually to maintain.

Again, the prices of grain, cattle and hogs are on the increase, which proves conclusively that now is the psychological time to arrange for greater acreage and greater production, and, more important than all, greater financial returns for next year.

The price of Fordson Tractors will increase. We would therefore like to have the opportunity of discussing Terms, etc., without delay.

MODIFIED DRAFT MEETS DEFEAT

Proposal Advanced By Owner of Rochester Club Is Voted Down at International League Meeting

NEW YORK, December 13 (Canadian Press). — Defeat of a modified draft proposal, and several player deals marked the closing session yesterday of the annual meeting of International League club owners.

The proposal designed as an alternative for the regular draft, which has been rejected by the International as well as four other big minor leagues, was made by Walter E. Hapgood, part owner of the Rochester Club. It provided that a player who has been with a club for two years must be sold to a major league club for a minimum price of $15,000, providing he is in demand, and that formal notice is filed by the club or clubs desiring to purchase him. It was stipulated that the sale could be made at any time prior to the opening of the following season, and that in the event a player was sought by more than one club, the purchaser should be decided by lot.

Defeat of the proposal was by a vote of five to two. No vote was cast by the Syracuse Club. Supporters of the plan were the Rochester and Reading owners. The opponents were Baltimore, Newark, Jersey City, Buffalo, and Toronto.

In League circles the plan was voted as another effort to force disposal by the Baltimore Club of several of the stars on the team that has made the International League race one-sided for several seasons.

The sale of Charles W. Ward, substitute Brooklyn infielder, to the Reading Club, was announced by Charles H. Ebbets, president of the Dodgers. S. L. Robertson, president of the Buffalo Club, announced he had traded Third Baseman Gene Sheridan and Pitcher Ed. Tomlin to Newark for Third Baseman W. Webb. No cash or other consideration, he said, was involved in this deal.

FINAL GAME IN THE SOFT BALL LEAGUE

Raybestos and K. of C. Will Meet To-Morrow For the City Championship.

Tomorrow night will see the final game for the City Soft Ball championship and will also probably see the fastest contest of a long successful schedule of fast and snappy games. Tomorrow's gladiators will be Raybestos and Knights of Columbus. The latter team battled their way into the finals by defeating the Wildcats in a hectic eleven inning ball storm Monday evening. That game was the climax of a series of grand games on the part of this team. They won the championship of the Club section with but one loss marked on the ice against them, a feat which shows them to be of championship calibre.

The Raybestos gang are out to put the brakes on the K. of C. winning streak and if anybody can do it they can. These boys swept all before them in the Manufacturers section and have been playing good ball.

The game is scheduled at the Armoury but those who wish to get inside the building sufficiently far to see the contest had better be there a good bit ahead of time for a big crowd is expected. A charge of 25 cents will be made and the proceeds will be turned over to the P.A.A.A.

SCRAPPER TRAINS ON RAW BANANAS

Homer Robinson, the Pittsburg Thunderbolt, Eschews All Meat Before a Bout.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—Can you imagine a man eater who feeds on bananas?

The ferocious individual rejoices in the peaceful patronymic of Homer Robinson. He is as black as the exalted ruler of the midnight sons, and he puddles hot iron for a living down in the infernos of Pittsburgh flats. Down at Boston last spring he ate a couple of bunches of bananas and proceeded to knock everybody for a row of coffins until he broke his hand, and even then he gave the champions of two classes a hectic time before they beat him. He eats no meat when training and lives almost exclusively on bananas.

Frank Gallagher, who had Georgie Fifield down there winning the 125-pound United States championship, brought back wondrous tales of the black's tremendous hitting. Riverside A.C. are sending for him for their tourney. Black is a 155-pound boy but in the Riverside A.C. Amateur boxing tournament, he is entered for three classes—middleweight, light heavyweight and heavyweight, and he is coming up with the idea of measuring Larry Gans, the local heavyweigth champion, for a set of first class obsequies.

"This Robertson is positively the hardest hitter I ever saw," said Gallagher yesterday. "Why, twice I saw him walk into the ring at Boston, shake hands step back, whip over his right and walk back to his corner before his man fell. He was shaking his gloves off before the referee counted his man out. Take it from me this bird will start an epidemic of excuses among his future opponents the first night they see him work. He's a human pile driver."

Anyway Robertson is coming up here and the Riverside are rounding up all the middles and light heavies and heavies of class in New York, Boston, Cleveland and Toronto to mee thim.

Choose a cool day for airing the pillows and bolsters.

SALE OF YANKS WITHIN A WEEK

Colonel Ruppert Will Purchase Colonel Huston's Half Interest For Reported Price of $1,500,000.

NEW YORK, December 13 (Canadian Press). — Developments connected with the major league baseball sessions yesterday centred prominently around the affairs of the New York Yankees, the American League champions.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert's formal announcement that he expected within a week to acquire sole ownership of the club by purchasing, for a reported consideration of $1,500,000, the half interest of Colonel T. L. Huston, was followed by authoritative reports that the Yankees had closed a deal with the White Sox to trade Aaron Ward, Bob Meusel, and a pitcher to the westerners for Eddie Collins, veteran second sacker, and Dick Kerr, southpaw pitcher.

It was said that official announcement of the trade, which has been rumoured in diamond circles for some time, would be made at today's opening session of the American League club owners.

The only possibility of a hitch in the deal, as now outlined, centres around Kerr, who failed to report to the White Sox last spring, and must secure reinstatement from Commissioner Landis before being permitted to play in major league ranks again.

Ward played second base and Meusel in the outfield for the Yankees last season.

Colonel Ruppert's announcement as to the ownership of the club followed his partner's statement last night that he was negotiating for the sale of his interests in order to "take a rest."

"Legal details are all that remain in the way of completing the deal," said Colonel Ruppert. "We have agreed on all essential points, and unless something unforeseen develops I expect to be sole owner of the Yankees within a week's time. No other interests than my own are involved in the transaction, nor will I have any partners in the control of the club after Colonel Huston retires."

Colonel Ruppert denied emphatically that there was any ground for reports that he and Colonel Huston had not agreed on club policies, including the retention of Manager Miller Huggins. He said there were no differences on questions of any major importance to the club.

Colonel Ruppert would reveal no details of the financial agreement made with his partner, but did not deny that the club, including the new Yankee stadium, possesses a value in the neighbourhood of $3,000,000.

Despite Colonel Huston's announced desire to retire from baseball, reports persisted that he might obtain an interest in the Boston American League Club. Throuhout the day he avoided interviewers, and refused to add to the statment he issued last night.

ROSENBERG LOST PURSE FOR BOUT.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press)—The State Athletic Commission yesterday ordered forfeited the purse of Dave Rosenburg in his boxing contest with Mike O'Dowd at the Rink Sporting Club Thanksgiving night, because he lost the contest on a foul after repeated warnings.

Replying to reports that Rosenberg's left hand was in bad shape the Commission submitted with the decision yesterday copies of letters from Dr. James E. Thompson and John Leon, President of the Rink Sporting Club, Inc., setting forth that they had examined Rosenberg's left hand on the day of the bout and "found absolutely nothing the matter with it."

GOOD BOXING FEATURED CARD AT VICTORIA HALL LAST NIGHT

First Bouts of the Season Show Some Likely Youngsters Receiving Instruction From the P.A.A.A.

AT VICTORIA HALL.

Six fast boxing bouts were put on, for the edification of the fans, at Victoria Hall last evening under the auspices of the P.A.A.A. A seventh bout, and one that took well with the spectators, was one in which both contestants were blindfolded. One of these battlers hearing a noise which he thought came from his opponent landed several healthy wallops on his own second before that gentleman could get out of the ring.

The bouts were the first to be put on by the P.A.A. since the boxing lessons were started this fall and although the boys are still far from perfect form they all showed up well and gave every promise for the excellence of future events which will be staged during the winter.

Some excellent material is being developed under the system of instruction employed by the P.A.A.A. and the local authorities on affairs of the squared circle are planning to send at least two of last evening's scrappers to Toornto to make a bid for the city championship honors there.

During the evening the work which is being done along boxing lines by the P.A.A.A. was explained to the fans by Dr. A. W. McPherson president of the organization. The P.A.A.A. employs a paid instructor for this sport and the boys receive their instruction free of charge though they are expected to become members of the P.A.A.A.

The Bouts.

The opening number on the card last evening was a three round mill between Millard and "Young" Minicola, in the 115 pound class. The youngsters made a good fast scrap of it and the decision was given as a draw.

Skin" Baker and Jerry McGill in the 108 pound division were the next in the ring and showed the fans three fast rounds as an even decision being again given.

In the novice class Corbett and Freeman made their first ring appearance and did exceptionally well for the first trip out. Corbett had slightly the best of it in the final round and was given the decision.

Howden and Woodcock in the 135 pound class put on a bout that got the crowd warmed up and brought them to their feet on more than one occasion. Howden was awarded a popular decision for he had slightly the better of it, but Woodcock nevertheless put up a good scrap and made the victor work for his honors.

Jack McDonough earned a decision over Minecola in the 145 pound section after a battle in which both boys showed some good work. Both these boys had plenty of supporters in the crowd and both gave their respective backers plenty of opportunity to cheer them on. They were just getting nicely warmed up when the third round ended and the victory went to McDonough.

The blindfold bout was the next on the card and needless to say no decision was given. Both boys landed frequently on the air and went to the floor oftener from the force of their own swings than from the wallops of their opponents. The uncertainity of the bout proved popular with the crowd who clamored for another round.

Tony Coombs took a decision over "Scotty" Oxley in the final and best bout of the evening. Coombs entered the ring at 133 pounds, twelve pounds lighter than his opponent, but he was in much better condition. He took some stiff punishment in the opening round, worked on even terms in the second, and had things practically his own way in the third. Oxley appeared pretty well played out when the final bell sounded, though this was due more to lack of training than to the punishment he had received.

Judges were dispensed with last night the decisions being left in the hands of the referee, George N, Graham.

The only deductions to be allowed will be those of rental for the hall, unless, as is hoped, one is donated free, and payment of the attendants' wages.

There will be no free seats. The members of the Federation, referees, time keepers, judges, boxers and all other officials, must pay an admission fee. The Federation also makes it a condition that Siki must appear before a commission and justify the charges he has made regarding the Carpentier-Siki fight.

NATIONAL LEAGUE OPENS APRIL 17

1923 Schedule Will Be One Week Later Than 1922—Better Weather Conditions Are Expected.

NEW YORK, December 13 (Canadian Press). — The selection of Tuesday, 17th April, as the opening date for the 1923 pennant race of the National League was the principal feature of the annual meeting of the senior baseball organisation yesterday.

In making the announcement after the first of a two day's session, President John Heydler stated that the National League magnates were unanimously in favour of opening the season a week later than has been the case in recent years.

Weather conditions have proved more favourable for baseball early in October than the fore part of April during recent seasons, according to Heydler, and it was thought desirable to change the dates to conform. Playing a schedule of 154 games and allowing for the usual number of open dates, the League Executive expressed the opinion that when the schedule was completed it would show the closing date as Sunday, 7th October. This would bring the opening game of the World's Series on or about Tuesday, 9th October, he said, approximately one week later than the initial game in the 1922 series.

When asked if this later opening would also be observed by the American League, Heydler said he knew of no reason why there should be a difference of opinion on the matter. He stated that at a conference with President B. B. Johnson, of the American League, last August, 17th April was fixed upon as the date, and that the joint schedule committee of the two major leagues so understood the situation. Any attempt to shift to an earlier date would work hardship to the National League clubs, many of which, he said, had already completed their spring training plans, including exhibition games as late as 15th or 16th April.

The greater part of the session was devoted to routine business, including the reading of the President's report as well as those of the board of directors and the treasury.

The 1922 pennant was officially awarded to the New York Club and the team also congratulated upon winning the World's Series.

There were no trades of importance completed during the day, and but one sale of a player officially reported. This sent Walter L. Holke, first baseman of the Boston Braves, to the Philadelphia Nationals in a cash deal.

The League will convene again today, and after completing the unfinished business, which may include a discussion of th draft which was not touched upon yesterday, will adjourn to meet in joint conference with the American League on Thursday.

CHANCE SIGNS WITH RED SOX

Frank Chance Will Manage Boston American League Club For 1923 Season — A Popular Choice.

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.— (Canadian Press.)—Frank Leroy Chance, former manager of the Chicago Nationals and the New York Americans ,yesterday signed a contract to manage the Boston American League Club for 1923.

Official announcement of the consummation of the deal was made by H. H. Frazee, President of the Red Sox, from his New York office. Both Frazee and Chance refused to reveal details of the financial terms involved. President Frazee, however, stated that Chance's salary would compare favorably with those of the highest paid managers in baseball.

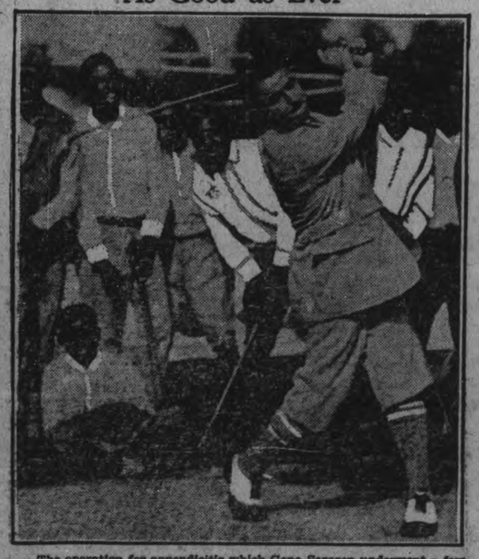
The Boston owner also said that the engagement of Chance marked the first step in the reconstruction of the Red Sox. Chance will have full authority and control in rebuilding the club and may appear in playing uniform on the coaching lines. He will not, however, engage in actual play.

Signing of Chance by the Red Sox brings back to the national game one of the most popular and dynamic personalities the game has ever known. As first baseman and "peerless leader," a decade and more ago of the famous Chicago Cubs— National League champions four times and world's champions twice — Chance established a brilliant reputation not only as a player, but as a field general and strategist.

After fifteen years with the Cubs, eight of them as manager, Chance severed his Chicago connections in 1912 with the intention of retiring to his California orange grove, but was persuaded to take over the managership of the New York Yankees under a three-year contract reputed to have called for an annual figure of $40,000. He piloted the team to seventh place in 1913, but in 1914, when the Yankees finished sixth, he resigned a month before the close of the season because of disagreement with owners over team policies and dissatisfaction with the conduct of sevreal star players.

Chance's interest in the national game, however, has not waned since he left its active ranks and reports have been current at various times thaat he intended a "come back," as a major league manager.

As Good as Ever



The operation for appendicitis which Gene Sarazen underwent a few weeks ago, didn't cramp the golf style of the world's champion. This is the first picture of Sarazen since his operation and showing him on the Miami (Fla.) links, making his first drive since his illness.

WRESTLER-BOXER INTERESTING BOUT

Zbyszko Says He Could Trim Dempsey With Ease in a Mixed Match.

By BILLY EVANS.

Is the champion fighter a more formidable opponent than a champion wrestler?

Jack Dempsey is the heavyweight champion of the string; Strangler Lewis holds the heavyweight wrestling honors.

What chance would Dempsey have against Lewis in a mixed match? Would the sleep-producing wallop packed by Dempsey prove more effective than the bone-breaking holds of Lewis?

This question has been revived by the recent wire report that Dempsey was not adverse to meeting Lewis in a mixed match.

A year ago, when Stanislaus Zbyszko was the champion, I raised the argument as to the superiority of the wrestler and boxer if two champions of the same class met in a mixed bout.

I put the question to Dempsey and Jack's answer was most emphatic.

Easy Picking, Says Jack.

"I'll knock out Zbyszko and a half dozen other champion wrestlers in the same ring on the same night.

"All that would be necessary for me to trim Zbyszko would be to sink a couple of punches in that bay window of his, cross a couple of right handers to the jaw, and it would be all over.

"A good wrestler hasn't a chance with an equally good fighter."

The question of a match with Dempsey and what he thought of his chances was put to Zbyszko.

"In a match with Dempsey I would immediately force him to the floor," said Zbyszko. "That would enable me to get my deadly holds working and thereby render Dempsey's best punches far less effective.

Holds Better Than Punch.

"Dempsey is a great fighter, but he knows nothing of wrestling. It is an easy matter to force an inexperienced wrestler to the floor. Once I get Dempsey on the amt the contest would soon be over.

"The fighter will always be at the mercy of the wrestler in a mixed match."

The proposed match aroused so much comment, I asked a score of the leading sport writers for their opinions. Only one conceded Zbyszko the margin.

Later, the idea was tried out in a half dozen matches between fighters and wrestlers possessing merely local reputations. In every case the wrestler was victorious.

A match between Dempsey and Lewis would settle no momentous question, but it would prove mighty interesting while it lasted, regardless of who was the victor.

HOWLEY AFTER FOUR BIG LEAGUE PLAYERS

Manager Dan Howley is reported to be dickering in New York for four major league players, a pitcher, a catcher, and two outfielders, for the Toronto team, one from the National League and three from the American. No inkling as to the indentity of the players is given, but the deals are expected to be put through today. It is also stated that Philadelphia intends to keep Frank O'Rourke.

BASKETBALL GAMES.

Two basketball games are on the schedule for this evening at the Y.M.C.A. courts. The first game will start at 8 o'clock when the Belmont Club five will stack up against the Excelsiors. They will be followed at 9 o'clock by a game between the Rotary Club and the Young Men's Club. Both these games should be good ones.

FUNNY THINGS IN BASEBALL RECORDS

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 13 (United Press)—Only four pitchers in the National League pitched better ball last season than Senor Adolfo Luque, the Cuban hurler of the Cincinnati Reds. At the same time, only three pitchers pitched worse ball.

Sounds rather contradictory, but it remains a fact under the system of giving the pitchers a double rating.

In average runs allowed per game, which is perhaps the real way to judge ability, Luque was fifth with an average of only 3.31 runs a game.

But the Senor won only 13 games and lost 23, which from the old games won and lost system, made him twenty-third on the list with an average of .361.

Hard luck, it might be called for the senor. He is one of several pitchers who have never taken the spotlight because no teams seem able to get runs for them.

Johnny Couch is a good example of the contrary. Couch is a young teammate of Luque's. He won sixteen out of twenty-five games and finished third on the list. But he was nineteenth on the list in allowing runs.

* * * * * * *

Ted Kid Lewis, European middleweight champion, successfully defended his title recently by winning a twenty-round decision from Roland Todd.

"Except for Lewis' holding and carelessness once or twice with his head, it was a clean, hard-fought contest," one of the London papers said in discussing the bout. "The result was a sore disappointment to Todd, but it might easily have gone the other way if Todd knew how to make more use of himself."

It would seem that it was a clean fight, but dirty, and that Todd would be a good fighter, if he knew how to fight.

* * * * * * *

Faint echoes are still heard of those brave words that floated up from the southern training camps last spring:

"Arm? Boy, you never saw such an arm! Thirty games for me next year, thirty games!"

Eppa Rixey, the Cincinnati Red hurler, was the only National League pitcher to win twenty-five games and Lefty Cooper, of the Pirates and Dutch Reuther, of the Robins, were the only others to get above the twenty mark.

* * * * * * *

Jack Britton had a lot of rosy things said about him for sticking in the ring twenty years and holding the welterweight title until he was thirty-nine (officially).

* * * * * * *

If any more of those kind words are available they should be cast in the direction of Babe Adams, the great old man of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Babe went through his eighteenth season in baseball in 1921 at the age of forty-one and he won eight out of nineteen games and he allowed only an average of 3.579 runs a game.

* * * * * * *

Adams has taken good care of himself and he is well preserved he looks no older than some of the sparsely covered heads that appear on the big college programs as—"Age 20."

* * * * * * *

Bill Stevenson, formers Princeton star and former quarter-mile champion is now a student at Oxford and he is going just as big as he was in his countr. In the recent relay events at Oxford, Stevenson's work was the big feature of the victories on Balliol, which finished first in the two-mile, first in the mile and second in the half-mile relays.

CROP REPORTS

The drying up of wells is causing much labor and anxiety to many farmers. In some cases water has to be brought a considerable distance to the barns, or else some of the liv estock have to be led to the water. That trouble is more than local is shown by the fact that this week alone complaints on this score have come from the representatives of Kent, Elgin, Peel, Lennox and Addington, Peterboro an Hastings.

Last week buyers in Elgin were offering as low as from $7 to $8 a ton for hay in the barn.

Peel states: "Toronto and outside seed buyers are still operating in the alfalfa districts. Shipments are being made weekly. Prices from $11 to $13 a bushel are paid."

North Simcoe says: "Alsike seed is proving an extra good yield, but prices are low averaging about $4.50 per bushel with highest price about $5.50. Red clover is scarce and not yielding very well; $10 per bushel has been paid for some extra good seed as it came from the thresher."

Lanark says: "Owing to the open fall many farmers left their live stock out until quite late with the result that they went back greatly in condition, and they are not now showing as good as they should, considering the amount of feed in the country."

Kent reports: "Steers going in to winter quarters are in good condition and a larger number than usual are being fed in this county. The price being paid for feeders runs as high as 6c per lb. Quite a number have been purchased at $5.75 per cwt. Price of hogs on local market $9.50 per cwt. The hogs on the local market this week was smaller than usual."

Frontenac says: "Live stock marketing is rather quiet. More beef and pork is being sold on the market by the quarter. Dressed beef is selling from 7 to 9c. Dressed pork from 17 to 20c. Hogs are selling around $12 a cwt live weight."

Lennox and Addington says: "Farmers are taking keen interest in the securing of pure bred Yorkshire pigs of the proper bacon type. Many have been making inquiries regarding the grading policy as outlined by the Live Stock Branch. Pure-bred Yorkshire sows, five months of age, are selling at $18 each.

Dry cows as canners are selling at from $1.75 to $2 a cwt in Glengarry.

Milk values are improving in Elgin. The condensory rate now is $2.10 a cwt, for 3.5 per cent milk.

Cheese factories are all closed in Frontenac and that county states the condensery at Sydenham is still running, but the supply of milk is only about an eighth of the regular summer supply. The demand is good for both milk and butter.

Peterboro and Hastings also report cheese factories as closed for regular work.

Good heavy horses are bringing from $175 to $200 each in Lennox and Addington.

Leeds says: "At the turkey fair at Athens last Friday, prices per lb. for turkeys averaged around 43c to 44c; geese 25c; poultry 25 to 26c. There was a larger quantity of chickens than usual as compared with turkeys.

South Simcoe reports a number of applicants from farmers for fully experienced hands on a yearly basis.

RADIO NEWS

Regular international communication among amateurs is looked upon as so near at hand that already plans are benig discussed for a unified system of call signals throughout the world.

The present method of communicating among amateurs is efficient only as it is confined to the country. But let an amateur of one land try to call one of another country, and there s confusion.

This is because of the similarity in divisional call numbers allotted to the districts of each country. For example, the United States has nine radio districts. Each amateur is alloted a call letter which he has to use in communication with the number of his district. 2XAK, for instance, is amateur XAK in district 2. 8BK is BK in district 8. If the first wants to call the other he signs 8BK de 2XAK.

But amateurs in England also have the number 2 before their call letters. And those in France have number 8 preceding their individual call letters.

Confusing Calls.

So that with transatlantic communication established, if the signal 8BK de 2XAK is flashed, four possible calls might be meant. District 2 in America might be calling France, England might be calling district 8 in America, or district 2 in America might be calling district 8 in the same country.

This possibility of confusion in amateur calls has aroused the American Radio Relay League—the American amateur organization —to seek an international system of amateur calls. French amateurs also are considering his plan and they have appointed a commission to devise some system by which no confusion in international calls could be possible.

Several plans have been suggested but none has been approved. Some of these are objectional because of the large amount of work and expense they would entail ir. the process of changing the amateur calls already allotted. Others could not be found elastic enough to include future possibilites in radio calls.

IF KIDNEYS BOTHER TRY DOSE OF SALTS

Flush the Kidneys at Once When Back Aches or Bladder Bothers.

No man or woman who eats lots of meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much meat may form uric acid, which clogs the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood; then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to help neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications.

TURKS REFUSE ASSIGN A HOME FOR ARMENIANS

Conference at Lausanne Runs Into a Snag—Ignore Minorities.

LAUSANNE, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Turkey refused at today's session of Near East Conference to assign any special part of Turkey as National home for Armenians. Ismet Pasha declared it would mean new attempt to dismember Turkey. He was irreconcilable on other points concerning treatment of minorities in Turkey.

Besides declaring Turkey would not set aside an inch of Turkish soil for an Armenian National home he said, she would not accept regulation of rights of minorities by any international commission. Lord Curzon warned Ismet there would be no sympathy in world for Turkey, if conference failed on question of treatment of minorities.

STREET RAILWAY FARE

Mayor Maguire of Toronto, Sees No Reason For Higher Rate.

TORONTO, Dec. 13.—(Canadian Press).—Mayor Maguire has proposed to make another fight to secure the five-cent fare on the Toronto street railway system.

"It is my purpose," said the Mayor last night, "to call upon the Toronto Transportation Commission to report at once as to the practical possibility of a five-cent fare in Toronto. I feel satisfied that there is no good sane reason why citizens should be called upon to pay more."

BROADENING OUT AT THE U.F.O. MEETING

J. J. Morrison Threw Down the Gauntlet in His Initial Speech at Annual Meeting.

TORONTO, December 13. Canadian Press. — "Broadening out" issue came to the forefront at the outset of the annual meeting of th United Farmers of Ontario here this morning. Secretary J. J. Morrison threw down the gauntlet in an initial speech in connection with his annual report. Mr. Morrison called for a frank discussion and a definite decision on the matter.

Immediately following Mr. Morrison's pronouncement a delegate from Midlesex county rose and declared that the time had come to make a decision in regard to the "broadening out." The United Farmers of Ontario he said must have one leader, and one only.

"In welcoming the delegates, President R. W. E. Burnaby who it is expected will retire from office owing to pressure of private business, stressed the necessity for unity in organization; some people, he said, were hoping to see the present convention split the Farmers' Movement in Ontario. There should be a spirit of compromise.

Fraternal greetings were brought to the convention by a number of delegates from Quebec, the Maritime and Western provinces.

A WOMAN TRAVELLER WILL LECTURE HERE

That times have changed is illustrated by the fact that it is now possible for young women to set out alone and independent, and travel around the world. Such a young woman, Miss Lucia Owen, representing the British and Foreign Bible Society, will be in Peterborough next Thursday, and will give an address in Reid street hall, Trinity Methodist church, in connection with which she will use lantern slides showing places of interest in the world which she has visited, including Palestine, where so many interesting things are now taking place. Miss Owen is meeting her own expenses on this world's trip, but is taking advantage of her opportunities to gain information for the British and Foreign Bible Society.

To-night the winners of last week's contests clash in the second fixture. The Rotarians will be strengthened by the presence of DeGraw who was not available a week ago.

The Kiwanians have followed their motto "We Build" and have strengthened their team considerably and promise to give Belmonts plenty of action. The city's best basket ball talent is represented on the various teams. There promises to be not a slow minute from start to finish. The first games commences at 8 p.m.

JURORS ANNOY JUDGE; MISSED USUAL VISITS

Some Stayed at Home, One Went to U. F. O. Convention—Seven Returned to Court.

GOOD WISHES

The defective accoustics of the county court room were once more condemned by a Grand Jury in a censuring paragraph in their presentment to Judge Huycke this morning. His Honour heartily endorsed the Jury's recommendation and said it would be a pleasure to forward it to the County Council although similar previous suggestions had not yet produced the desired improvements.

When the grand jury returned to the court after visiting the public institutions, only seven of them were present. Of the others Mr. Morley Smithson of Otonabee had gone to the U.F.O. convention in Toronto, and Ald. Turner and Mr. W. B. Warne of Peterboro were at their homes, and it was reported had not accompanied the faithful seven in their rounds.

"They had no business to go off like that neglecting the duty they had sworn to carry out," said Judge Huycke, who was obviously displeased. He ordered the Sheriff not to pay the absentees, but it was learned this morning that they had already been paid for the day by the County Treasurer.

It was also stated that none of the jurors had absented themselves until the two criminal cases had been disposed of. His honor said that he could fine Mr. Smithson up to $1000. He requested the seven jurors to return in the morning, and especially thanked the foreman, Mr. John Renwick of Otonabee and his six dutiful companions for the performance of their duties.

This morning His Honor referred to the incident, and said that it was the first time in his experience that members of a Grand Jury had broken up in that manner. He said that some judges would have been more severe and would probably have imposed some punishment, but he hoped that the situation would not occur again. His Honour noted that Mr. Smithson's chair was still empty. He dismissed the Jury with wishes for a Happy Christmas.

The report presented by Mr. Renwick follows:

"We heartily concur with your Honour when referring to the absence of crime and add our congratulations to the city and county.

"We would respectfully draw the attention of the County Property Committee of the County Council to the accoustics of the court room. We have been apprised that the Council have the matter under consideration at the present time and we feel assured that they will attend to this matter and complete the most up-to-date and convenient court house in Central Ontario, which is a credit to all concerned.

"The jail, hospitals and other institutions are to all appearances conducted in a most efficient manner.

"We would urge the Board of Management of the County House of Refuge to hasten the improvements to the heating system that they have now under way.

"In conclusion we thank your Honor for your courtesy to the Grand Jury and recognize the words of advice given and trust you may long be spared to occupy the exalted position you so creditably fill."

Cutting the bars of her cell, she scaled the roof of the jail as shown by the dotted line, risking an 80-foot fall in going up over the cornice, then climbed down a drain pipe to an adjoining building ,thence through a roof door to the street and the wafting auto of a confederate. COMMITTED SUICIDE IN THE COUNTY JAIL

Welland Man Was Held on a Charge of Murder—Twisted the Bedclothes into a Rope—Two Others in the Cell the Same Time.

WELLAND, Ont., Dec. 14.—(Special.)— Charles Beckett, the man who was charged with murdering the late Dwight Dilts, of Pelham Centre, on November 23, committed suicide by hanging himself at the county court jail some time before five o'clock this morning.

The body of the prisoner was found by Guard Abel Miller around five o'clock. A preliminary inquest was held at 10 o'clock this morning, but the press was excluded. It was held in camera. No explanation of this was given.

Beckett used his bed clothes to bring about his death. He evidently twisted these into a rope and fastened them to the grating of the cell door. It is thought he used the [illegible] of his body from the floor of the cell to bring about strangulation. A strange feature of the tragedy is that there were two other prisoners with him who, from all accounts, slept through the whole performance. Beckett must have gone about his grim job with little noise and much determination. The jail people telephoned to Dr. J. H. Howell at 5.3 to have a look at the dead man, but it was too late to do anything as life was extinct.

The inquest has been adjourned until to-morrow evening. A jury empanelled viewed the body this morning accompanied by Chief Grabb and Provincial Police Officer Gurnett, who captured Beckett after the murder.

Beckett was described as a model prisoner and also application had been made to the Attorney General for an examination as to his sanity. He acted very rationally at the jail.

He is said to have slept soundly and to have been almost eager to obey the command of the jail authorities.

Early this morning, Mrs. Beckett and son were notified of the suicide and were quite overcome.

KIWANIS CLUB LADIES' NIGHT LAST EVENING

Interesting Musical Programme Provided by Entertainment Committee-Music From N.Y.

A PRESENTATION

Last evening the Peterboro Kiwanis Club entertained the ladies to a musical radio evening at the Empress Hotel. With President Frank Whitehouse in the chair there were no idle moments. Frivolous married men who delight to indulge in boyish pranks in the presence of their wives were suppressed by numerous and heavy fines. Some of the chief offenders were Kiwanians Joe Worth, Lloyd Hamilton and Alex. Dick. The boosters were Kiwanians Harry Boyle, Jack Dewart and Charlie Cummer. The result was that many of the ladies received a number of acceptable prizes.

The program opened with a 'cello selection by Mr. M. B. Chenhall, Jr., and was followed with a solo and encore each from Miss Lilian Eastwood, Mr. J. Graham, and Mr. John Ball; a trio by Miss Lilian Eastwood, Mr. J. Graham and Mr. John Ball was much appreciated. Kiwanians Alex. Dick and Jack Jary gave a selection from the recent Kiwanis Minstrel Show that brought down the house, and, incidentally, a couple of heavy fines. Kiwanian Leslie Unitt was the accompanist.

A feature of the evening was the presentation of a Kiwanis membership to Mr. Martin Chenhall, Sr., in appreciation of his valuable services in the organization and direction of the Kiwanis Minstrel Show, which proved to be such a big success. Dr. G. L. Macdougall made the address and presentation and referred to some of the heavy work involved in the production of the show. Reference was also made to the good work of Kiwanians Charlie Cummer, Alex. Dick, Bill Barrie, J. A. McKone and George Henderson. The latter was described as the mainspring of the Kiwanis organization. George denied the allegation and reminded the members that the election of officers would take place on Tuesday next.

Mr. Martin Chenhall in reply to the presentation, declared that he had enjoyed the Kiwanian Association and attributed the success of the show to the Kiwanis spirit which carried them through to such a successful issue.

An interesting address on Music and its origin was read by Mr. J. M. Greene, of the Greene Music Company. Mr. Greene referred to the early history of music, some of the well known composers, a few well-known compositions, and concluded with the presentation of statistics dealing with the production and importation of musical instruments in the Dominion of Canada.

The concluding feature of the program was a radio concert provided by Mr. H. A. Cranfield and Mr. A. B. Gates. The latter explained that the large number of broadcasting stations operating last evening was in a measure responsible for the failure of the set to live up to its advance notices. In spite of this handicap the Kiwanians and their guests heard a number of enjoyable musical selections from New York.

GIFT FROM BIBLE CLASS TO TEACHER

Mrs. Welbourn Gets Present of Cut Glass Fruit Dish .

The Cheerful Workers Bible Class of St. James Methodist Sunday School met at the home of Mrs. Vannest, Princess street, Tuesday evening, when a most enjoyable time was spent. The election of officers for the coming year took place and resulted as follows: Teacher, Mrs. Welbourn; president, Mrs. Davis; vice president, Mrs. Wager; secretary treasurer, Mrs. C. Hill.

Several committees were appointed giving each member an opportunity to engage in good work. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a cut glass fruit dish to the teacher, Mrs. Welbourn.

The following address was read by Mrs. Hill and the presentation made by Mrs. Vannest.

"Dear Mrs. Welbourn,—

"The members of your Bible Class feel that they could not let this season of the year pass, without in some way showing how much they appreciated your work as teacher.

"The past year has been a strenous one and we know that you have made many sacrifices for us.

"As a slight token of our appreciation we ask you to accept this Fruit Dish ,hoping you may be spared many years to use it, and we trust we may meet on many such occassions as this.

"We wish you and yours a Merry Chirstmas and a Happy New Year.

"(Signed on behalf of the class)

MR. R. R. HALL RENEWS APPEAL FOR MEETING ON POWER QUESTION

Will Give Ald. James Hamilton a Chance to Prove Charges Before a Tribunal of Ratepayers—Mr. Hall is Prepared to Hold a Meeting at His Own Expense.

In most respectable language, I requested the Mayor and City Council to call a public meeting of the ratepayers to discuss the power situation, and to invite Sir Adam Beck to be present, to show cause, why this city should not on its own account develop power from dams 4 and 5 and Burleigh Falls and make an annual saving of $50,000.00 per year to the ratepayers of this city and still have surplus power to sell at a low rate to attract new industries.

According to the report in last night's Examiner, in discussing my most respectful request, I was shocked to learn, that Ald. Hamilton, Chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee of the City Council, said:

"It's a damned shame that any person can attack an institu-"tion like the Hydro for his own damned selfish interests and "glorification."

I propose to give Ald. Hamilton, Chairman of the Manufacturer's Committee of the City Council, the opportunity to prove that charge before a meeting of the taxpayers of this city, even though it is couched in coarse and unseemly language.

I propose that a meeting of the taxpayers shall at once be called in spite of the opposition of the majority of the Manufacturer's Committee of the City Council, and in the face of its chairman's side-stepping refusal to do so. The taxpayers have a right to be heard. They are entitled to information. They are entitled to know: (a) What Sir Adam Beck has to say; (b) What Mr. Thomas Tooms, M.P.P., has to say, why the Ontario Government should block and prevent this city from developing power on its own account; (c) What Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., has to say, why the Dominion Government should stand by and see the valuable water powers on the Otonabee River and its Lakes run to waste when they could be developed to the advantage of this city.

It would be more creditable to the Mayor and City Council, if such a meeting were called by them. To that end I would most urgently request that all citizens, male and female, of this city, who are interested in this question, would sign the REQUEST, immediately below this article, cut it out and send it at once to my office, or in care of The Examiner if it is more convenient, and it will be immediately presented to the Mayor for immediate action, and in case he refuses to call such meeting, I shall, at my own personal expense, undertake to call the meeting.

If the ratepayers sign the REQUEST for the meeting in Large numbers and show that they have yet some interest in the growth and progress of this city, I will undertake, that the largest speaking accommodation possible shall be furnished. The More REQUESTS, the greater will be the seating accommodation.

The permitting of the water powers to run to waste, means to this city, the loss of the annual interest on over $1,000,000.00. It means that many workingmen are going idle when they could be profitably employed in developing these works, in building electrical machinery, in building hydraulic machinery, in lessening the "COST" of power and in attracting industries to give work.

Please sign the REQUEST below and hand in or mail to my office, or addressed to me in care of The Examiner, and if the ratepayers are in earnest, there will be "a shaking of dry bones" in the City Council, the Peterborough Utilities Commission and in the Hydro Electric Power Commission and elsewhere if necessary.

R. R. HALL.

Dec. 14th, 1922.

Sign, cut out and mail or deliver to my office at once or to The Examiner Office if more convenient:

His Worship Mayor Taylor,—You are respectfully requested to call at once a meeting of the ratepayers of this city to discuss the development of our water powers on the Otonabee River and its Lakes and to invite Sir Adam Beck or his representative, and Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., Mr. Thomas Tooms, M.P.P., and others, to show cause why it should not be done and others to show cause WHY IT SHOULD BE DONE.

A TALK OF PEACE BETWEEN FACTIONS

Considerable Section of Irish Republicans Ready to Negotiate For Peace.

DUBLIN, Dec .14. — (Canadian Press.)—Talk of peace between Republicans and Free Staters in Ireland is increasingly heard as Christmas approaches. Action taken by the new Senate of Free State Tuesday in appointing commission to work for peace has developed some indications that a considerable section of Republicans is willing to negotiate for peace and that the rank and file is moving in that direction. Summoning of all Sein Fein clubs in Dublin city and county to debate peace on Sunday is pointed out as significant as although clubs are composed of treaty supporters and Republicans it was latter who sent out the notices for the meeting.

Chief difficulty of gathering will likely centre on unwillingness of irregulars to surrender their arms. It is the firm decision of the government that no armed force other than the National organization will be permitted to exist.

TRUTH MISSION MEETING.

The regular weekly cottage prayer meeting of Truth Mission will be held on Friday evening at the home of Rev. David and Mrs. McKee, 262 McDonnel Street.

PRODUCE PEAT TO SELL AT A PROFIT

TORONTO, Dec .14.—(Canadian Press.)—Seven years' investigation of possibility of developing Ontario peat deposits has convinced the peat committee appointed by Ontario and Provincial Governments in 1915 that fuel from provincial bogs can be manufactured in commercial quantities at a cost which will enable it to be sold in competition with anthracite. In an internal report the committee outlines results of extensive experiments carried out near Alfred, Ont., and he comments that governments undertake construction and operation of perfected peat producing plant. It is the opinion of committee that price of peat delivered to consumer should be in neighborhood of $10.

BOUQUET OF FLOWERS GREETS HYDRO MOGUL

ST. CATHARINES, Dec. 14. — (Canadian Press.) — Bouquets of flowers and salvos of applause greeted Sir Adam Beck when he appeared here last night at the opening of the campaign for the second submission of by-law for authorization of construction of Port Credit-St. Catharines radial line.

"We want no nationalization of local affairs," declared Sir Adam. "There has been altogether too much interference from Provincial and we want none of it in Ottawa."

SOLLY SIEGEL'S STORY OF A WHISKEY DEAL TOLD IN COURT

Said He Paid Reginald Winch $190 for 42 Bottles of Whiskey that Were Found to Contain Only Water When Opened Later.

HIS MONEY BELT

The capaciousness of Solly Siegel's money belt, produced on Wednesday afternoon as an exhibit in the trial of Reginald Winch for alleged fraud might have been accepted as mute evidence of the wads of money used by bootleggers in plying their furtive trade. It was a home-made waistband about six inches wide, and was worn between his outer shirt and his B.V.D.'s. In its general appearance of roominess it might have served as a wallet for Soviet rubles or German marks.

It was supposed to have a peculiar significance in this case for the corners of one of its pockets in which bills were tucked away were sewed across, and said to have the effect of turning up the corners of bills thereby giving them a certain identification mark. And on the witness stand Siegel indicated four bills with corners creases which the police found on Reginald Winch after he was arrested on the night of September 7th last, charged with having sold Siegel forty-two bottles of whiskey which, on being opened shortly afterward, were found to contain only water. Siegel testified that these bills were part of the $190 he paid Winch that afternoon, but he would not positively swear to a number of other bills that were also produced from the police package.

Mr. J. A. O'Brien, representing the accused, endeavoured to adduce an admission that upturned corners were common marks on bills carried in men's pockets, but the witness clung to his opinion that at least four of the bills produced in court still bore the cramping effect of the home made canvas pouch.

Admitted Bootlegging

Siegel acknowledged that he had been in the bootlegging game for a year and a half prior to last September. He hedged from Mr. O'Brien's first pointed questions and asked what had his former traffic to do with this case, but admitted with a half apologetic, half defensive smile that he intended to sell the forty-two bottles if they had been whiskey.

After he discovered that one or two bottles contained water he left his car with its cargo unguarded on the street in front of his home for two hours while he was trying to get in touch with Winch and later the police.

Mr. O'Brien stressed this fact, and also Siegel's statement that Winch handed the $190 to his "partner" Pete Jeffries to count and that Siegel last saw the money in Jeffries' possession.

Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution under the specific

Debt of Country Is Still Growing

BRANDON, Man., Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press).—The only remedy for existing troubles of this country was increased population declared Robert Fork, M.P. leader of the Progressive Party at the Brandon Builders Exchange banquet here last night.

Stating that debts of Canada were growing by millions of dollars year by year he did not hold out hopes for reduction of taxation for many years to come.

CANNOT THINK OF TWO THINGS AT SAME TIME

Every Thought Entirely Filling the Mind Become True and Transforms Into Action.

AUTO-SUGGESTION

By DR. EMILE COUE.

The principle of the method of teaching autosuggestion to patients, may be summed up in these few words:

It is impossible to think of two things at once, that is to say that two ideas may be in juxtaposition but they cannot be superimposed in our mind.

Every thought entirely filling our mind becomes true for us and tends to transform itself into action.

Thus if you can make a sick person think that her trouble is dihappearing, it will disappear; if you succeed in making a kleptomaniac think that he will not steal any more, he will cease to steal.

This training ,which perhaps seems to you an impossibility, is nevertheless, the simplest thing in the world .

It is enough, by a series of appropriate and graduated experiments, to teach the subject, as it were, the A.B.C. of conscious thought.

Here is the series; by following it to the letter one can be absolutely sure of obtaining a good result, except with the two categories of persons mentioned before; those who, from mental incapacity, cannot understand it, and those who will not.

The experiments following are those of Sage of Rochester.

First Experiment.

Preparatory—Ask the subject to stand upright, with the body as stiff as an iron bar, the feet close together from toe to heel, while keeping the ankles flexible as if they were hinges. Tell him to make himself like a plank with hinges at its base, which is balanced on the ground. Make him notice that if one pushes the plank slightly either way it falls as a mass without any resistance, in the direction in which it is pushed.

Tell him that you are going to pull him back by the shoulders and that he must let himself all in your arms without the slightest resistance, turning on his ankles as on hinges, that is to say keeping the feet fixed on the ground.

Then pull back the shoulders and if the experiment does not succeed, repeat it until it does, or nearly so.

Second Experiment.

Begin by explaining to the subject that, in order to demonstrate the action of the imagination upon us, you are going to ask him in a moment to think: "I am falling backwards . . ." Tell him that he must not reflect or wonder if he is going to fall or not; must not think that if he falls he may hurt himself; must not fall back purposely to please you, but that if he really feels something impelling him to fall backwards, he must not resist but obey the impulse.

Then ask your subject to raise the head high and to shut his eyes, and place your right fist on the back of his neck, and your left hand on his forehead, and say to him: "Now think; I am falling backwards, I am falling backwards, etc., etc....." and indeed, "You are falling backwards, You....are.... fall....ing.... backwards, etc."

"At the same time slide the left hand lightly backwards to the left temple, above the ear, and remove,

CONCLUDE WINCH CASE NOON TODAY

Jury "Guaranteed to Have Verdict by One O'clock"

The Winch case was given at noon to-day to the jury that was trying it, and at a quarter to one o'clock, when adjournment of the Court was proposed and Judge Huycke enquired through Inspector Reid whether the jury would soon be through or wished that lunch be brought to them, the answer came back that they guaranteed to reach a decision by one o'clock.

His Honor preferred to give them the more leisurely course in order that they might have all the time they required, and instructed the Sheriff to have dinner brought to the Court-House.

J. A. O'Brien, counsel for Reginald Winch, who was indicted for obtaining $190 under false pretences from Solomon Siegel for 42 bottles of whiskey which, when opened later, contained only water, called only one witness for the defence. A substitute maid at the Winch home while the regular maid was on her holidays during the first two weeks of September, swore that she was preserving fruit on September 7, the day of the alleged transaction, and, going down cellar with preserves, overheard a conversation between Siegel and "Pete" Jeffries in the presence of Winch. According to her evidence, Siegel appeared to be buying the whiskey from Jeffries, who was not produced in court, and who is presumably out of town.

In his address to the jury Mr. O'Brien emphasized the fact that from 3.30 o'clock until 6 on September 7, the bottles were abandoned by Siegel, who left them in his car out on the street, and for that time there was absolutely no accounting for the bottles.

"On such evidence as that is a man to be placed in jeopardy of spending three years of his life in prison?" Mr. O'Brien argued. "Winch was arrested shortly after he was said to have received $190 from Siegel, yet the police found only $103 in his possession. Siegel says he identifies a bill by its turned up corners. I'll warrant that if you look at the money in your pockets you will find not a single bill that hasn't the corners turned down. You never saw a bill that has been in circulation that isn't marked like that. Yet Siegel, the bootlegger, says that because the corners of a bill is turned down he asks you to convict this man."

Mr. O'Brien declared that the evidence of the maid, who was an independent witness, should be carefully considered by the jury. She was there only two weeks, taking the place of the regular maid, and was not interested in the parties. She heard Jeffries bartering with Siegel for liquor, and heard Jeffries talking over the telephone. Siegel had admitted an earlier deal with Jeffries, and it was natural for him to go to Jeffries when he wanted more.

Mr. Hatton said it made no difference whether it was known to Winch alone, or to Winch and Jeffries, that afraud was perpetrated in delivering liquid in bottles to Siegel and collecting money from him. Siegel's story had not been refuted in one particular. Mr. Hatton reviewed the evidence, calling particular attention to the evidence that Winch was present with Siegel in the cellar, that Siegel said Winch opened two sample bottles, and that money found in his possession was identified by Siegel as part of that which he paid to Winch.

Defining the term false pretences, Judge Huycke said that if the jury believed Siegel's evidence they should find the prisoner guilty. Did Winch lead Siegel to believe by word or act that he was selling 3½ cases of whiskey for which he was getting at least $190?

BRITISH MONEY STILL GOING UP NEAR PAR MARK

Pound Sterling Reached Highest Price Since March, 1919, on New York Market Yesterday.

RUMORS OF LOAN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.— (Canadian Press.) — Sterling exchange went through a period of violent flunctuation in yesterday's market, touching $4.69 1-4, an incerase of 6 1-4 cents over Tuesdays' close and the highest price recorded since March, 1919,and then falling back to $4.63 7-8 in the late afternoon dealings.

Most foreign exchange dealers here frankly confessed their inability to explain the recent rise in the British rate, but in some quarters there was a belief that manipuhation by the Britisth government was responsible. It was reported, but not confirmed, that Great Britain had established a reserve fund here of between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 ostensibly to facilitate payment of interest on the British war debt and funding of the principal, and that this fund had been used to strengthen the Sterling rate as part of a a campaign to bring it back to par.

Rumors also were in circulation that a huge British loan was in the process of negotiation to finance purchases of foodstuffs and raw materials, but these, too, lacked confirmation.

Balancing of Great Britain's budget and the steady improvement in her foreign trade balance undoubtedly have been factors in the upward trend of British remittances, but the violent rise of the last fortnight leads to a rather general belief that "political and speculative influences are the main motors in their recent rise."

When Sterling started to ease off around midday, Dutch guilders bounded up to parity ,40.20 cents, for the first time since May, 1919. A new high for the year also was registered by Japanese exchange at 49.09; French, Belgian and Italian remittances improved slightly.

MINERS WORKING NEAR EDMONTON.

EDMONTON, Dec. 14.— (Canadian Press.)—Coal mines in the Edmonton and Clover Bar field report they are operating with increased forces and picketing is quiet. Many of the strikers have returned to work at Clover Bay and the Tuesday output was 1,091 tons with 384 men at work there. Black Diamond, Marcus and Humberstone mines also claim that their output is nearly at normal again. Cardiff is still a closed field, none of the mines being operated.

Some little trouble was experienced at Big Valley Tuesday where union men were told to leave the premises. After some fighting between union and non-union men, the mine was continued in operation as an open shop.

Strained Situation Arises Over Stand Taken by Turks

Ismet Pasha Announces Refusal of Turkey to Accept International Control of Minorities.

MEETING TO-DAY.

LAUSANNE, December 14.—Canadian Press.—Ismet Pasha, the head of the Turkish delegation, attempted to put himself in a better light with the League of Nations in his address before the Near East Conference yesterday in which he announced Turkey's refusal to accept international control of her minority populations.

Tuesday the Turkish leader was outspoken in his opposition to the League, or any other international body, mixing in Turkey's affairs. Yesterday he said:

"Some people thought my statements of yesterday were disrespectful to the League of Nations. Now, I want to say that I give to the League all the respect that it is entitled to."

Ismet emphasized that Christian Turks lived happily in Turkey, and asked for nothing. He also called the attention of all to the fact that Angora had signed a treaty of peace with Soviet Armenia.

Turkey, he said, was prepared to grant political amnesty to everybody but could not grant exemption from military service to any of the minorities because the military law applied to all subjects. He added: — "For the peace of the world it is my duty to say that acceptance by Turkey of any treatment more rigorous in nature than that applied to other countries is irreconcilable with the future existence of Turkey.

"I do not wish to think that this conference will make use of the minority question as a means of striking a blow at the integrity of Turkey."

United States Ambassador Child had a long conference with Ismet Pasha yesterday afternoon and urged him on humane grounds to make liberal concessions for the protection of the Armenians, Greeks and other minorities remaining in Turkey. Mr Child emphasized the good feeling could inspire in the outside world by making ample provisions for the protection of foreigners living in Turkey.

He expressed United States disapproval of the Turkish plans for the exchange of populations in Turkey and Greece, and explained to Ismet that the people of the United States were willing to help the miserable victims of the war, but were anxious to know that their funds would be used to establish the unhappy refugees of the Near East in permanent homes where they might settle down and enjoy permanent peace.

At ten o'clock this morning Ismet Pasha will appear before the subcommittees on Minorities and make a further statement regarding Turkey's counter-proposals concerning the allied scheme for protecting the minorities in Turkish territory. Lord Curzon, M. Barrere, Marquis Di Garroni, Ambassador Child and the heads of the other delegations will all attend this session, as interest is great in the forthcoming statement, and Lord Curzon has promised that the principal members would give consideration to what the Turks have to say.

While the conference is badly strained by Ismet Pasha's flat refusal to consider the allied plans for the administration of the affairs of the minorities in Turkey, there are many private conferences going on between the delegates and the indications are that some compromise plan may be worked out whereby the Turks will be accorded such a large voice in the handling of the minorities problems that they will not regard the cooperation of representatives of the great powers in this work as an infringement of Turkeys' sovereignty.

At the afternoon session of the sub-commission devoted to the study of the exchange of populations the Turks also showed a more conciliatory attitude during the discussion of the future status of the Greek colony in Constantinople. Turkey is willing for the Greeks to stay there but wants conditions of a definite nature set up.

The Turks originally insisted on sending away all the patriarchial institutions from Constantinople, but yesterday they compromised on this point and agreed that all churches and hospitals could remain, and also the schools, providing they did not adopt an anti-patriotic attitude toward Turkey. The Turks also took a conciliatory attitude on the proposed deportation of Greek political associations. These associations will be disbanded, but the members will not be dispelled.

Another compromise effected had to do with the deportation of Greeks who are not of Constantinople origin. It was decided to expel only those Greek immigrants who had settled in Constantinople since October 30, 1918. Furthermore, an accord in principle was reached that individuals would be indemnified for losses suffered by change of residence whether they were Greks or Turks.

The conclusion drawn from the meting was that the Greeks actually forced to leave Constantinople will be few in number.

Fire Fighter Was Instantly Killed

LAKE MEGANTIC, Que., Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press.) —Mr. Charest, a well known local resident, was instantly killed while aiding the fire fighters to check the flames that destroyed the Church of England parsonage here late Tuesday. While at work with several other men handling a hose at the fire, Mr. Charest was buried under a mass of bricks when the parsonage chimney fell.

A number of other men had narrow escapes when the chimney fell. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Plummer, who occupied the parsonage, were away at the time of the fire, the former in Quebec and the latter in Montreal.

WHITE LIGHT FROM OIL LAMPS NOW

Government Tests Prove New Light Beats Electric—Sensational Invention.

A new lamp has recently been invented which burns common kerosene oils and produces a soft, white light said to be even better than electric or gas. Tests by the Government and leading Universities prove this new light is superior to ten ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise, is simple and economical, requires no pumping up and has been approved by the Underwriters for insurance.

The inventor F. S. Johnson, 246 Craig St., W, Montreal, is offering to send one of these new lamps on ten days' free trial, or even give one to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for particulars. Also ask him to explain his agency proposition.

WESLEYANS FAVOR AN ANGLICAN UNION

Sir Robert William Perks Says Movement of the Methodists is Toward a Union.

LONDON, December 14 (Canadian Press). — Sir Robert William Perks, who is almost as well known in Canada as in this country as a leader in Methodism, and was a member of the firm of Macarthur, Perks & Co., of Ottawa and New York, which constructed docks at Havana and railways for the Southern Pacific Company in Oregon, U.S., after having spent a good deal of time in various parts of England studying the progress of the proposals for the re-union of Methodism in this country, states that the movement for re-union is steadily gaining.

Among the circuits which have already considered the question, there is a majority of six to one in favour of the step.

A united Methodism, Sir Robert says, would create a Church here of 900,000 members of 15,000 churches. He admits that a section of Wesleyan Methodism favours union with the Anglican Church, but those behind the Methodist Union movement hold that "those who are nearest together should unite first," and if the Wesleyans, as a body, were moving toward the Church of England, it should be a movement of the whole Methodist Union.

ESCAPED JAIL, HE KISSED REPORTER.

WINDSOR, Ont., Dec .14.—(Canadian Press.)—In an attempt to kiss one of Magistrate Gundy's hands, out of gratitude for not sentencing him to jail for being drunk, in police court yesterday, John Kuluski, Sandwich, fell and bumped his head against the magistrate's desk and was led from the court room by a policeman. Kuluski had pleaded guilty to being drunk and was given a chance to reform. On the way out he grasped the hand of the court reporter and administered a loud kiss, much to the embarrassment of that official.

PARLIAMENT WILL PROBABLY BE OPEN EARLY IN FEBRUARY

Premier King Says the Announcement Will Be Made Early in the New Year.

30 DAYS' NOTICE

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.— (Canadian Press.)—The opening of Parliament, which it was expected would take place during the latter part of January, will, in all probability, be delayed until early in Februray. Premier King attaed last evening that there would be no announcement regarding the opening date until early in the new year, after the return of Hon. W .S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, from England. He pointed out that owing to various causes, Mr. Fielding had been delayed and even now the government was not sure of the exact date on which he would sail for Canada. It is understood, however, that Mr. Fielding will probably sail for home toward the end of the month, As it is customary to give thirty days' notice of the date for opening parliament, and as there will be no announcement in regard to the matter until early in January, indications now are that the opening date will be in the first half of February.

Asked with regard to the new commercial treaty which has been concluded between Canada and France, Mr. King said that its terms would probably not be made public until parliament meets. The government, he said, preferred to lay the treaty before parliament where there could be a thorough discussion of its terms and where questions in regard to them could be asked and answered, to announcing them before the opening.

TELEGRAM SHOWER DID NOT MATERIALIZE

OTTAWA, Dec. 14.— (Canadian Press.)—The "shower" of telegrams which, it was announced, would flood the Prime Minister's office to the number of 30,000 has so far failed to materialize .Last evening, the number of telegrams protesting against the enforcement of the new stamp receipt tax received was said to be less than 550. As some of the messages are signed by a large number of merchants and others, bearing the signature of Boards of Trade, represent all the merchants in the locality, the number received does not indicate the number of those protesting against the tax. The telegraph companies have been notified that no "collect" messages protesting against the tax, will be accepted at the Prime Ministers' office.

LABOR QUESTIONS OCCUPY ATTENTION OF BRITISH HOUSE

Ramsey MacDonald Demands an Inquiry Into the Position of Miners.

PREMIER REPLIES.

LONDON, Dec. 14.— (Canadian Press.)— Labor questions continue to engross the House of Commons and the members were engaged during the whole evening in discussing J. Ramsay MacDonald's demand for an inquiry into the position of the miners, whose sorry plight met with sympathy from both sides of the House; therefore the matter was amicably debated.

Mr. MacDonald, dilating on the serious crisis in the coal trade, said the miners were not asking for a subsidy, but an inquiry.

Premier Bonar Law, in a reply which was not interrupted by the Laborites, declared he was unable to grant an inquiry, which he feared would perhaps raise false expectations and would be useless, unless it was thought desirable to raise the question of nationalization.

All were agreed on the deplorable

THE QUESTION OF PRICE FIXING.

The wisdom of fixing a price for anthracite coal is being questioned in Lindsay where at the request of the Council Fuel Controller Ellis recently named $16.50 as the maximum price for a ton of hard coal.

As a result a serious shortage is developing and it is claimed that the situation is acute.

Dealers declare that they cannot secure sufficient coal from the line companies to supply Lindsay's needs and it would be impossible to obtain supplies from the independents and sell it at the price fixed without losing money.

The Peterboro council decided some months ago not to attempt a price-fixing experiment here, and on the whole their decision has been justified.

While coal in some cases has been sold at prices considerably above the Lindsay fixed price there has been a fairly good supply of fuel available.

It is simply a question of whether it is better to fix a price and run the risk of shortage or to let the price take care of itself and give the dealers a chance to secure coal wherever it may be obtainable.

When the thermometer is dropping and the winter wind is chill the majority of citizens would undoubtedly vote for the plentiful supply as opposed to a lower price and an inadequate supply.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION.

The attention of the city's public school teachers is directed to the article published elsewhere in today's issue on the subject of accident prevention instruction to school children.

Modern conditions have made the streets no longer safe as playgrounds, and the increasing number of accidents makes it necessary that the children should receive frequent warning of the dangers that are likely to be encountered and be instructed as to the need of being careful.

Some of this training could be done in the homes of course, but the best place for instruction on safety first lines would seem to be the public schools.

It would be decidedly in the general interest if the teachers would undertake to give advice frequently to their charges as to the simple precautions necessary to avoid accidents.

Many of the most frequently encountered types of preventable accidents are mentioned in the article referred to, and the teachers may find the list of service to them in dealing with the subject.

In some American cities daily instruction in the prevention of accidents is given. Some schools adopt the admirable practice of devoting the last five minutes of the morning and afternoon sessions to this most important matter.

In Peterborough it may not be considered necessary to deal with accident prevention so frequently as in the larger centres, but several times a week at least the pupils should be reminded of the perils that lurk in the streets and taught the principles involved in the slogan, "Stop, Look and Listen."

MR. ASQUITH'S HONOR.

The universal applause which greeted Mr. Asquith's defence in the British House against insinuations levelled at his financial honesty was but a fitting rebuke to the irresponsible demagogue who employed such a a dishonorable weapon, says the Ottawa Journal. The scoundrel who descends to innuendo to besmirch the character of opponents is too well known in politics. We have had more than our fill of the type in Canada in recent years, although signs are not waning that a long-suffering public, too easily duped at first, and easily victimised and inflamed during the stress of the war, is beginning to realize that politicians are just as honorable and just as decent as any other class, and that the demagogic purveyor of innuendo is a creature to be avoided and despised.

Come to think of it, the public life of Britain, as well as of Canada, is singularly free from stain. There have been exceptions, of course, but if one goes back over the great names of British and Canadian politics, remembers the vast sums with which they have been entrusted, the opportunities which they possessed for self-aggrandizement, and the temptations to which they were subjected, one is struck by a record of splendid and impressive integrity.

The plain truth is that, taken all in all, there is as much, if not more, honesty in the administration of public affairs as in ordinary private transactions, and ever and always the code of integrity and honor becomes more rigid and more observed.

Under the circumstances, the man who seeks to create a contrary impression, whether his fault be sheer ignorance, or whether he be motived by plain malice, commits a crime against the state, because by undermining faith in public men he strikes at the very foundations of democratic institutions.

THE FIGHT IS JOINED.

The uncertainty as to whether or not Peterborough is to have a contest for the Mayoralty at the January elections has been cleared up by the announcement that ex-Ald. J. J. Turner, defeated by a small margin by Mayor Taylor in the last election, has decided to again offer himself as a candidate for the chief magistrate's chair.

At the same time other prospective candidates, or at least other citizens whose names have been mentioned in that connection, declare that they have no intention of running for the Mayoralty.

That leaves the field open to ex-Ald. Turner and His Worship Mayor Taylor.

There are some citizens who believe that the latter should have had a second term by acclamation.

Precedent, they argue, has generally allowed a second year for the chief magistrate without a contest.

Tradition may be all right in its place ,but running a city is, or should be, a business enterprise, not subject to the dictates of precedents when they conflict with the general welfare.

The Examiner has always taken the stand, this year as in other years, that the unwritten law that permitted a citizen to be Mayor for two years without an election at the end of the first year was non-sensical.

If the citizens want their mayors to be elected for a two-year term, all well and good; let them petition the Legislature for a change in the municipal machinery that will legalize such a method.

That would be the logical way.

The other plan of making the Mayor a present of the second term was an unusual policy that had little to justify itself.

Peterborough is departing from it this year, and there should be no regrets that a silly old tradition has been smashed.

The contest promises to be an interesting one. The two candidates are well-known, and their record in the Council should be familiar to the citizens.

The electors have had twelve months in which to size up Mayor Taylor's ability as executive head of the city's affairs.

Ex-Ald. Turner has not filled the Mayor's chair, but has had previous experience in municipal activity.

The matter is in the hands of the citizens, and it is well that it has reached them before nomination day, offering the hope that the early joining of the fight will quicken interest in the annual campaign.

PARK BY-LAW.

If the by-law authorizing the purchase of Armour's Hill for park purposes is to carry at the municipal elections it will be necessary for all friends of progress and lovers of a more beautiful city to not only vote for the measure themselves but to endeavor to induce other citizens to lend their support.

Organizations such as the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club and the Ashburnham Patriotic Association who have acclaimed the project, should see to it that every available favorable vote is polled.

At first blush it seems rather absurd that it should be necessary to urge such activity on the part of advocates of the purchase.

The securing of this property by the city would be so splendid an asset that it might be thought that the citizens would be almost unanimous in endorsing the proposal.

When it is considered that if debentures are issued for the purchase of the park—although that does not seem the best way of financing the proposition—it will only cost Peterborough $218 a year for thirty years, and when the advantages offered by this site as an addition to the city's park system are also taken under review, it is difficult in understanding why the measure should be in any danger.

But it is, nevertheless.

It lies under the peril of being lost through the lethargy of those who believe in it and the activity of those who oppose it.

There is a class of ratepayers who opposes on principle every money by-law.

There are more of this type than usual at the present time, and a spending by-law like the park proposal will receive short-shift from them unless there are enough progressives to offset the opposition of the parsimonious.

The chance of securing this most desirable park site may never come again.

Surely there are enough people with vision in Peterborough to see to it that the opportunity be not lost.

AN AMERICAN OPINION.

Here is the Wall Street Journal's opinion of the Ku Klux Klan:

"There is no such sanitary agent as plain daylight. Nothing has done more to clean up rotten spots in Wall Street than publicity. An admirable influence in keeping boards of directors up to the mark is an accessible list of stockholders. Every decent club, in its annual yearbook, publishes a complete list of members. So does the Stock Exchange, the Chicago Board of Trade, the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce and such voluntary agencies as the Economic Club and the National Civic Federation.

If anybody thinks Americans have been "corrupted by English gold" the membership lists of the English-Speaking Union and the Pilgrims' Society are accessible. Those of the Clan na Gael and the various "friends" of different varieties of Irish Freedom are not similarly accessible, but they should be. Some other organizations, with purposes entirely innocent, are foolish enough not to pubish lists of members. But there is one organization whose very lifeblood is secrecy. This is the bastard Fascisti of this country, the Ku Klux Klan.

As there is no such sanitary agent as open daylight, publicity would kill it, or make it useful, which is something better than making it harmless. Its aims differ in different states—harmless, and even philanthropic, when it is soliciting subscriptions in New York. Stupid, blind and murderous, as cowardly and cruel as a lynching mob, in Louisiana. It is stated that its membership includes "members of Congress, governors, judges and others" and "a national lecturer" of the order, "the Reverend Mr. Haywood," claimed that Judge Henry A. Grady of the Superior Court, North Carolina, was the head "Klan" official in that state.

All this sort of thing is plain lawlessness. It was a factor in the Oregon election and may have been an influence of terror in other elections. Masked parades to give hundred dollar donations to churches are the merest advertising. The organization stands for the substitution of prejudice for law. There is no possibility of checking the acts of its officials, even by the members themselves. There is no accounting for the funds which are not subject to audit. There is no corporate responsibility, while the exercise of power is not morally different to the force used by a common footpad.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

In Toronto, R. J. Fleming by entering the Mayoralty race is endeavouring to prove the old theory "They never come back" a fallacy.

Hon. Mr. Motherwell's contention that too much capital is bad for farmers may be sound enough but it will be difficult to convince the farmers of that fact.

Many leading citizens have promised to secure the election of the whole City Council of Sault Ste. Marie by acclamation. It is either a good council of the people of Sault Ste. Marie are even more reluctant than the Peterboro citizens to vote.

Dentists can now issue but three quarts of liquor to their patients, a ruling that is expected to cause a noticeable falling off in the number of cases of toothache.

It is to be hoped that those merchants who are filing telegraphic protests against the new tax laws used the Canadian National telegraph, thus helping to lessen the need for taxation.

At last there is some indications that Peterboro is drawing near to its annual election day. The probability of a mayoralty contest will add interest to the event.

Mrs. F. Rinehart, Campbellville, Ont., writes:

"I had trouble with my kidneys and very frequent urination. This was followed by pains which at times were very severe. The doctor said I had inflammation of the bladder and that an operation might be necessary. To this I refused, and began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Relieved Her of Headaches

Headache seems to be habitual with many people, and some, if any, are seldom free from it, suffering continually, and wondering why they can get no relief.

In all cases of headache the treatment should be directed to the removal of the cause, and with the cause removed the headaches will vanish.

It is impossible to find a better remedy for headaches of every description than can equal B. B. B., acting as it does on every organ of the system.

Mrs. Douglas Riseborough, 280 McKenzie St., Sarnia, Ont., writes: "Having suffered from severe headaches for a considerable length of time I decided to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and found that it helped me wonderfully. It relieved the headaches, and I noticed a decided improvement in my health."

Burdock Blood Bitters is a remedy that has been on the market for the past forty-four years, so you don't experiment with some new and untried medicine. It is put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The RED HOUSE MYSTERY

by A. A. MILNE

"Cayley asked us to bring a letter along," Bill explained to Betty Calladine. "Here you are."

"You will tell him, won't you, how dreadfully sorry I am about—about what has happened? It seems so hopeless to say anything; so hopeless even to believe it. If it is true what we've heard."

Bill repeated the outline of the events of yesterday.

"Yes. . . . And Mr. Ablett hasn't been found yet?"

"No."

She shook her head in distress. "It still seems to have happened to somebody else; somebody we didn't know at all." Then, with a sudden grave smile which included both of them, "But you must come and have some tea."

"It's awfully decent of you," said Bill awkwardly, "but we—er—"

"You will, won't you?" she said to Antony.

"Thank you very much."

Mrs. Norbury was delighted to see them, as she always was to see any man in her house who came up to the necessary standard of eligibility. When her life work was completed, and summed up in those beautiful words: "A marriage has been arranged, and will shortly take place, between Angela, daughter of the late John Norbury . . ." then she would utter a grateful Nunc dimittis and depart in peace—to a better world, if Heaven insisted, but preferably to her new son-in-law's more dignified establishment.

But it was not as "eligibles" that the visitors from the Red House were received with such eagerness today, and even if her special smile for "possibles" was there, it was instinctive rather than reasoned. All that she wanted at this moment was news—news of Mark. For she was bringing it off at last; and, if the engagement columns of the "Morning Post" were preceded, as in the case of its obituary columns, by a premonitory bulletin, the announcement of yesterday would have cried triumphantly to the world, or to such part of the world as mattered: "A marriage has very nearly been arranged (by Mrs. Norbury), and will certainly take place, between Angela, only daughter of the late John Norbury, and Mark Ablett of the Red House."

The girl was often amused by her mother's ways; sometimes ashamed of them; sometimes distressed by them. The Mark Ablett affair had seemed to her particularly distressing, for Mark was so obviously in league with her mother against her. It was a pleasure to turn to Cayley, that hopeless ineligible.

But alas! Cayley had misunderstood her. She could not imagine Cayley in love—until she saw it, and tried too late, to stop it. That was four days ago. She had not seen him since, and now here was this letter. She dreaded opening it. It was a relief to feel that at least she had an excuse for not doing so while her guests were in the house.

Mrs. Norbury recognized at once that Antony was likely to be the more sympathetic listener; and when tea was over, and Bill and Angela had been dispatched to the garden, dear Mr. Gillingham found himself on the sofa beside her, listening to many things which were of even greater interest to him than she could possibly have hoped.

"It is terrible, terrible," she said. "And to suggest that dear Mr. Ablett—"

Antony made suitable noises.

"You've seen Mr. Ablett for yourself. A kinder, more warmhearted man—"

Antony explained that he had not seen Mr. Ablett.

"Of course, yes, I was forgetting. But, believe me, Mr. Gillingham, you can trust a woman's intuition in these matters."

Antony said that he was sure of this.

"Think of my feelings as a mother."

Antony was thinking of Miss Norbury's feelings as a daughter, and wondering if she guessed that her affairs were now being discussed with a stranger. Mark engaged, or about to be engaged! Had that any bearing on the events of yesterday? What, for instance, would Mrs. Nor-bury have thought of brother Robert, that family skeleton? Was this another reason for wanting brother Robert out of the way?

"THINK OF MY FEELINGS AS A MOTHER."

"I never liked him, never!"

"Never liked—?" said Antony, bewildered.

"That cousin of his—Mr. Cayley."

"How did Miss Norbury get on with him?" Antony asked cautiously.

"There was nothing in that a all," said Miss Norbury's mother emphatically. "Nothing. I would say so to anybody."

"Oh, I beg your pardon. I never meant—"

"Nothing. I can say that for dear Angela with perfect confidence. Whether he made advances—" She broke off with a shrug of her plump shoulders.

Antony waited eagerly.

"Naturally they met. Possibly he might have—I don't know. But my duty as a mother was clear, Mr. Gillingham."

Mr. Gillingham made an encouraging noise.

"I told him quite frankly that—how shall I put it?—that he was trespassing. Tactfully, of course. But frankly."

"You mean," said Antony, trying to speak calmly, "that you told him that—er—Mr. Ablett and your daughter—?"

Mrs. Norbury nodded several times.

"Exactly, Mr. Gillingham. I had my duty as a mother."

"There must have been a certain awkwardness about the next meeting," suggested Antony.

"Naturally, he has not been here since. No doubt they would have been bound to meet up at the Red House sooner or later."

"Oh, this was only quite lately?"

"Last week, Mr. Gillingham. I spoke just in time."

"Ah!" said Antony, under his breath. He had been waiting for it.

He would have liked now to have gone away, so that he might have thought over the new situation by himself. But Mrs. Norbury was still talking.

"Girls are so foolish, Mr. Gillingham," she was saying. "It is fortunate that they have mothers to guide them. It was so obvious to me from the beginning that dear Mr. Ablett was just the husband for my little girl. You never knew him?"

Antony said again that he had not seen Mr. Ablett.

"Such a gentleman. So nice-looking, in his artistic way. A regular Velasquez—I should say Van Dyck. Angela would have it that she could never marry a man with a beard. As if that mattered, when—" She broke off, and Antony finished her sentence for her.

"The Red House is certainly charming," he said.

"Charming. Quite charming."

She gave a deep sigh. Antony was about to snatch the opportunity of leaving, when Mrs. Norbury began again.

"And then there's this scapegrace brother of his. He was perfectly frank with me, Mr. Gillingham. He told me of this brother, and I told him that I was quite certain it would make no difference to my daughter's feelings for him. . . . After all, the brother was in Australia."

"When was this? Yesterday?" Antony felt that, if Mark had only mentioned it after his brother's announcement of a personal call at the Red House, this perfect frankness had a good deal of wisdom behind it.

"It couldn't have been yesterday, Mr. Gillingham. Yesterday—" she shuddered, and shook her head.

"I thought perhaps he had been down here in the morning."

"Oh, no! There is such a thing, Mr. Gillingham, as being too devoted a lover. Not in the morning, no. We both agreed that dear Angela— Oh, no. No; the day before yesterday, when he happened to drop in about tea-time."

It occurred to Antony that Mrs. Norbury had come a long way from her opening statement that Mark and Miss Norbury were practically engaged. She was now admitting that dear Angela was not to be rushed, that dear Angela had, indeed, no heart for the match at all.

"The day before yesterday. As it happened, dear Angela was out. Not that it mattered. He was driving to Middleston. He hardly had time for a cup of tea, so that even if she had been in—"

Antony nodded absently. This was something new. Why did Mark go to Middleston the day before yesterday? But, after all, why shouldn't he? A hundred reasons unconnected with the death of Robert might have taken him there.

He got up to go. He wanted to be alone—alone, at least, with Bill. Mrs. Norbury had given him many things to think over, but the great outstanding fact which had emerged was this: that Cayley had reason to hate Mark. Mrs. Norbury had given him that reason. To hate? Well, to be jealous, anyhow. But that was enough.

"You see," he said to Bill, as they walked back, "we know that Cayley is perjuring himself and risking himself over this business, and that must be for one of two reasons. Either to save Mark or to endanger him. That is to say, he is either wholeheartedly for him or whole-heartedly against him. Well, now we know that he is against him, definitely against him."

They had come to the gate into the last field which divided them from the road.

"Jolly little place, isn't it?" said Bill.

"Very. But rather mysterious. Isn't there a drive, or a road or anything?"

"Oh, there's a cart-track, but motor-cars can't come any nearer than the road"—he turned round and pointed—"up there. So the week-end millionaire people don't take it. At least, they'd have to build a road and a garage and all the rest of it, if they did."

"I see," said Antony carelessly, and they turned round and continued their walk up to the road. But later on he remembered this casual conversation at the gate, and saw the importance of it.

CHAPTER XVI

WHAT was it which Cayley was going to hide in that pond that night? Antony thought that he know now. It was Mark's body.

The decorations of the different booths were novel and pleasing, and the ladies in charge spared no time in making their bazaar one of the daintiest and most attractive affairs in its history.

The fancy work booth was in charge of Misses A. Stephenson and Lila Fee and Mrs. Wilbert Fee and numerous articles of hand embroidery and sewing were for sale. Miss E. Jewett and Miss C. Cornwall had charge of the fish pond, which was the main attraction for the kiddies.

Afternoon tea was served at the small tables, which were tastefully arranged. The proceeds of the afternoon amounted to about $115.

The Grave.

The death occurred on Sunday afternoon of the seven months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Wilson, after an illness of only a few days, resulting from double pneumonia. The funeral, which was conducted by Rev. E .R. James was held on Monday to Emily Cemetery. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved parents.

A group of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Carew about 3 miles south of Omemee on Saturday last to extend to them their heart felt sympathy in their bereavement, having lost their 1½ year old daughter as a result of fire. The circumstances surrounding the death are particularly sad. The mother and father, were both at the barn on Friday evening and left the little girl and her three and a half year old brother in the house for a few minutes and upon return found the little girl in flames. Medical aid was immediately summoned but the child passed away a few hours afterward, as a result of her injuries. No trace of fire was in evidence in the house so that the origin of the tragedy is unknown. The funeral was held on Saturday afternoon with interment at Emily cemetery. Rev. Calvert Carew of Fenelon Falls, conducted the service, assisted by the local clergy in town.

Wedding Bells.

A wedding of much interest to many residents of Omemee, took place in Knox Presbyterian church, Calgary on November 14, when Mrs. (Dr.) Reid, (nee Sarah Evans) was united in marriage to Mr. Armour, of Regina. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Armour left on their honeymoon to spend the winter in Los Angeles and afterward will make their home in Regina. Mrs. Armour is a daughter of the late Major and Mrs. Evans of Omemee.

Forty-Sixth Anniversay.

The 46th anniversay of the Methodist church was observed last Sunday ,when Rev. A. J. Langford of Trinity Church, Peterborough, occupied the pulpit and delivered two eloquent sermons. Special music was rendered by the choir.

JUDGE PLEADS POLICE CAUSE

And Dissented From Jury's Verdict Awarded R. T. Scott Damages.

"Your verdict is not mine," said Judge Huyck to the jury that awarded Robert T. Scott $25.00 damages from County Constable W. T. Dickson for trespass, and dismissed the claim for assault.

The verdict was brought in on Wednesday evening at six o'clock, after more than two hours' deliberation.

"I can't agree with you, gentlemen," His Honour began, after George McCartney, the foreman, had delivered the jury's written decision. "The result will be judgment for $25.00, with Division Court costs. I scarcely see how you came to the conclusion of trespass when Dickson was invited there by Scott himself. However, that is the jury's business, not mine."

F. D. Kerr, K.C., represented Scott, and G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., was Dickson's solicitor.

Judge Huyoke referred to some of the statements made during the trial about the duties and rights of constables, and took the opportunity of the occasion to commend the police to every citizen.

"There is a general tendency to laugh at and belittle police to-day. Small boys think it smart to throw sticks and stones at the police, but they wouldn't think of hitting anyone else. I attribute this to cheap movies. I haven't seen them myself, but I am told that it occurs in some pictures. The police force generally speaking hasn't the moral support of all citizens. They have the support of thinking people. While we are asleep, the police are protecting us and our property; and many of us value all too little the great service the police force renders. If it was not for them we would go back to the jungle as barbarians. I have a high admiration for police forces, and if there is any abuse, there is very little of it."

The personnel of the jury in this case follows: Geo. McCartney, foreman; A. E. Stenson, Sidney Hunter, Richard Killen, J. Richardson, Peter Moffat, Norman Davis, P. G. Wallace, Ernest Knight, Adam Gardiner.

WHAT HAVE WE DONE TODAY?

We shall do so much in the years to come,
But what have we done today?
We shall give our gold in a princely sum,
But what did we give today?
We shall lift the heart and dry the tear,
We shall plant a hope in the place of fear,
We shall speak the words of love and cheer,
But what did we speak today?

We shall be so kind in the after-a-while,
But what have we been today?
We shall bring to each lonely life a smile,
But what have we brought today?
We shall give to truth a grander birth,
And to steadfast faith a deeper worth,
We shall feed the hungering souls of earth,
But whom have we fed today?

We shall reap such joys in the by and by,
But what have we sown today?
We shall build us mansions in the sky—
But what have we built today?
'Tis sweet in idle dreams to bask,
But here and now do we our task?

Yes this the thing our souls must ask,
"What have we done today?"
—Nixon Waterman.

There is no earthly tie so strong or so sacred as that of motherhood. Society is held together by social ties. Civic societies are bound by money and oaths. These obligations are like girths of steel, yet none hold like the marriage bond when inviolated and unpolluted by the vile theories.

There is only villainous abominations in the doctrine that leads a creature called by courtesy a man, to announce that a transfer of his affections warrants a breach of loyalty and desertion of one who has become his wife and the mother of his children. No guise of prophecy can cover so vile a principle; no charm of poetry gild so hateful a treason, and the breath of perdition is on the lips of all such as advocate anything else than loyalty to wifehood and motherhood.

It is the mothers who hold the world in place. They are the balance wheels of the universe. They hold the sceptor of power by controlling the affections of men. The hand that rocks the cradle has controlled armies. Marie Theresa quelled the tumult of a mighty army in Austria by raising her fair hand, and we are to that all was hushed to silence, as in clear, sweet tones she spoke, "The bravest battles that ever were fought, have been fought by the mothers of men."

Henry Ward Beecher once said, "I think I am more grateful to God for mother and sisters of the substantial integrity, purity and nobility of womanhood, than for almost anything else in this world. After a long life I can say that I have not lost faith in woman. The longer I live the more chivalric is my regard for them. I should look upon it as a fatal canker in my soul if I fell from my confidence in the general trustworthiness, honesty, honor and charity of womanhood. Therefore, when I hear young men, cast gross aspersions on the character of women, I feel as if I were in a den of hissing serpents."

Parents often say, "I live for my children." They should do more than that—they should live with their children, letting their boys and girls feel that their intereests are their parents' interests also.

Many of our young people have plenty of knowledge but they lack wisdom. As Cowper said, "Knowledge is proud that he learned so much; wisdom is humble that he knows so little."

We do not need an introduction to a great man to feel his greatness. If you meet a cheerful man on the street on a cold day, you seem to feel the mercury rise several degrees.

Let the children have a good time—childhood does not last long. Age is incapable of the fine enthusiasm of youth.

A man thinks he knows it all, until a woman begins to enlighten him.

It is easier to keep a friend than to recover him when lost.

Your Christmas Dinner

Christmas, the greatest holiday of the year, is commonly accepted as the observance of the birth of Christ.

It was, however, a celebration of the pagans for centuries before the Christmas era. During the mid-feasting and reverence was set aside in honor of the various gods worshipped.

In Scandinavian countries of the north, the season was known as Yuletide and the offerings made to the great god Thor. The ceremony assumed a spirit of thanksgiving, and gifts not only were offered to the gods, but also were exchanged by these peoples.

In England, very early in history, the Christmas dinner became a definite consideration.

The goose, boar's head, and baron of beef, were chosen as the meats to be eaten.

The Boar's Head.

The boar's head throughout Europe, was very highly thought of, and when garnished with garlands of laurel and placed on a huge platter, was served with the greatest ceremony, always being heralded with trumpets.

The goose, a nice fat one, always was stuffed, roasted on a spit, and often served with sausages. The manner of cooking has not materially changed, and the goose served today at Christmas is treated much the same way.

In Germany, the goose is rubbed inside and out with salt, pepper, sweet herbs, and allowed to stand over night. In the morning the bird is stuffed with a mixture of potato, sour apples, butter, bread crumbs, raisins and currants, and roasted. It is served with a gravy made of the giblets, and either apple sauce or a compot of some kind.

Here at Home.

The American and Canadian Christmas dinner is a mixture of English and French dishes. Perhaps a typical menu would be:

Pickles Olives Celery
Roast Goose—Onion and Potato Stuffing
Baked Ham—Glazed Sweet Potatoes
Mashed Turnips
Plum Pudding Hard Sauce
Mince Pie Nuts and Raisins
Candies Marzipan
Fruit Coffee

WHAT'S THE USE.

(Written to the man of "The Flapper Wife.")

1.
What's the use of longing
For the things you haven't got?
And what's the use to try and buy
The things that can't be bought?

2.
What's the use of trying
To make this world all new?
It soon will have to be re-made,
But that won't be by you.

3.
What's the use of frowning,
When you could sweetly smile?
And what's the use of pouting,
Why not start and smile awhile?

4.
This world is one big universe
And we've lived here all our life,
We know it pretty well by now,
Its struggles and its strife.

5.
So what's the use of seeking
For a girl that will be new?
There surely must be lots of them,
But perhaps they're not for you.

6.
And what's the use of hoping
That the girls would go half-way?
The flapper age is on them now,
And it may be here to stay.

7.
What's the use of thinking
All the girls are grafters, sad?
And why not seek some other views,
That are not half so bad?

8.
And what's the use of grumbling
About the girls' bobbed hair, when They're trying just their very best
To make it grow again?

9.
And what's the use, Oh bache'lor
Of running Castle down?
She's only one of many
That you will find around.

10.
What's the use of wanting
The world to marry young?
And don't you know the saying old,
That trouble's just begun?

11.
And what's the use of worrying
How flappers spend their dough?
If they spend it very foolishly,
Why, they'll have to earn some mo'.

12.
And now, Oh Mr. Bachelor,
This world's a funny place,
But you can make it nicer if
A smile is on your face.

13.
So you and I together will Go through life with a smile,
And at the end I'm sure you'll find
It was well worth your while.

BYNG-MACK.

LET CHILDREN SELECT GIFTS.

The Average Child Should Be Allowed Some Liberty in This Respect.

By Mrs. Sophia E. Delavan Cowles.

Buy your child what he wants if the want is within reason and the desired toy is not destructive of character or property and has reasonable good stored away within it.

Hearken back to your own youth—Weren't you terribly put out when old Santa brought you a beautiful top that sang as it spun, when what you really wanted was a sled, an air rifle or a dolly?

Remember Child's Tastes.

Parents should be guided by the child's tastes in selecting Christmas toys, because nine times out of ten the child knows what he wants to play with better than the adult possibly can know.

Of course, the parent should lend suggestions. But don't rub your superior ego in on the wishes of that boy or girl when you take the Santa Claus list down to fill.

You Will Be Sorry.

If you buy a coloured cushion for Mary when she expressed a preference for a knitting set, or a rig-a-ma-jig baseball game for Harry instead of the railroad train he asked for—just because, down underneath it all, you have a sneaking idea that maybe you'd like to rest your own head on the cushion or play the baseball game yourself — you'll be sorry.

Mary and Harry will pretend to be pleased, but don't you see that by making them pretend, you're making hypocrites out of them — and ruining their whole day as well?

Don't Be Extravagant

Buy presents within your means. If necessary, make substitutes for what your children want.

But make wise substitutes, carry ing with them the same sort of spirit as expressed in the original request, for the child knows what he wants far better than perhaps you think you know.

A THOUGHT.

Wherefore have ye not fulfilled your task?—Exodus 5:14.

To shape the whole future is not our problem; but only to shape faithfully a small part of it, according to rules already known. It is perhaps possible for each of us who will with due earnestness enquire to ascertain clearly what he, for his own part, ought to do; this let him, with true heart do, and continue doing.—Thomas Carlyle.

NEW COLLAR EFFECT

One of the season's most interesting collar effects is shown here. It is plainly a compromise between the high and the low, but such a compromise as only an artist could have made. Second in interest are the diagonal bands of black braid, and the embroidered belt, which add to the decorative quality of the frock.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE.

"Two tigresses in a house are better than two mistresses," says a Persian proverb, and owing to this or to economic stress, polygamy has become "unfashionable" in Persia.

The Persian woman, however, is not a helpmate to her husband in the English sense of the word. The husband manages the establishment, pays the servants and checks the accounts.

The priest who educates a Persian advises him as one of the cardinal rules of life always to do the exact opposite of what a woman counsels.

CAMISOLE BODIES.

Separate skirts are quite generally being made with the camisole bodies instead of inside belts. The skirt fits better for one thing, the waistline does not show through the light-colored blouse for another, and the camisole top also makes it possible to wear a jersey or open-work sweater without the accompanying underblouse.

Useful Hints

FOR SPORT WEAR.

The pleated skirt of jersey, flannel and kasha, to be worn with the Russian or overblouse, is being shown for sports wear.

DEBUTANTE'S FROCK.

A debutante gown of white chiffon and cobwebby white lace is trimmed with lacquered silver ribbon. The skirt is very long and full, and the bodice has a wide bertha.

LACQUERED CHARMEUSE.

Lacquered black charmeuse is used by some of the smart Parisian costumers to fashion stunning costumes. Frequently we find it relieved by white fur or black lace.

NEW DRESS FABRICS.

Among the new dress fabrics are included printed and bordered crepes and silk sponges and fancy weaves, many in simulation of brocades. These come in a wide range of colors, with violent contrasts.

FOR PALM BEACH.

For Palm Beach wear one sees a number of crepe frocks with inserts and appliques of antique laces, such as filet, Madeira and the finer meshed varieties.

THE SECOND SEASON.

Last season's frocks are frequently refurbished by adding a girdle of ribbon that has long panel ends on each side, reaching below the skirt, thus giving the loose panel effect so popular this season.

BEADED FROCKS.

The elaborately beaded frock is still sponsored for evening wear. There is less beading on street frocks than was evident during the summer. Jet and pearl beads are popular trimming now.

FUR AND VELVET.

A smart cape of Siberian squirrel is finished at the bottom with a wide flounce of velvet. The collar is a double frill of velvet. There is a decided tendency to combine velvet and fur in street as well as in evening cloaks.

THE LONG AND SHORT.

Long skirts are said to be much more popular with the younger women than the older ones, the reason being that the young woman may wear practically any type of gown, but the older one realizes that her maturity is emphasized by the long skirt.

IF YOU ARE WELL BRED—

You know that a letter of introduction is handed to you, unsealed, always. It is correct for you to seal it at once in the presence of the one who has written it for you.

A woman mails her letter of introduction, provided it is a social one, and does nothing further until she receives an acknowledgment. In the case of a business introduction she leaves the letter at the office of the person for whom it is intended and waits for him to grant an interview.

SOLLY SIEGEL'S

indictment of obtaining money under false pretences.

Paid $60 a Case

Examined by Mr. Hatton Siegel said he had lived in Peterboro four years, and last September was working here as a peddler. He had known Winch since last Spring.

I saw him on September 4th. He told me he would let me have some King George and White Horse whiskey at $60 a case. My father and brother were present in the car, but I don't think they heard any of the conversation except when Winch was going away he told me to bring the money with me.

I met him on the 6th and told him I had decided to buy some, and would be over the next day. I went there about three o'clock in the after noon. Winch an his partner "Pete" Jeffries were there. I wet down cellar with them. There were lots of bottles on a shelf. They were wrapped in brown paper and had the label of the Quebec commission on them.

Samples Were Whiskey

Winch asked me if I wanted to taste the King George. I said yes, and he took down a bottle and pulled the cork and gave me a taste. It was liquor all right, also asked me if I wanted to taste the White Horse. He took down another bottle It was in a wrapper. I smelt and tasted it, and it was liquor too. It had the Quebec label on too."

Siegel related how two dozen bottles were transferred to bags, and Winch told him to go out and turn the car while the rest were being packed.

"I gave him $190 and owed him $20 more. I bought three and a half cases."

Bottle Rolled Out

The bags were piled on to Siegel's car and he started for home. Turning from Aylmer street into McDonnell street, he continued, one of the bottles performed the feat of rolling out of its bag and also out of its own wrapper. He noticed its strange, watery appearance, and went into a store to telephone Winch's house after examining several other bottles.

Three bags were dragged before the jury, and bottles in all the glory of their labelled wrappings and cardboard containers were stripped for inspection. One of them with an exterior mark of White Horse whiskey, was decorated on the glass with universally known badge of "Burke's fine old Irish". The bottle inside a King George container was stamped "Dry Gin" and the actual contents of each was water. Siegel said he had opened half a dozen bottles at the police station, but they were uniformly "dry" and harmless except for the delusive meretricious labels.

Admitted His Trade

Cross examined by Mr. O'Brien, witness said he opened a butcher-shop, when he first came to Peterboro, four years ago, but he took up the junk business. He frankly admitted that peddling whiskey had been a feature of that business for about a year and a half.

"I don't dispute that I sold lots of liquor around Peterboro up to that time", he said.

What were you going to do with this liquor? I don't know what I was going to do.

Mr. O'Brien—It wasn't for your own use? —No, I was just taking it home.

You were going to sell it—I might have kept it.

You swear you were going to keep three and a half cases? — I'll not swear that. I might have sold them.

Judge Huycke—That's what you bought it for —Yes, sir.

Mr. O'Brien followed the course of Siegel's car from Winch's home on Crescent street to the corner of McDonnel and Aylmer streets. He left the car unguarded on the highway for two periods of ten minutes each, while he telephoned from his home and from Brook's meat shop. Then he called a taxi and drove off for the police.

Mr. O'Brien—Leaving the stuff in your car on the road?—Yes.

While you were gone for Inspector Reid your car was in front of your house all that time?—Yes.

And no one there?—Yes.

From the time you first entered your house until you returned with Reid how long was it?—About two hours.

And the stuff was out on the road all that time? —Yes.

From about 4 to 5.30 the bottles were in the bags in your car on the highway?—Yes.

And nobody was with them?—No.

Had you left liquor lying out on the road like that before?—No.

It might be tampered with?—Yes. But it was the fines.

It was a dangerous thing to do?—Yes.

Siegel said he and Inspector Reid took the bags to the police station and they then passed out of his hands

"Partner" Present

Reverting to the purchase of the bottles said Winch and his partner "Pete" Jeffries were present. They went down cellar into a room that was boarded off, and sampled two bottles of which he said Winch opened.

Mr. O'Brien—The bottles all looked all right?—Yes.

The same as any other bottles in that line?—Yes.

There were no indications that they had been tampered with?—No.

The wrapper was sealed up outside —Yes.

None of the cartons looked as if they had been opened?—No.

Witness admitted having made one previous purchase from Jeffries. In the deal on September 7th he asserted that he counted the money out to Winch and he gave it to Jeffries saying "count that money."

Mr. O'Brien —And the last you saw of it was in Jeffries hands?—Yes.

Sore Feet Nearly Drove Her Crazy

"For many years the callouses on my feet, the burning, and corns between my toes nearly drove me crazy," says Mrs. Anna Beckman. "I tried all kinds of things without relief. Hearing about the quick relief and wonderful results obtained by dancers and athletes who used Gypsy Foot Relief, my husband brought home a box. I used it a few times as directed, and to my surprise, the burning and soreness stopped, and the callouses just peeled off in my fingers, leaving the skin smooth. The soft corns between my toes seemed to fade away, and now I feel as if I had a pair of new feet. Before I used Gypsy Foot Relief, my feet must have been constantly swollen, for now I can easily wear shoes a size smaller, and with perfect comfort." CAPITAL TAX THE SOLUTION

Lop Off Proportions of Private Fortunes the Cure For Europe.

By CHAS. McCANN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, (By mail to United Press).—A capital levy, lopping off graduated proportions of private fortunes, is the cure for Europe's economic anemia, Hamilton Fyfe, now editor of the Daily Herald, the organ of the British Labor Party, declared in on interview with the United Press.

The case for the capital levy was presented by Fyfe particularly as applying to a specific country—Great Britain, where the remedy was proposed as one of the principal planks of the Labor Party platform at the recent election.

He pointed out, however, that its benefits would be felt equally in any hard-up European country; that it has been imposed successfully in Czecho-Slovakia, the only really healthy "war baby" country; and that its critics while opposing it in their own countries, have recommended it for others.

'Great Britain is burdened with a tremendous debt," Fyfe said. "Before the war the national debt was between 600,000,000 pounds and 700,000,000 pounds. Now it is about 7,800,000,000 pounds. Well, over 7,000,000,000 pounds went for the war. We have got to pay interest on it—this year 390,000,000 pounds, or more than one-third of the national revenue.

"It is a fearful burden. The chief authorities of business and finance say that because of high taxation it is impossible to develop industry, undertake new enterprises and by increased production to employ the 1,500,000 workless men in the United Kingdom. That is true."

"It is also true that there are a number of other causes, principally the Versailles treaty, because of which Germany, before the war our best customer, is unable to buy our goods, but owing to the depreciation of the mark is able to undersell our manufacturers even here at home.

Taxation must be lowered. We must rid ourselves of this frightful burden.

"We propose doing it by extending a remedy introduced by a Liberal Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir William Harcourt, in the nineties. That remedy was the death duties, now ranging from 1 per cent. on small estates to 30 per cent. on the greatest ones, payable on the estates of those who died.

"When death duties were first proposed there was an outcry. It was said capital would be frightened from the country; business would be ruined. Nothing happened. Things went on until 1909, when Lloyd George, then Chancellor, raised the duties. Still nothing happened.

Apply It to the Living.

"We propose now to apply the principle of the death duties to the estates of wealthy persons while they are still alive. This will save them the trouble of dying.

"It is proposed that estates of less than 5,000 pounds would be exempt. There would be a tax of 5 per cent. upon the first 1,000 pounds in excess of 5,000—in other words, an estate of 1,000 pounds would pay only 50 pounds.

"Persons not worth more than 20,000 pounds would benefit by the tax, really, instead of being made poorer by it, as it would be possibl shortly to reduce taxation. To the reduced interest on debt would be added the economies which the Labor Party propose to effect: to end our enormous expenditure in Mesopotamia and elsewhere, to cut drastically the expenditure upon armaments.

"With these it would be possible gradually to return to what we regard as the normal income tax—the pre-war tax of 5 per cent.

"Those persons worth more than 20,000 pounds would be contributing substantially to the needs of the country. We do not pretend that they would gain by the capital levy.

"But surely if the situation is so desperate the persons who should be called upon to help are those who after supplying themselves with all comforts and luxuries have a superfluity.

"It is said that even if the proposed levy is just it would disorganize business and finance and so hurt instead of help the country. We say that a large part of the levy would be paid in war loan bonds, or other government securities automatically extinguishing so much of the national debt. Or it would be paid in other securities to be passed on in turn to other people—no destruction, but an exchange of wealth.

There is enthusiasm as well as alarm at mention of the levy. The capital levy succeeded in Czecho-Slovakia, where the krone appreciated from 500, roughly, to 140 to the pound.

APSLEY NEWS

A Radio Outfit.

Rev. C. A. G. Spence has installed a radio receiving set, and has been getting good results, on Monday night getting concerts from East Pittsburgh, Pa., Newark, N.J., and Schenectady, N.C. It is not often that a celebrated orator visits Apsley, but on Sunday evening a gentleman who has travelled extensively and lived for years in the U. S., but had never had the opportunity of realising his desire to hear the Hon. William Jennings, heard him give an address in the Parish Room at Apsley, every word being as distinct as though he were actually present.

Mr. Spence hopes to be able to procure a loud speaker shortly, when no doubt radio concerts will be the new attraction at St. George's Institute.

ONE OF LARGEST PASSENGER TRAINS.

C. P. R. Special Was a Town of Its On on Rails.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Dec. 14.—(Special).—One of the largest passenger trains ever assembled in Western Canada reached St. John yesterday afternoon with passengers for the Canadian Pacific steamship Montcalm, which sailed for Liverpool.

This large Canadian Pacific special operated direct from Winnipeg to the ship's side. It consisted of a baggage car, two colonist, one first-class, one tourist from Calgary, two tourist from Winnipeg, three tourist from Moosejaw, one tourist from Regina, one tourist from Edmonton and one tourist from Saskatoon, and dining car and standard sleeper from Winnipeg.

A second special train with passengers for the large liner reached the city shortly after the western special. It was made up in Montreal, and went right to the ship's side.

Included among the passengers arriving on the specials were a number of prominent men from Western Canada as well as many from Montreal and Toronto. There were also a number from the Orient en route to the Motherland to spend the Christmas holiday.

GASSED OVERSEAS SHELL SHOCKED AND RHEUMATISM

Mr. F. M. Blaquiere, Morinville, Alta., writes: "After three years service overseas I returned to Canada almost a complete wreck. I had been gassed and was suffering from shell shock and rheumatism, and was so nervous I could not sleep at night. I tried many medicines and doctors, but none of them did me any good for any length of time. I got so bad in the fall of 1919, my hands were so shaky I could scarcely hold anything, and it seemed as if I had a steel band pressing on my head. The least excitement would almost drive me into fits, and my whole system seemed to be in disorder. I had cramps in my legs nearly every night, and hot and cold chills running up and down my back nearly all the time. One day I decided to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and after I had taken six boxes I began to feel better. I kept on using them and after a while I was completely relieved."

MILLIONS IN RADIO.

The annual business meeting of the Cavan and South Monaghan U.F.O. Club was held in the U.F.O. Hall on Monday evening, when there was a gratifying attendance present, consisting of about seventy-members.

The president, George Berry, took the chair, and the business of the past year was reviewed. Reports were received from the various officers, and all were so satisfactory that they were adopted as offered. The shipper's, W. A. Wood, financial statement showed that he had shipped since August 15, stock representing receipts amounting to $11,274.

Rev. A. H. McConnachie then gave an excellent address in the interests of the farmers, which was much appreciated.

GAVE ADDRESS ON GOOD ROADS

Apsley Would Be Satisfied With a Colonization Road — Swamps Are Still Open.

APSLEY, December 14. — A well attended meeting of the A. Y. P. A. was held on Saturday evening, the attraction being a debate. The subject was: "Resolved, That a County Provincial Highway would be of great benefit to Apsley and District."

As there were no speakers on the negative side, there was no debate.

Reeve Brown gave a very interesting address, showing the difference between a County Road, a Provincial Highway, and a Colonisation Road, and it was the consensus of opinion of those present that the last-named would meet the requirements of this district. The advantages of a good road were exhaustively dealt with by the Reeve, leaving very little to be added by subsequent speakers.

Mr. Spence deplored the lack of interest shown by the majority of ratepayers by not attending; beyond the Reeve and Archie Downing, no other property holders were present, the rest of the audience being composed of young people. It transpired that a deputation from the County Council will shortly wait on the authorities to ask for a grant of $1,000 a mile to make an improved road through Apsley and also to strengthen the hands of the local delegate, on the motion of Mr. Spence a resolution was unanimously passed supporting the application.

An Exception.

Contrary to the local weather prophets' opinions that winter would not set in until the swamps and the marshes flooded, it seems this year is to be an exception.

On Saturday night the thermometer dropped to 12 below zero, and there doesn't seem much likelihood of heavy rains until spring. The small amount of water in the ground is unprecedented, marshes that are always under water in the fall being quite dry and most of the wells being almost dry, residents having to carry water from Eel's Creek to conserve the supply.

Good Results.

The appeal for assistance for the Whitmore family who were burned out a short time ago has had a good result, and, as a consequence they are all now well supplied with clothing. Mr. Whitmore desires to take this means of thanking the kind donors for their gifts, especially Miss Ray of Lakefield and Mr. J. H. Connal of Peterborough, who have been most generaus in responding to the appeal.

FOOTBALL SUPPER AT GROVE SCHOOL LAKEFIELD VILLAGE

Happy Evening Spent by Boys, Parents and Friends--Yuletide Programme.

LAKEFIELD, Dec. 14.— The annual football supper of The Grove school was held on Tuesday evening and was attended by a large number of parents of boys and friends of the school. The supper room was prettily decorated in the school colors, green and red, which lend themselves so well to artistic effect.

At 6.30 the guests sat down to a sumptuous repast, after which the toast list was run off. The first toast was, of course, to his gracious Majesty the King, and was honored in the usual way. The second toast was the silent toast to the glorious dead who gave their lives in the Great War, and was honored by a brief silence. The toast to the school was proposed by Mr. Massie, of Cobourg, who coupled the name of Mr. Mackenzie, the very popular head master ,with the toast to the school. The toast was drunk by all and that rare old classic "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" was sung, followed by three cheers and a tiger which nearly took the roof off. Mr. Mackenzie replied suitably and modestly disclaimed any of the credit which was given him for the success of the school. Referring to the football team ,he considers it quite the equal of any team the school has ever produced and superior to many.

The toast to the ladies was proposed by Mr. Dawson in a clever and very witty speech. Mr. K. Hamilton replied.

The toast to the team was proposed by Mr. Marling, who spoke of the triumphs of this year's team Six inter-collegiate games were played and five were won by the Grove. The only loss was when they clashed with U.C.C. in Toronto. Gray, the captain of the team, replied in a very neat little speech.

The toast to old boys and absent friends, proposed by Rev. C. G. King, replied to by Mr. Tate, who told one of his inimitable stories in his best style.

Mr. Britton proposed the health of the new boys, illustrating it with a very clever anecdote. Howe, on behalf of the new boys, replied very suitably.

At the close of the toast list the prizes for the field day sports were presented by Mr. Mackenzie. They were as follows:

Hundred yards (intermediate)—1, Boudtbee; 2, Peck.

Hundred yards (junior)—1, Davidson; 2, Elmsley; 3, Pocock.

Hundred yards (open)—1, Loosemore i; 2 James.

220 yards (open)—1 Loosemore, 2 Griffith.

After the presentation of prizes the dramatic club cleared the room and presented their new show, "The Fish Balls, the 1922 Revue," with Capt. A. R. Junket the manager and G. R .Pedlar stage manager. The programme was as follows:

Chorus, "Swanee River Moon"—The Company.

Two hicks, the Lakefield station—M. Gray and G. Rainnie.

Recititaon, selected—R. Gray.

Solo and chorus, "Dear Old Mammy"—M. Gray and cast.

Say It With Music— R. Loosemore.

Chorus, "Smilin' Through"— The Company.

Algenion Applegarden—M. Gray.

Chorus, "Kiss Me Again" — The Company.

A short skit, "Social Uplifter's Social"—The Company.

Chorus, "Working To-night" — The Company.

Our new Canadian navy—R. Gray, G. Rainnie, J. Little, E. Pullen.

Good Night Ladies.

This programme, which was given in a spirited fashion, was very cleverly put on, the parts well taken and was judged my many to be quite equal to the famous "Dumbells." It would seem unfair to particularly mention any one performer, as all were excellent. The local hits of the two hicks at the Lakefield station brought down the house. One might mention Loosemore's musical monologue, which was extremely clever. Algemon Applegarden, the English visitor, was of the characteristic "don'tcher know" type we read of and sometimes see. Barnard, whose comical make-up and personality attracted much applause, made a real hit. The social uplifter's social was a scream, Rainnie and J. Little and R. Little being wonderfully clever in their parts. The clever parody on "Tenting To-night" and the burlesque of the Canadian navy were remarkably well done. Every member was applauded and every song encored. Mrs. Fawcett, as pianist, was of great assistance in many ways. The evening was brought to a close, and another football supper has become a happy memory to those who attended.

Yuletide Programme.

The entertainment given at the Yuletide Fair, held recently in the Memorial Hall and unavoidably omitted from the Examiner was as follows:

Walter Blackburn of Toronto, kindly gave his services as entertainer and made a hit with his wonderful sleight of hand performance and his clever card tricks. He is remarkably gifted in this way. His recitations, especially the imitations of Raymond Hitchcock, "Here Comes the Groom" and "All Dressed Up and Nowhere to Go" were very fine.

Another very pleasing feature of the programme was "The Bachelor's Dream," a series of tableaux showing many of the prettiest girls of the village, with Arthur Barker taking the part of the bachelor in his usual happy manner. The verses read by Rev. A. W. Mackenzie, were composed by Mr. Dela Fosse, of Peterborough, a former member of the parish, for the occasion. The following girls took part:

Yachting girl, Miss Stella Lennox; Flapper, Miss Hazel Bolton; Skating girl ,Miss Vera Botterill; Society girl, Mrs. G. H. Grahame; Farm girl, Miss Jean Erskine; Shooting girl, Miss Edna Braden; Italian girl, Mrs. T. Jewell; Riding girl, Miss Adcock; Bride ,Miss Lelia Burgess; Golf girl, Miss Loloa Waldon; Spanish girl, Mrs. Osborne; Red Cross girl, Miss Dorothy Turner; Fishing girl, Miss Helen Simpson; Aeroplane girl, Miss Gladys Shewen; Japanese girl, Miss Effie Webster; Summer girl, Mrs. S. Sutton; Dancing girl, Mrs. E. Grier.

The drawing for the prizes followed, the lucky numbers being drawn by a blindfolded child.

Doll, donated by Miss Adcock, was won by Mrs. John Sanderson.

Blue doll, donated by Mrs. E. R. Tate, won by J. F. Lillicrap.

Necklace, donated by Mrs. Lawrence Graham, won by F. M. Dela Fosse, of Peterborough.

Oak tea tray, donated by Mr. S. White, won by Mrs. J. C. Strickland.

Table cover, donated by Mrs. W. M. Graham, won by Mr. Blackburn, of Toronto.

Silk quilt, donated by Miss M. Hampton, won by Miss Ray.

The proceeds amounted to over $40 and were very gratifying to the committee who had arranged the Fair.

OBITUARY

THOMAS ELDER

HARWOOD, Dec. 14—(Special). —The funeral of Thomas Elder, who died of double pneumonia at the home of George Harvey, Bowanton, took place on Monday to the Bethesda Presbyterian cemetery near here. The late Mr. Elder was a man well known and highly esteemed in the district. He was born in Fifeshire, Scotland, but came with his parents to this country, when sixteen years of age, settling north of Baltimore. He lived for some years with the late James Carruthers at Bowanton, but some few years ago went to Englehart with Ex-Major Alex. Skinner and Mrs. Skinner and remained there until the terrible fire swept the Northern Country in September and in which Mr. Skinner lost his buildings. Deceased later came back to this locality, but the experiences through which he had passed made him a ready victim to the ravages of pneumonia. He passed away after a few days illness. There are many who will remember Mr. Elder as the leader of the Presbyterian church choir at Bethesda, for some years. He as very fond of music and never happier than when leading the service of prayer. He was a bachelor and the last of his generation. Some of his family died in Scotland and a brother, Alex. Elder, and a sister, Mrs. D. J. Battor, predeceased him here.

INSTRUCTION IN THE PREVENTION OF ACCIDENTS

Points That Should Be Taught Peterborough School Children.

There are three fundamental causes of accidents.

The first cause is the inherited tendencies. The tendency to play lies at the foundation of the child's physical welfare but this tendency leads him to play in dangerous places. Safe places for play must be provided and children must be taught to use these places.

Bad habits is a second cause of accidents. As an illustration, children frequently acquire the habit of crossing the streets at other places than where the streets intersect. This is a bad habit and it is a matter of educaton to develop new and safe habits.

Ignorance is a third cause of accidents. Children grasp live wires through ignorance and lose their lives. It is another matter of education to acquaint them with what is dangerous.

The only effective way of preventing accidents is for teachers to discuss the causes and means of preventing them with the children.

The most common preventible accidents are:—

1 By automobiles:—
(a) Children playing in the streets
(b) Children crossing in the middle of block.
(c) Children coasting on the streets.
(d) Careless driving.
2 Stealing rides on moving vehicles.
3 Carrying matches.
4 Careless swimming and diving.
5 Careless behavior in row boats and canoes.
6 Burns—coal oil, gasoline, etc.
7 Firearms.
8 Railroads.
9 Careless playing in games.
10 Elevators.
11 Falls.
12 Electrocution
13 Asphyxiation.
14 Motor Cycle Accidents.
15 Bicycle accidents.
16 Coasting in dangerous places.

Other preventible accidents will occur to the teacher and their discus ion with the pupils will lead to good results, and may with junior pupils, be a helpful means in oral expression.

Getting Too Fat? Try This---Reduce

People who don't grow too fat are the fortunate exception. But if you find the fat accumulating or already cumbersome, you will be wise to follow this suggestion, which is endorsed by thousands of people who know. Ask your druggist for Marmola Prescription Tablets, and follow directions. One dollar is the price the world over. Get them from your own druggist or send price direct to the Marmola Co., 4613 Woodward ave., Detroit, Mich. By doing this you will be safe from harmful drugs and be able to reduce steadily and easily, without starvation diet or tiresome exercises.

CASE WITHDRAWN IN COUNTY COURT

Tax Collector Green's Suit for Damages Was Settled Out of Court.

The suit of W. J. Green against W. G. Cornell for $500 damages, covering injuries received in a traffic accident on June 3rd last at the corner of George and Simcoe Streets, was withdrawn this afternoon shortly after the plaintiff took the stand.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, representing the defendant, announced that he and Mr. Gordon had arrived at a settlement. "My client always contended," said Mr. Kerr, "that he was not guilty of negligence or wrongdoing. He realizes that Mr. Green has suffered and he wants to share some of the loss. The case has therefore been settled, and settled amicably."

As Mr. Green passed Mr. Cornell's desk they shook hands, a gesture which Judge Huycke commended in deposing the withdrawal of the action. The amount of the settlement was not announced.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How To Treat.

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

POISONED CANDIES SENT TO OFFICIALS

Attempt Made to Take the Life of the Home Secretary—Police Have Clue.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—(Canadian Press).—An attempt has been made to assassinate the Home Secretary W. C. Bridgeman by means of poisoned chocolates sent through the mail. The candy arrived at the Home Office yesterday and police attribute the act to the same person who recently made an attempt on life of Sir William Horwood, head of the Scotland Yard.

The candy box bore the postmark of Balham, a London suburb, where it is now learned the Horwood package also was posted. Scotland Yard investigators who had almost succeeded in tracing the origin of Horwood chocolates are now practically certain that the new attempt will lead to an arrest. It was said to-day Scotland Yard people found the shop in which Bridgeman chocolates were purchased. The attempt on Mr. Bridgeman's life, coming just before Christmas when all officials may expect to receive parcels has caused considerable alarm among them.

A DELIGHTFUL EVENING WITH LOCAL BANKERS

First Social of Peterborough Bankers' Institute a Great Success.

The dance in the G.W.V.A. Hall last night under the auspices of the recently organised Peterborough Institute of Bankers, although quite an informal affair, proved one of the most delightful of such functions this season.

Inviting music was contributed by Paul Gliddon's Orchestra, cards were also on the programme, and dainty refreshments were served.

Considerable credit for the unqualified success of this social event is due the committee in charge, composed of Misses H. Stapleton, C. McCarthy, M. Evans, M. Connor, M. N. Morrison, and Mr. J. McWilliams, with Mr. C. T. Aulph as chairman.

The officers of this local Institute of Bankers are: W. Fortye, president; B. D. Henry, vice-president; and W. H. Walkey, secretary-treasurer. The membership includes all the local bank managers, who are taking an active interest in the organisation.

At the Institute's first social evening last night there were eighty bankers and friends present.

THE HORRORS OF FLIGHT FROM THE TURKS HERE TOLD.

Tragic Details of Chase of Terror-Stricken Christian People.

ATHENS (By mail to United Press).—Tragic details of the flight of the terror-stricken Christian population of Anatolia, the movement of an entire people to escape oppression and possible annihilation at the hands of the victorious Turks are given in the report just received by courier from James H. Crutcher, of Tuscaloosa, Alabama, director of the Near East Relief at Samsoun.

From his post of observation at Samsoun, which has become the most important outlet on the Black Sea for Christians fleeing Asia, Crutcher witnessed this vast flight of refugees at its flood tide and his acount of conditions there contains facts almost too horrible for written description.

The waterfront at Samsoun presents hundreds of pitiful sights. Disease and starvation threaten the refugee population, orphanages are crowded to overflowing, and an outbreak of epidemic threatens. Women are giving birth to children in the streets.

The arrival of the Greek refugees in Samsoun after their long trek from their mountain homes furnished many harrowing scenes. On the day of writing his report, the Near East Relief man noted one group of fifty orphans coming from the mountains after ten days on the road. Some were close to death. It is said that there are thousands of women and children hiding in the mountains, preferring to take their chance of eluding the enemy than face the dangers of the long and hazardous journey to the coast and almost certain starvation on arrival at their destination.

Ten thousand Greek and Armenian orphan children who have been supported by the American people for the past three years through the Near East Relief funds will have to leave the country and necessary arrangements for their removal are now being made.

In addition to these children, there are ten thousand Christian residents of Samsoun awaiting a chance to sail and at least forty thousand more on the road, according to relief authorities. However, at the time of writing, there were sailing accommodations in sight for only two thousand.

OUTLINES GERMANS' FINANCIAL FUTURE

Swedish Expert Foreshadows Chaos in the Fatherland.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 13.—(Associated Press).—"If France breaks with Germany financially chaos will follow, and the mark will drop to almost any conceivable low rate," said Professor Gustav Cassel, Swedish expert in international finance, and advisor to the League of Nations, upon his recent return from Berlin, where he had been called by the German government, together with seven other financial experts from the United States, England, Holland and Russia.

Professor Cassel declares that unless present conditions in Europe are altered, stabilization of the German mark will be impossible. The experts were agreed on this. They recommended that the German government ask for a moratorium of reparations payments for at least two years. If this request is granted, stabilization will depend principally on Germany's production and on the make-up of the national budget. An international loan to Germany would not in itself solve the problem, he says, but would have a tremendous moral effect on the people.

The commission of financial experts recommended, according to Professor Cassel, that in case the moratorium were granted, Germany give the following guarantees: the establishment of a "central foreign exchange department" at the Riksbank, to be provided with some of the Riksbank's gold reserve; the expenditure of this gold in the purchase of paper marks; the limitation of the floating debts, and the raising of the discount rate at the Riksbank. With the consent of the reparations commission, an international financial association should be invited to help in the work of stabilization. The redeeming of paper marks should be limited to notes of the Riksbank, chiefly foreign holdings. If marks were priced at the rate of 3,500 to the United States dollar, says Professor Cassel, less than half of the gold reserve of the Riksbank would be sufficient for redemption.

Professor Cassel has recently agreed to act as financial adviser to the Soviet State Bank in Petrograd.

RUB RHEUMATIC PAIN FROM ACHING JOINTS

Stop "dosing" rheumatism.

It's pain only. St. Jacobs Oil will stop any pain, and not one rheumatism case in 50 requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating St. Jacob's Oil right on the tender spot, and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. St. Jacobs Oil is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints and never burns the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from the aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache and neuralgia.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old time, honest St. Jacobs Oil from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

THERE'S PLENTY WORK IN MOUNTAIN STATES

No Jobless Laborers in Neighborhood of Rockies This Winter.

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 14—(United Press)—Improved conditions, industrially and agriculturally, have practically eliminated the chances of there being thousands of Mexican laborers without jobs this winter in the Rocky Mountain region, according to Manuel Esparza, Mexican consul here.

Last winter 2,000 Mexican laborers in Colorodo and Wyoming were repatriated at the expense of the Mexican government, because there was no work for them. This year, conditions are different, Esparza said.

"We will endeavor to prevent any citizen of our country from becoming a public charge", he said.

Recognition of the Mexican government by the United States, so that American capital may be employed more extensively in Mexico, will result in a large decrease in immigration of Mexicans to the United States, Esparza believes, as the laborer can find plenty of employment in his own country.

PROF. CALLANDER GAVE A LECTURE

Turks Must Be Controlled if the Near East Situation is to Be Cleaned Up.

Last evening Professor T. Callander gave an interesting illustrated lecture on "Anatolia," the homeland of the Turk, and "The Cradle of Christianity," in the George Street Methodist church.

Prof. Callander is the second representative from Queen's University, Kingston, to give an address in the George street church this year. As a classic teacher, Prof. Callander has spent long periods in the lands of the Turks and Greeks.

Seat of Danger.

Anatolia, which is part of Asia Minor, is the seat of the world's greatest danger, stated the speaker. It is the happy hunting ground of the Turk. The race is now mainly composed of a stock from the Romans, Greeks and Hebrews. In 1000 B.C., Anatolia was the home of the Greeks; in 300 B.C., a large number of Jews came into the country, and for 1000 years later it was one of the greatest provinces of the Roman Empire.

Among the many beautiful pictures shown were scenes of the Bagdad Railway, natives' homes in the mountains, mountain scenes, and also scenes of ploughing, threshing, and many old sculptural works, in figures and writings.

Log Homes.

The natives' homes, continued Prof. Callander, are made of logs placed to form a square room, and then logs are placed flat across the top. Mud and mud bricks are placed between the logs and help build up the walls of the home.

The Turks have brought their own punishment upon themselves, stated the speaker, for expelling the Christians from their country.

The real trouble of the Near East quarrel is mostly responsible for the statement made to the Greeks, explained the speaker, by Lloyd George, when they asked England what to do regarding the Turks in their land. The Greeks, he stated, are a class of people, who get a swelled head at their first victory, and as a result are lost before the war is over.

Prof. Callander concluded his lecture by stating that something must be done by the ruling countries of the world to end Turkish atrocities. The only way to have Christianity prevail in the East is to use force to maintain order and safety.

CANNOT THINK

very slowly, but with a continuous movement, the right fist.

The subject is immediately felt to make a slight movement backwards, and either to stop himself from falling or else to fall completely.

In the first case, tell him that he has resisted, and that he did not think merely that he was falling, but that he might hurt himself if he did fall. That is true, for if he had not thought the latter, he would have fallen like a block.

Repeat the experiment, using a tone of command as if you would force the subject to obey you. Go on with it until it is completely successful or very nearly so. The operator should stand a little behind the subject, the left leg forward and the right leg well behind him, so as not to be knocked over by the subject when he falls. Neglect of this precaution might result in a double fall if the person is heavy.

Third Experiment.

Place the subject facing you, the body still stiff, the ankles flexible, and the feet joined and parallel. Put your two hands on his temples without any pressure, look fixedly, without moving the eyelids, at the root of his nose, and tell him to think: "I am falling forward...." and repeat to him, stressing the syllables, "You are fall....ing for.. ...ward, You are fall....ing.... for ....ward...." without ceasing to look fixedly at him.

Fourth Experiment.

Ask the subject to clasp his hands as tight as possible that is to say, until the fingers tremble slightly, look at him in the same way as in the preceding experiment and keep your hands on his as though to squeeze them together still more tightly.

Tell him to think that he cannot unclasp his fingers, that you are going to count three, and that when you say "three" he is to try to separate his hands while thinking all the time: "I cannot do it ,I cannot do it..and he will find it impossible.

Then count very slowly, "one, two, three," and add immediately, detaching the syllables: "You..can.. not..do..it..You..can..no do.. it."

If the subject is thinking properly, "I cannot do it," not only is he unable to separate his fingers, but the latter clasp themselves all the more tightly together the more efforts he makes to separate them.

He obtains in fact exactly the contrary to what he wants.

In a few moments say to him: Now think: "I can do it" and his fingers will separate themselves!

Be careful always to keep your eyes fixed on the root of the subject's nose, and do not allow him to turn his eyes away from yours for a single moment.

If he is able to unclasp his hands, do not think it you own fault; it is the subjects, he has not properly thought: "I cannot."

Assure his firmly of this, and begin the experiment again.

Always use a tone of command which suffers no disobedience.

I do not mean that it is necessary to raise your voice; on the contrary it is preferable to employ the ordinary pitch, but stress over every word in a dry and imperative tone.

TO UNVEIL MEMORIAL WINDOWS SUNDAY NEXT

War Veterans Will Parade to the Salvation Army Temple.

The five beautiful stained glass memorial windows presented to the Salvation Army Temple by the local Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, will be unveiled Sunday afternoon. Special dedication services will be held to which all returned men in the city and vicinity are invited.

These windows were given by the local veterans in memory of those members of the Salvation Army who gave up their lives for the Empire during the Great War. They have been erected in the main auditorium of the temple and together with a sixth window, erected by the Army form a fitting tribute to the memory of the dead.

All returned men, regardless of whether they are members of the G. W. V. A. or not are requested to assemble at the Great War Veterans' Association Hall on Murray street at 2 o'clock from where they will march to the Temple in a body. Uniforms should be worn, if possible.

NOT GUILTY OF "HIGH JACKING"

Reginald Winch Acquitted by Jury of Obtaining Money Under False Pretences.

Reginald Winch was acquitted of the charge of obtaining $190 under false pretences from Solomon Siegel in the verdict returned by a jury at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. G. N. Gordon made formal application for his discharge and Judge Huycke sent him away with an admonitory appeal.

"You have been ably and carefully defended by Mr. O'Brien, and a motion has been made for your discharge. I want to say one word to you. You bear a very honorable name in Peterborio and this district. The name of Winch has been synonomous with honour, and honesty and all that is good. If you are not careful you are going to drag that name in the mud if you have not already done so. It appears that you have been engaged in a traffic that is not creditable to you and your name. In dismissing you I wish you to take this as a lesson, and that you will remember yourself and your wife and those who have gone before you, and bear that name. I think you have had a very close call and that you will live as man of the name of Winch should live."

The jury in this case was composed as follows: Wm. Whaley, foreman, W. S. Thompson, Thomas Ford, David Lobb, Fred Branch, Geo. Killingbeck, Bernard Dench, Claude Fleetwood, Wm. Henry, L. Comstock, W. A. Mowry, W. B. Moore.

A list of evidence that was excluded by Judge Huycke on Wednesday afternoon after consultation with Crown Attorey Hatton who sought to bring it out and Mr. J. A. O'Brien who was objecting. Police Sergeant Thomas was on the stand at the time, and although this part of his testimqonuy was ruled out, it transpired that on the night of September 7th he found 183 bottles in Winch's cellar similar to those produced in court.

"High jacking" in the vernacular of bootleggers is a free translation of the legal term false pretences, and covers any of the predatory practices that are carried on the relentless and secret warfare that has developed within the traffic islf.

COMPLAINTS MADE BY URBAN DISTRICTS ON COST OF JUSTICE

GUNMEN BEING CARED FOR BY GRAND JURIES

Quick Action in Criminal Case Reduces Crime to a Low Ebb in New York.

ONE COURT LESS

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.— (United Press.)—Swift prosecution and summary justice have brought crime in New York to the lowest ebb in years, District Attorney Joab Baton declared to-day in an interview with your correspondent.

The bandit and the yegg are disappearing from the streets, he said and going to Sing Sing.

"There are just as many gunmen as ever," Banton admitted, adding, "But they are being cared for by the State.

"We are sending them up the river, where they cannot do any harm. For the first time in years, the aid of an extra court will not be needed to handle New York's criminal cases. When I became District Attorney there was 2,143 indictments awaiting trial. Now there are only 935. In crimes of violence we get immediate action. I have given orders that if any arrests are made before 11 a.m. the prisoners are to be brought before the grand jury the same day and either indicted or dismissed. Also, after indictments, I give the bail cases precedence. The men out on bail should be taken care of right away, so that they can't give any more trouble.

As Banton talked there were three grand juries sitting in different parts of the building.

"The dismissed number of unemployed also lowers the number of crimes," he continued. "If there is a lack of work men commit crimes to support their families or because they haven't anything else to do. Also if men are scarce and the price of labor is high, there is a decrease in crime because money is sticking out in all directions."

Love on Trial

Peggy Marsh, who sued the estate of the Chicago millionaire Marshal Field in the interests of her small son and later married Albert Johnson, has put her husband on probation for six months. POST OFFICE WILL OFFER CHRISTMAS PRAYER TO PUBLIC

"Mail Parcels Early and Don't Forget Addresses and Stamps."

SPECIAL SERVICES

OTTAWA, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press.)—"Mail your Christmas parcels early and for goodness sake put on stamps and an address," may be taken as the hopeful prayer of His Majesty's Canadian Post Office Department during this festive season. Because the latter part of the supplication was not answered last season, 59,984 parcels were not delivered. These gifts were either insufficiently addressed, parcelled so that they came apart, or made up contrary to regulations.

Not only did senders fail to write in the address to which they desired the parcels to go, but likewise neglected to include their own addresses, so that gifts could be returned, These 59,984 parcels contained everything from ladies dresses to rat poison, from tomato soup of a popular brand, to the odd bottle of Spanish wine. Boots, shoes, coats, hats, pipes, shirt both of the woolen one affected by men, and the far daintier creations favored by the ladies, are included, in fact, the post office department store. Such serviceable household articles as bread knives, carving sets and odd cups and saucers are also among the evidence of carelessness against the Canadian people.

Bar Shoe Box.

The ancient and honorable container for Christmas parcels, to wit the shoe box, is altogether frowned upon by postal officials, even for articles of a non-breakable nature. Pressure of other mail, they say, crushes the shoe box, with the result that the address portion of the outside wrapping is nearly always torn off. A corrugated cardboard box they point out, is both inexpensive and strong, and postal officials will cheer loud and long when the public become convinced of this fact.

Another public practice which the Postal Department regards with disfavor is that of gauging the exact time it takes for a pracel to travel between home of the senders and the recipient. It would be a splendid idea postal people declare, if the whole population didn't think of it at the same time. They point out that in these modern days, per-

A BIG PRIVATE LOAN IN SIGHT FOR GERMANY

United States Bankers are Said to Be Behind the Project—Loan Will Help Stabilize International Finance

NEW YORK, December 15. Canadian Press. — The possibility of a big private loan to Germany by the United States bankers is prominently displayed by several of the local newspapers this morning as one of the latest developments in connection with the reparations problem.

Visits of J. P. Morgan to Secretary Hughes on Wednesday, it was learned to-day were in connection with the project.

The amount of the German loan which according to a report may be floated in the United States would be one and a half billion dollars. It would not be sought in its entirety at one time however.

The Canadian Press learned from a prominent banker this morning that there is a general expectation in financial circles here that steps will be taken by prominent United States bankers in the near future to aid in stabilizing the international financial situation. He said that he knew that Mr. Morgan's visit to Secretary Hughes was in connection with the reparations problem though he declined to discuss the possibility of a big loan to Germany.

This resolution was evidently the outcome of the address given by Dr. Grisdale, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, Wednesday night when he told of the market possibilities in Great Britain.

PARIS, Dec. 15. -- (Canadian Press).—French-Canadian commercial treaty was signed here to-day.

The new treaty was signed by Premier Poincaire, Lucien Diora, French Minister of Commerce, Lord Harding, British Ambassodor to France, Hon. W. S. Fielding, Canadian Minister of Finance and Hon. EASY DIVORCE LAWS ARE SOUGHT BY THE BRITISH

BY MILTON BRONNER.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Divorce reform is the object of agitation in Great Britain as well as in America.

America would make divorce more difficult by means of Senator Jones' proposed 20th amendment. Britain would make divorce easier. For only one reason, however—insanity.

The long and futile fight of Mrs. Alice Rutherford to obtain release from a husband convicted of murder and confined in an asylum for the criminal insane, has given impetus to the movement.

Husband Slew Major.

Nearly four years ago her husband, Colonel Norman Rutherford, an officer in the Royal Army Medical Corps, shot and killed Major Sefton, a cousin of Mrs. Rutherford, He was found guilty, but insane.

Britain's law does not allow a wife to divorce a man because he is a lunatic or a convict, as in most states in America.

So she sued for divorce on grounds of cruelty and misconduct with his cousin and the lower court granted the divorce.

Case is Appealed.

But the woman involved carried the case to the Court of Appeal and was declared innocent and the divorce was rescinded. Mrs. Rutherford took the case to the House of Lords, to the Law Lords, and they found the other woman innocent and refused the divorce, although

MRS. ALICE RUTHERFORD, expressing sympathy for the wife.

Mrs. Rutherford has been called the most tragic woman in Britain. But there are others, also tied for life to murderers and lunatics.

The irony of it in Mrs. Rutherford's case is that in the past, among those who opposed reforms in the divorce laws, which might have helped her now, were members of her own rich and influential family.

CANADA'S EXPORT BACON TRADE TO GREAT BRITAIN IS DECREASING

Farmers Must Rise to Their Unexcelled Opportunities to Successfully Compete With Denmark and States.

EDUCATIONAL CLASS FOR FARMERS OPENS

Unless Canadian farmers embrace their opportunity for producing that high-grade bacon demanded by the English markets, Canada is going to lose its already diminishing British export trade entirely. There are eleven countries shipping Wiltshire sides to Britain, which country imports 60,000,000 pounds a year and Canada's percentage of this export business has in the eight months of 1922 dropped from 15% in 1921 to 11% today. This country's other closest competitors are Denmark, whose bacon exports to the Mother Country have increased from 32% of the latter's import requirements in 1921 to 39% this year, and the U. S., showing a decrease from 44% last year to 42% so far in 1922. It will thus be seen that Canada is losing ground in this trade while Denmark is forging ahead owing to the excellent quality of her product. In 1920 Canada's share of British bacon trade was as high as 26% of Britain's imports.

The Britisher has all the cheap bacon he wants, his standard for imports are based on the Irish Wiltshire brand, which commands a higher price than that of Denmark, and Canada also must and can compete with these two competitors to retain her export trade with Britain, for what the Englishman wants in the line of bacon, he's going to have.

Such was the warning and information uttered by James Matthews of Toronto (in charge of the Canadian Packing Co's export department, Toronto) at the special educational course in swine for farmers, which opened at the C. P. C's Peterborough plant yesterday afternoon. The course is conducted under the auspices of The Canadian Swine Breeders' Association, The Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers, The Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto, and will continue for the balance of this week.

This programme for Peterborough district is open to teams of nine junior farmers from each of the following counties: Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Hastings, Prince Edward, Peterborough, Victoria and Northumberland. During the course there are judging competitions in live hogs, individual prizes being offered by the Industrial and Development Council of Canadian Meat Packers of Toronto; also a competition in judging and grading car cases, with individual prizes offered by the same organization.

Cut to Profit

Continuing his lecture on cured Wiltshire sides for both export and

SEIZE AN ILLICIT STILL AND BOOZE

Alleged Owner Faces the Music in Cobourg Police Court.

CENTRETON, Dec. 15. — (Special.) — An interesting case was heard in the police court at Cobourg when a complete still and three bottles of booze were brought in for inspection. Booze and still were located a few weeks ago by Constable Atkins. Inspector George Goodrich and Mr. Pringle, of the Inland Revenue Department, in an empty house on the Burley farm in Haldimand township. There was found also at the same time and place in a hole beneath the floor, several empty sugar sacks, some packages of yeast cakes ,and a bottle of burnt sugar, the latter supposedly for coloring purposes. After the evidence of the officers who found the still had been taken and that of two other witnesses, the case was adjourned until next Tuesday. F. T. Hall, K.C., defended the accused, A. Green, who was arrested at Deseronto and brought back here. Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr conducted the prosecution.

Mr. Burleigh and Mr. Norman Gleeson have purchased a garage business at Deseronto, and have removed to that place.

Mason Sunday school has sent a large box of clothing, also quilts and other bedding to the fire sufferers in Northern Ontario.

Did Not Ignore The Power Issue

Editor Examiner:

Sir: Mr. R. R. Hall in his letter last evening gives a wrong impression of the action of the council in regard to the power question. The Committee did not sidetrack it, but rather took steps to obtain information as to whether power can be supplied to Peterborough cheaper from the dams in question than at present.

Yours truly,
W. H. TAYLOR,
Mayor.

"UNCONSCIOUS" CAN CURE THE AILING ORGAN

Famous Head of Nancy Clinic Tells Formulae With Which to Treat Patients.

QUICK HEALING

By DR. EMILE COUE.

Having once succeeded with the experiments in the preceding article, you should be equally successful in all others. If you carry out the instructions to the letter you should easily obtain the highest success.

Some subjects are very sensitive. It is easy to recognize them by the fact that the contraction of their fingers and limbs is easily produced.

After two or three successful experiments, it is no longer necessary to say to them: "Think this", or "think that"; you need only, for example, say to them simply—but in the imperative tone employed by all good suggestionists—

"Close your hand, now you cannot open them"

"Shut your eyes; now you cannot open them."

The subject finds it absolutely impossible to open the hands or the eyes in spite of all his efforts.

Tell him in a few moment: "You can do it now," and the de-contraction takes place instantaneously.

These experiments can be varied to infinity. Here are a few more:

Make the subject join his hands and suggest that they are welded together.

Make him put his hand on the table, and suggest that it is stuck to it.

Tell him that he is fixed to his chair and cannot rise.

Make him rise, and tell him he cannot walk.

Put a penholder on the table and tell him that it weighs a hundredweight, and that he cannot lift it.

In all these experiments, I cannot repeat too often, it is not suggestion properly so-called which produces the phenomena, but the autosuggestion which is consecutive to the suggestion of the operator.

Method of Procedure.

When the subject has passed through the preceding experiments and has understood them, he is ripe for curative suggestion.

He is now like a cultivated field in which the seed can germinate and develop, whereas before it was but rough earth in which anything planted would have perished.

Whatever ailment the subject suffers from, whether it is physical or mental, it is important to proceed always in the same way, and to use the same words with a few variations according to the case.

Say to the subject:

"Sit down and close your eyes. I am not going to try to put you to sleep. That is quite unnecessary I ask you to close your eyes simply in order that your attention may not be distracted by the objects around you.

"Now tell yourself that every word I say is going to fix itself in your mind, and be printed, engraved, and encrusted in it; that, there, it is going to stay fixed, imprinted, and encrusted, and that without your will or knowledge, in fact perfectly unconsciously on your part, you yourself and your whole organism is going to obey .

"In the first place I say that every day, three times a day, in the

Who Pays For Advertising?

THIS is a direct and reasonable question; and in the case of Daily Newspaper advertising, intelligently usec', the answer is simple: Nobody. It pays its own way.

Nobody pays for the new carburetor that gives added mileage to your motor car. It pays for itself in the gasolene it saves.

Nobody pays for an improved cash system in a modern department store. It pays for itself in economy of human time.

Nobody pays for well planned and written Daily Newspaper advertising. It pays for itself by reducing the cost of sales and by increasing production. And it often receipts old bills for follies with advertising labels.

The advertisement in your own local Daily Newspaper tells you the best things to buy and where to buy them. Every new purchase helps the whole community to command cheaper and better goods.

Did This Woman Elect To Die With Her Man at Sea

LONDON, Dec. 15.—Manned by a volunteer crew, the pick of the British navy, H. M. S. Vindictive was sunk early in 1918 at the entrance to a German submarine base. With the ship, as had been expected, went the crew.

Divers, who raised the old, battered hulk after the war found aboard her the body of a woman.

Scandalized at the breach of discipline which permitted a woman aboard a British ship-of-the-line in wartime, but faithful to the memory of the heroic men who died with the ship, the admiralty promptly forgot the incident. It has just been revealed by Lieut.-Gen. Sir Edward Bethune, 70 years old volunteer cabin-boy of the salvage ship that raised the Vindictive.

Who was the woman? What was she to one of the men who went up to certain death in the face of the German guns, turned the old scarred cruiser across the entrance to the harbor, opened the sea-cocks and th water-tight compartments, and sank silently, grandly, in the path of the little steel scorpions that used to slip out to harry ocean traffic?

Was the woman wife or sweetheart of one of the officers or crew? Was she smuggled aboard? How long had she been there? Did she, for love of someone there, slip aboard, knowing what was to happen to the Vindictive, and elect to die with her man? And how did she get aboard a British warship, particularly a ship selected for such an expedition, in wartime?

There is no one left to answer the question, the dozens of questions that might be asked. Whatever or whoever she was, she died heroically. And when the crew of the Vindictive, taken from their beds in the slimy wreck of the once proud cruiser, were carried ashore for burial, there went with them, a flag draped over her coffin, the body of the woman, "with full military honors."

STUDIES IN SUNSHINE BY WEATHER EXPERTS

Amount Varies Widely With Lesson in Middle and High Altitudes.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—The amount of sunshine possible in any locality varies widely with the seasons in middle and high altitudes, according to a study made by experts of the Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture. Further variations are caused by the conditions of the sky locally in respect to clouds or fog. During the season of the longest days of the year the sun rises along the Central-Northern border of the United States about one hour earlier than in the extreme South, but this condition is reversed during the shorter days. In the extreme Southern portion of the United States the shortest day of the year is about three hours shorter than the longest day, but in the extreme Northern part there is a difference of about eight hours, reckoning from sunrise to sunset.

The fewest hours of sunshine in Summer are found along the North Pacific Coast. Summer sunshine east of the Mississippi averages less than ten hours a day, but except along the Pacific Coast and in the extreme Northern Great Plains the daily Summer averages to the west of the Mississippi generally exceed ten hours. The maximum amount for the Summer as a whole occurs over the western portion of the plateau and in the Great Valley of California, where the sun shines nearly fourteen hours a day, with almost continually cloudless skies. This is about 95 per cent. of the possible amount of sunshine.

Cloudy weather in Winter in the lake region, the Upper Ohio Valley and the Appalachian Mountain districts, as well as in the Far Northwestern States, reduces the Winter's sunshine to two and one-half or three hours daily average, which is from 30 to 40 per cent. of the possible amount. The Winters are sunniest in extreme Western Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and extreme Southeastern California, where the averages for the December to February period range mostly from seven and one-half to eight hours a day. The percentage of sunshine is high also in this season in the Central Great plains area, where the averages exceed six hours daily. They are generally between five and six hours per day in the South Atlantic and Gulf States, but somewhat higher in the Florida Peninsula.

UNIFORM LAWS ARE FAVORED

One Means of Checking the Automobile Accident Toll.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dec. 9.—Uniform traffic laws for the United States and Canada—subject to minor local modifications—are one of the big necessities for checking the growing menace of the automobile accident toll.

This is the view of Deputy Inspector John W. O'Connor of the New York police department, who recently resigned as president of the International Traffic Officers' Association.

"The automobile has brought into practice interstate, intercity and even international touring," says O'Connor. "As a result of conflicting laws in nearly every state and city they visit, these tourists are often innocently involved in serious accidents. They drive according to the regulations of their home state—and find out too late that these rules do not apply in other localities.

"Rules of the road, regulations on passing vehicles, street cars and similar general regulations could be standardized, and should be, in the interests of safety."

Inspector O'Connor sees in education for both motorist and pedestrian in safety principles and practices as the first rule to be followed in any campaign to reduce accidents.

Favors Education

"Part of the solution of the traffic problem," he explains, "rests in concise, simple and just regulation; in publicity of these regulations and in strict enforcement of the law.

"The education of drivers and pedestrians is the first and most important step. If this principle is followed, the work of the police will be that of prompters and assistants rather than enforcers.

"Once drivers and pedestrians know their rights, they will become their own regulators, as they will resent the infractions of the constantly diminishing proportion of people who try to override the rights of others."

Suggests Remedies

Besides this advice O'Connor has formulated the following remedies for traffic control:

1. Uniform traffic laws and display signs throughout the United States and Canada, subject to minor local modifications.
2. Jail sentences for second offenders against speed and other safety regulations.
3. Rigid examination throughout the United States of all drivers, both as to their knowledge of traffic laws and their competence as motor vehicle operators.
4. Full support of traffic courts in aiding police to enforce the laws.
5. Establishment of citizens' complaint bureaus so that citizens may conveniently report violations, and establishment of police accident investigation bureaus to search out the causes of all accidents.
6. General adoption of efficient safety devices and appliances.

PREMIER LAW ENDORSES THE POLICY OF THE BALFOUR NOTE

Advocates the Adjustment of Inter-Allied Debts By An All-Around Cancellation — Follows Old Policy.

A DARK FUTURE.

LONDON, December 15 (Canadian Press). — Premier Bonar Law, in an important statement in the House of Commons yesterday, declared frankly for the policy of the Balfour note, which advocated an adjustment of inter-allied debts by an all-round cancellation, Britain, on her part, surrendering her part of the reparations to be paid by Germany.

Thus, Premier Bonar Law indicated that the new Government, despite its first statement that the Balfour note no longer existed so far as the present Government is concerned, feels impelled to the same policy as the previous Government.

The remainder of Premier Bonar Law's address was clearly addressed —to France, as a plea for moderation in dealing with Germany on the ground that that country is already on the verge of collapse; to the United States, a call for help and co-operation in settling the difficult problems of reparations and inter-allied debts.

Another important phase of his speech was the dark picture drawn of England's economic and industrial future, should the much-hoped-for improvement in trade not materialise.

The Prime Minister showed the utmost anxiety that there should be no misunderstanding British feelings towards both France and the United States, and said that it was only Britain's difficult position he was making clear. Britain was burdened with very heavy taxation, which was a clog on industrial enterprise, resulting in terrible unemployment—a problem that made it necessary, first that there should be no military occupation of German territory, which would still further handicap European trade without producing results in cash, and second, compelled him frankly to face the fact that Britain was unable to pay the American debt if she received nothing from Europe.

Strong points in the speech were the unfairness of the view that because Britain had made sacrifices to pay her way she should be expected to pay her debts while others who had made no such sacrifices escaped, and the warning that too sudden deflation in Germany might produce there all the evils of unemployment from which other countries are already suffering.

In the subsequent debate the most noteworthy contribution was by James Ramsay MacDonald, the Labour leader.

Mr. Lloyd-George also spoke, but confined himself to a brief expression of complete approval of Mr. Bonar Law's speech.

Mr. MacDonald, on the contrary, gave a complete elucidation of the policy of the Labour Party. He maintained that the United States held the key and was the only country able to give Great Britain any help. He differed from the Prime Minister, however, in believing that it was inadvisable to mix together too much the questions of reparations and inter-allied debts. He admitted that Germany possessed enormous industrial possibilities, yet she must be carefully handled, or she would follow Austria into bankruptcy. He feared that both France and Britain would need to lower their expectations from Germany very substantially.

Declaring that reparations were a curse to both those who paid and those who received, the Labour leader said the real question was not what Germany was able to pay, but what the Allies could afford to receive, and even if Germany could pay the full amount demanded, it would not be to the advantage of the Allies to receive it. France must remember that Britain had her own trade to consider, and while threats of military penalties were mixed up with economic aims, peace would be impossible.

E. D. Morel, a noted pacifist, maintained that it would be ridiculous to say that Germany had paid nothing, and declared that, including the cost of the armies of occupation, her actual cash payments, coal deliveries, surrendered mercantile marine, and other ways, Germany had already paid the equivalent of one billion pounds sterling, or qualruple the indemnity France paid in 1870.

Great unanimity was displayed in support of the Government throughout the whole debate. The submission of questions drafted by agreement between Mr. MacDonald, Mr. Asquith, and Mr. Lloyd-George, was a complete novelty in parliamentary procedure, especially as the questions had been shown to the Prime Minister in advance.

Similarly, after Mr. Bonar Law's speech, Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd-George had a consultation, and agreed that there was no occasion for them to speak, as they were in accord with the Prime Minister's pronouncement. Mr. Lloyd-George, in fact, tore up his notes, and only took part in the debate to reply to Mr. Morel's criticisms.

Mr. Bonar Law, as usual, spoke without any notes or any prepared documents. The opinion in the lobbies was that this unusual unanimity would not be without influence on the adjourned conference to be held in Paris on 2nd January.

CASH GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 15.— (Canadian Press.)—There was no change in spot prices on the local grain market yesterday, but the tone of the market was very firm. The flour situation had no new developments. Domestic demand for mill feed was fairly good and a fair business was done. The market for rolled oats was firm. The baled hay market rates were quoted here yesterday: valued in eggs with prices fully maintained. The market for potatoes was steady. A continued fair demand prevails in the butter market. There still continues to be little doing in the cheese market.

HAITE MAKES A BID FOR THE TOURIST TRADE

Have First Modern Hotel Ready For Business Next May.

PORT-AU-PRINCE Haiti, Dec. 15.—(Associated Press).—Haiti is to have her first modern hotel ready for business by May of next year. Until then she will be far behind her sisters of the West Indies, for there is not a hotel in the island that approaches the standards of an American town of 25,000, to say nothing of the splendid hostelries of Cuba, Nassua and Jamaico.

Business men of the foreign colonies here have combined with Haitian leaders in backing the new enterprise Ground has already been broken on the estate of Edward P. Pawley, on the Bizoton Road, which is the pride of the capital's picturesque suburban country. The site overlooks the bay and can be reached from the heart of the city by automobile in ten minutes. With 120 acres running from the shores of the bay to the foothills, there are facilities for golf, boating, swimming, riding, tennnis and trap shooting.

The hotel will be a comparatively modest scale, with 35 bed room suites, a main dining room, dance floor and large roof gar—

BROADENING OUT IS AGAIN VOTED DOWN BY GROUP

Back to the Land is the Hope of Civilization—Conference Closed.

TORONTO, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—After voting almost unanimously at the close of the afternoon convention against any "broadening out," a movement on the part of the U.F.O., the United Farmers of Ontario in a night session at Massey Hall performed the perplexing feat of applauding to the echo the declaration by Premier Drury that the U. F. O., as a political institution, must broaden out.

The Premier was enthusiastically received, and cheers which greeted his first extended advocacy of broadening out were about equal in volume to those which earlier in the day expressed the convention's exultation over the official repudiation of that policy. Besides dealing with "broadening out," the Premier talked at great length upon the record of the Government and defended its increased expenditures on education, good roads, its record in connection with the O.T.A., administration and general advances made in forestry and timber affairs.

Besides the Premier, the delegates had on their closing night a oratorical bill of fare, Sir Andrew MacPhail, author and Professor of History and Medicine in McGill University, who bewildered his audience with criticisms of compulsory education, comments anent the "fallacious doctrine of public ownership," skepticism as to the benefits and lasting qualities of the doctrine of democracy, which had, he said, as its chief historical representatives Marat, Tammany and Lenin, and advocated the general back-to-the-land policy as the hope of civilization.

In addition to these chief speakers of the evening, the audience heard addresses by Hon. Manning Doherty and Attorney-General W. E. Raney.

Fourteen Killed in Railway Wreck

HOUSTON, Texas, Dec. 15. — (Canadian Press). — A re-check yesterday by railroad investigators placed the toll of Wednesday night's Southern Pacific wreck at Humble, 17 miles from here, at 14, of whom four were white men. Three of the white men have been identified as W. A. Baber, of Lufkin, Texas; Wm. Campsey, conductor of Houston, and M. Clark, news dealer of Houston.

Of the injured seventeen were still receiving medical attention at hospitals here. The majority are negroes All were victims of scalding by escaping steam. Investigations were under way by the railroad and local officials to determine the responsibility for the accident.

ONE MAN KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK.

THORP, Wis., Dec. 15. —(Canadian Press.) — One trainman was killed and two others were badly injured and about 15 passengers more or less seriously hurt early yesterday when Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie passenger train No. 3, Chicago to Minneapolis, collided head-on with a freight train near here.

A relief train carrying doctors and nurses was rushed to the scene of the accident from Chippewa Falls, about 25 miles west of here. The train, which was en route from Chicago to Minneapolis, was about an hour late and was speeding to make up time when the crash occurred. The cause of the accident has not been ascertained.

The United States has not always preceded its entrance into war by a formal declaration, having begun hostilities against Great Britain in 1812 by invading Canada and seizing British vessels in American ports.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1922.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

If the spirit of Christmas were to more thoroughly permeate people's hearts at this season of the year and be demonstrated in every day transactions as well as by the gift giving which has come to be the distinguishing feature of the Yuletide celebration, this would be a happier world.

For instance people would be more thoughtful of others.

There would be no need of newspapers preaching on early Christmas shopping for the desirability of such a practice would be recognized.

And the habit of asking that small parcels be sent home which is bad enough at any time is indefensible in the Christmas season when the delivery systems of the stores are taxed to their utmost to take care of the larger articles that must be delivered.

If the shoppers of Peterborough would from now until Christmas resolve that they will carry home all their small purchases instead of asking for delivery they would be helping to solve a problem that worries every merchant and keeps drivers working long hours, sometimes in most disagreeable weather.

Show the real Christmas spirit not only by doing the rest of your shopping as early as possible next week but by relieving the delivery systems of some of the strain that necessarily accompanies this particular season.

It may seen a small thing but if it were to be generally adopted it would prove a veritable blessing to the business community.

CANDIDATES WANTED.

While all of the five aldermen whose term of office come to an end with the passing of 1922 have not announced their intentions in regard to the coming election, one at least, Ald Jas. Hamilton has definitely stated that he would not be a candidate, and it is possible there may be one or two others who will drop out of the race.

That makes it necessary to dig up some new material and up to the present there have been no signs of a rush on the part of aspirants for municipal honors.

It is to be hoped that between now and next Friday, when the official nominations take place that enough citizens may be induced to allow their names to go on the ballot paper to ensure the addition of five well qualified and capable aldermen to next year's Council.

So much of the municipal expenditure is beyond the Council's control that it is necessary that the controllable expenditure shall be directed by men who will see that full value is given for every dollar of the ratepayers' money that is spent.

There are vehement complaints about high taxes and the majority of the citizens who utter these complaints are not perhaps worried as much about the size of their tax bills as by the feeling that they do not get the results for the money that is levied from them.

It behooves the ratepayers who take that view to do what they can to persuade worth while candidates to enter the fight .

The services of good men will be needed even more than usual next year.

POLICE COURT FINES.

The deputation which waited upon members of the Ontario Cabinet on Wednesday and asked that municipalities be allowed to retain the fines paid into their local courts as a result of the work of the municipal police were promised consideration of their claims.

If justice and not expediency inspires the answer that will be given by the Government the request will be granted.

The administration of justice is a heavy burden upon the municipalities.

In Windsor for instance it represents a cost of $3.27 per head of the population.

Hamilton taxpayers for the same purpose had to contribute $293,000 during the present year.

Almost three million dollars is Toronto's price for law enforcement.

Other communities suffer proportionately and it is no wonder that relief is being sought.

The municipalities have to keep up courts and police stations and maintain a police force.

They have no voice in the choosing of a police Magistrate but they must provide salary for the official elected by the Government.

Then Queen's Park comes along and takes a large proportion of the fines, for the collection of which the municipalities are responsible and that are the consequence of activity on the part of the police, paid by the municipalities.

It is not an equitable arrangement but the Government has been spending freely and every cent is needed.

Which probably means that the request of Wednesday will ultimately be denied.

THE BIG ISSUE.

The question of additional school accommodation should be the chief issue in the campaign for the Board of Education—if there should prove to be a contest for the vacancies on the Board at the January elections.

More Collegiate Institute accommodation is a necessity and the need of facilities for technical education is equally as pressing.

There are two schools of opinion in the Board of Education, one favouring the providing an extension to the present Collegiate Institute, leaving the question of a technical school to come later, while the other proposes that the Collegiate extension should include accommodation for technical training, thus making a combined collegiate and technical school.

If the members of the Board whose term expires this year and who will ask to be returned to office are anxious to test public opinion on this question they have their opportunity.

By taking their stand in favour of one proposition or the other and appealing to the electorate on a platform of that kind the result of the campaign should throw considerable light upon the wishes of the ratepayers.

New candidates who are entering the race should also be prepared to tell where they stand.

The question has been considered for many months by the Board of Education without a definite programme being developed and there should not be another year of indecision with a matter that is steadily increasing in importance.

Every candidate for the Board of Education should be prepared to state his position in regard to school accommodation.

It is the big problem of today in so far as Peterborough's school system is concerned and aspirants for office on the Board who hedge or dodge should be left at home.

IMMIGRATION—A WESTERN VIEW.

The reaction of public opinion to the recent announcement by the Minister of the Interior of an immigration policy has not been favorable to the minister or to the Government of which he is a member. The impression which has been left upon the public mind is pretty much that the Government is stumped by the size and difficulty of the problem; and that it attempts to soothe itself and the public by periodic vague announcements of the wonderful things which it is going to do when it gets round to them.

This country has had nothing remotely resembling an intelligent and well-prosecuted immigration policy for more than ten years. During the war, of course, there had perforce to be a suspension of immigration activities; but with the return of peace the need for immigration reappeared and with it an exceptionally favorable opportunity for receiving a very considerable influx of the kind of population the country required—desirable settlers capable of going on the land from Great Britain and from Scandinavia. From Scandinavia especially. Everything that is known supports the view that a vigorous, resourceful, ingenious immigration administration in the years immediately following the war woud have transplanted from Scandinavia to Canada large numbers of highly desirable settlers. Among the complete failures of post-war administration in Canada was the handling of immigration. Mr. Calder, the minister in charge, appeared to be bewildered by the problem ;and he found the line of least resistance in reducing the activities of the department of immigration in the United States, Great Britain and the continent to the vanishing point, shutting the gates and discouraging the coming of settlers. The fewer that came the less trouble there would be for the department; and apparently the avoiding of trouble and of worrying responsibilities was regarded as the first duty to themselves of those who had been placed in charge of this branch of the public service. That spirit survived the change of government and pretty well persists to this day . Immigration showed a natural inclination to rise imediately following the close of war; but encountering difficulties and lacking encouragement to fell off steadily until last year there was the merest trickle. It is a quite safe observation that the emigration from Canada last year exceeded the immigration into the country—a completely scandalous state of affairs in view of this country's dire need of more population and the favorable openings which it affords to immigrants of the right type.

With the exception of a couple of groups who take a short-sighted view of immigration—believing quite mistakenly that an influx of people will affect their prospects for achieving better times—there is a deep public realization of the pressing need of a new influx of people such as that which twenty years ago pulled this country out of the slough of despond and set it on the road to greatness. We need more people for a dozen related reasons: to help the handful already here to produce more national wealth; to take a share of the crushing burden of taxation; to increase the business of our national railways and help turn them into profitable properties; to supply markets for our industrial centres, etc., etc.

The people know quite well what is needed; and they know, too, that the problem of meeting their needs may be troublesome but is not beyond the capacity of an efficient government. The means by which the desired end can be attained are readily available if the government has the vision and the courage to reach out and take hold of them. The question is a test of the capacity of the government.—Manitoba Free Press Evening Bulletin.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

If noise is to be the criterion, the British Labour party is making noticeable progress in the present session of Parliament .

There is one thing about R. J. Fleming, Toronto Mayoralty candidate. A lot of people have stood for him for a long time—when he directed the business of the Toronto Street Railway.

Prohibition has not been so long established in Ontario as to cause no sighs of regret over the news of the destruction of 400 cases of beer in a railway fire.

The Globe's statement that Monsieur Clemenceau has scored a personal triumph and a political failure in his American visit seems to be thoroughly in keeping with the facts.

The plebiscite taken by the Epworth League in the United States to decide the ten greatest men living or dead showed Edison receiving the most votes and Babe Ruth not in the first ten. It is surprising that an American jury passed by Jack Dempsey as well.

Sir Henry Thornton has no reason to complain of his reception in Canada. Every community seems glad to banquet him—and tell him their City is the logical headquarters for the Canadian National Railways.

LITERARY GEMS

Blest is the man of high ideals
Who fails today, tomorrow, and for days to come,
But never lowers his standard nor surrenders to defeat
Till hand and foot, till eye and ear,
Till vocal chord and tongue,
Till mind and heart are disciplined
And all abilities of body and of soul
Are marshalled by the will
And move onward to the drum-beat of perfection.

CASE AROUSES SEX JEALOUSY

The Result May Send Two Women to the Gallows on Murder Charge.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—Woman's instinctive jealousy of women who are popular with many men say send two women to the gallows here, according to Mrs. Marie K. Hickson, famous psychologist, and wife of the director of Chicago's municipal court psychopathic laboratory.

"Sex jealousy," Mrs. Hickson brand this envy of the woman-of-many-men by even the most sedate of one-man women.

The "sex vengeance" instinct has been aroused by developments here resulting in the arrest of Mrs. Tillie Klimek and Mrs. Nellie Sturmer Kodlik. Police are investigating the death of some 20 men, women and children, still somewhat mysterious, but with the outstanding feature of arsenic discovered in the bodies. The majority of these victims were husbands, sweethearts or other relatives of the two women.

It is these disclosures of many marriages, many love affairs, that arouse the instinctive antagonism of other women, says Mrs. Hickson.

Love of Conquest

"The love of conquest over man is strong in the female heart," she declares.

"No woman wishes to see an abundance of flattery bestowed by men on another woman.

"And while the normal, intelligent woman of today would not go beyond the bounds of propriety, nuo would she really crave other attention than that of her husband, her attitude nevertheless is a jealous one. What she can't have and doesn't want of love, she doesn't wish another woman to have."

Corroborative of her belief, Mrs. Hickson points to the fact that authorities have received scores of letters, practically all in feminine handwriting, professing to further incriminate the prisoners. Messages of sympathy and encouragement have been received from many men, but none from women.

Prisoners Sense Feeling

Whether true or not, says Mrs. Hickson, these letters show the lengths to which women will go to achieve vengeance on arousers of sex jealousy.

Mrs. Klimek and Mrs. Sturmer intuitively recognize this jealousy as they sit in their cell here awaiting trial.

"I have not done what they say I have," Mrs. Klimek declares. "It is the women who do this to me. They are angry that men should have liked me. Their crazy jealousy causes them to make these charges against me

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT IS FIERY ITCHY OR ROUGH, USE SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

GOVERNMENT TO HAVE A SURPLUS

Christmas Present for Premier Drury--Amount is a Secret.

TORONTO, December 15. Canadian Press. — Hon. Peter Smith, the Provincial Treasurer, is reported to have presented a Christmas box to Premier Drury in the shape of a promise that the government's account for the fiscal year ending Nov 15, 1922, will show a surplus.

Although the dimensions of the anticipated credit balance are still shrouded in mystery the announcement of its expected appearance has brought great joy to the U.F.O. household at Queen's Park.

"A reasonable amount," was as far as Mr. Drury would go when questioned as to the extent of his treasurer's generosity. The Premier intimated that sufficient time had not yet elapsed to permit of any approximation of the amount.

He admitted however that Mr. Smith had given assurance that the government would not face pre-election session with a deficit.

Although the year closed officially on November 15 it is understood that the books were not closed finally until Wednesday of this week.

Though the systematic education of deaf mutes is quite modern, yet history mentions several persons so afflicted who were well instructed able and of considerable standing in their communities, in the Middle Ages and even in ancient times.

Election By-Law.

Revive the Band.

There has been an effort to revive the Lakefield band, and it seems to be at present at question of finances. There are a number of men who are interested and who would put their best efforts with the movement but funds to supply instruments are not yet in sight. Perhaps if an inventory was taken of the instruments at present available and lists made of those absolutely necessary of those which are needed to those which they would like to have. Then if those who are interested would give or arrange an entertainment either in the rink of Memorial Hall, one feels no doubt that funds would come, perhaps not in a large lump sum but these would be sufficient to to carry on with for a time in due course a full equipment earned by the men themselves would be on hand and the fact that each man had done his part to earn the instruments would be a link which would hold the organization together. A band at the rink is an attraction always and if those who have instruments would practice there is little doubt that they would receive engagements at the rink this season and the new Lakefield band would lay the corner stone of its foundation.

Syncopated Trio.

Three of our local young people, who have been industriously practicising for several weeks, have organized the Syncopated Trio, and are now a first class orchestra. Enterprise, patience and perseverance have accomplished this and one feels very proud indeed of the result. Miss Eva McIlmoyle, and William Hendren and Keith Wannamaker are now organized and equipped and already have made a real hit.

POPULATION IS GREAT NEED OF PRESENT TIME

Progressive Leader Advocates a Greater Immigration Scheme — More Men Needed on Farms.

SMALL FARMS.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 15.— (Canadian Press.) — Adherence to the principles of diversified farming and increased production coupled with the elimination of unnecessary overhead expenses will go along way in banishing agricultural depression and setting the farmers of the west firmly on their feet, declared Robert Forke, leader of the Progressive party, in an address to the local branch of the Canadian Club to-day.

The inauguration of a period of economy by rural communities, towns and cities, with the uniting of all for a common good was advocated by Mr. Forke, who declared that united effort, industry and proper economy would ensure the prosperity of the country and place it on firm foundation.

Throughout his address the Progressive leader emphasized the importance of keeping the boys and girls in the land and of attracting new settlers. He said many farmers might object to his views on immigration, as they considered the present conditions, but newcomers would help to pay taxation. Natural resources must be developed and this could only be done with new capital and new population. Mr. Forke declared the idea was now exploded that farmers could get rich by producing wheat and he expected to see an era of small farms, say, half section farms. Farmers must have larger markets, a good home market, he said.

Canada raised about 300,000,000 bushels of grain and could consume only 80,000,000 bushels. This meant they had to find markets for 220,000,000. It was from this surplus that they must pay their debts.

STEAMER ON FIRE

LONDON, Dec. 15— (Canadian Press). — The steamship Eastern Sun is standing by the Eastern Glade on which fire broke out several days ago while passing the Cape Verde Islandes on her way from New York for Capetown, South Africe, according to a message received by the United States Shipping Board offices here.

The salvage tug Warbler left the Azores Wednesday to relieve the Eastern Sun.

LOW RECORD WATER

THREE RIVERS, Que., Dec., 15.—(Canadian Press).—The water level of the St. Lawrence River has not been so low as it is now for twenty five years. The result has been that the water pressure has been deficient for domestic and fire fighting purposes and to-day the high level districts were without water.

A meeting of the City Council was called yesterday afternoon to find means of insuring an adequate water supply to the city and it was decided to switch the waterworks system which will be now supplied by artesian wells on the St. Maurice River. Last night the water supply was barely adequate.

Best Cough Mixture Is Home Made

Acts With Speed—Loosens the Phelgm—Stops the Irritation and Coughing Ceases

Fine for Chest Colds Too and Is Cheaply Made at Home.

When you can make, in two minutes, a world beating remedy that acts directly on the membrane and often overnight causes stubborn coughs and even hard chest colds to disappear, why trifle with things that will probably disappoint?

Hawking and snuffling and also soreness of the muscous membrane go and you will feel fine in almost no time.

Just get one ounce of Parmint (double strength) add to it a little sugar and enough hot water to make a half pint and you've got an inexpensive remedy better than you can buy ready mixed.

Its soothing, healing action on the membrane is the reason so many people use it for Catarrh and acute nasal colds.

CHIMNEY FIRE RECORD IS STILL KEEPING UP

This morning at 10.23 o'clock the Fire Brigade was called to the residence of J. Best, 426 Donegal street, to a chimney fire. The fires for this month are far exceeding the number of fires, mostly chimney fires, that have been on the record for some time.

DEBT CANCELLATION A SOURCE OF DANGER

LONDON, Dec. 14.—(Special.)—Debts cancellation would lower the standard of living for a generation, Premier Bonar Law tells the Commons. He says the Germans are near a collapse. The Allies must be careful the demands do not precipitate a crash.

Cancel all European debts so the world may start a new era of peace and prosperity, William Jennings Bryan urges.

HER THREE CHILDREN HAD WHOOPING COUGH

Many mothers make the mistake of thinking that whooping cough is not of serious importance, but it is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

is highly recommended by mothers everywhere for the relief of this trouble as it helps to clear the clogged-up air passages of the mucous and phlegm that has collected, and in this way brings on the "whoop" which brings the so-much-sought-for relief and heals and soothes the lungs.

Mrs. H. W. Mahar, Kentville, N. S., writes: "My three children had whooping cough. I tried every medicine I could think of until an old gentleman told me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Before they had one bottle taken the cough seemed better, and after two bottles they were about well. It loosened the cough and relieved them of that hard, distressing and strangling feeling that goes with it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 35c. and 60c. a bottle. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SEE BEAUTY FLEE AS MAN DIES IN DARK HALL ROOM

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—Mystery surrounds the death of Joseph K. Wallace, 40 years old, formerly owner of a toy balloon business here, who was found dead in a dark hall bedroom in a rooming house yesterday afternoon. A hypdermic needle and a few grains of morphine were on a table nearby.

Police of the Chicago avenue station immediately started search for a pretty young woman with black hair who was said to have been in the company of Wallace a few hours before he died and who was seen leaving the building early yesterday morning.

According to Mrs. Anrelmen Fox owner of the rooming house, who found the body when she went to awaken Wallace shortly after noon, the mysterious woman came to the place with Wallace late Saturday afternoon and was introduced as "Mrs. Wallace"

Among Wallace's effects the police found a lodge insurance policy for $1,000 made out in favor of "Mrs. May Frank Wallace."

Hunt Woman Dope Suspect

Lieut/ John Prendergast stated that he remembered a woman giving the name of May Wallace who was arrested by federal narcotic officers several months ago on a charge of selling dope. He immediately ordered his men to canvass the haunts of "dope fiends" along North Clark street in search of the woman.

According to information obtained from friends of Wallace, he has been working as a clerk in a cigar store on East Pearson street. Prior to that he was engaged in the toy balloon business on Larrabee street, but with the advent of the Ogden avenue extension the building where he operated was torn down.

Refuses to Hazard Death Cause

Coroner's Physician W. H. Burmeister performed an autopsy on the body and sent the contents of the stomach to the city laboratory to be analyzed. He refused to give a possible reason for the cause of death.

Two pennies were found in the dead man's pocket. According to a number of persons who knew the man, he usually carried large sums of money.

U.S. FARMERS IN ALL BRANCHES TO CO-OPERATE

Three Days' Conference of Co-operative Marketing Associations is Being Held in Washington.

BIG MOVEMENT.

WASHINTON, Dec. 15.—(Canadian Press).—What its sponsors characterize as the most important movement for farmers ever inaugurated in the United States was launched here yesterday with the assembling of the first National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing Associations. Delegates representing the associations interested in every major product, from cotton of the south to California fruit, came to Washington to take part in the three-days conference.

The program included a complete review of the co-operative marketing movement in the United States, featuring the handling of cotton, tobacco, fruit, grain, dairy products and other farm products. Other general topics of discussion were co-operative financing, and rural credits legislation; common problems of co-operative marketing associations and how to handle them; problems of each commodity group, and co-operative education of the farmers and the public.

President Harding, in a letter read yesterday at the opening session, declared that he knew of "no single movement that promises more help towards the present relief and the permanent betterment of agricultural conditions," than the co-operation movement of farmers to market their products.

PUT PREMIUM ON PRODUCING ODD IN DRESS

Mms. Hague Offers a Program For Keeping Mentally and Physically Fit.

Picture galleries and antique shops for relaxation!

Physical training for self-discipline!

That is the program of Mme. Hague, head of the house of Thurn, for keeping mentally and physically fit.

"Every morning for the last four months I've been at my physical culture class before nine," she says.

Likes to Look.

"And because I look at things to enjoy them, rather than listening to them, when I am free, instead of attending a concert I visit a picture gallery or a quaint shop filled with old, beautifully designed furniture."

Years ago Mme. Hague's mother imported fine cloth for children's dresses. Then her daughter, now Mme. Hague, conceived the idea of enlarging the business to include dress designing for women who wanted "something different."

There wasn't such a premium then on the unique. Mme. Hague started the vogue.

Never Mind Lunch.

"Don't belong," she urges, "to a three-hours-for-luncheon club if you want to succeed, and don't feel ill-used if, sometimes, you must go without any lunch at all."

According to Mme. Hague, there's an invisible means of communication between all women on the subject of dress. And a perfectly gowned woman, she holds, is the most effective advertisement her couturiere can have.

The "Acta Diurna'5" of ancient Rome, a manuscript record of current events which the government posted in public places, offered the earliest approach to a newspaper mentioned in history.

Wound Healed Through Radio

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 14.—When the war ended, Superior Judge Robert S. Marx, former commander of the Disabled Veterans of the World War, didn't think much of that piece of shrapnel in his neck.

But as soon as it interfered with his enjoyment of broadcast radio concerts out went the shrapnel.

Judge Marx had been continuing at his daily work for the last four years, never giving a thought to the wound that sent him back from the front. It was a cherished souvenid of the war, and although it was dangerously near the mastoid glands his physician did not believe an operation necessary.

But the judge nor his physician figured on the radio fever that followed soon after the war. The judge fell a victim, got a receiving set into his home and listened in.

There came a difficulty. That piece of steel in Judge Marx's neck interfered with the proper reception of the radio concerts. It was near enough to the ear to cause magnetic attraction as soon as the sensitive receivers were attached.

The magnet of the earphone tended to pull the piece of shrapnel towar dit, with the result that the metal's movement irritated the tissues around it. It was dangerous to the judge's health and it spoiled his evening's fun.

So Judge Marx had the shrapnel taken out. Now he has no trouble hearing the nightly radio entertainments.

And the souvenir rests on the mantelpiece.

Dr. Chase's Ointment has been worth a hundred dollars to me—before using it I had spent a great deal more than that in unsuccessful treatment from doctors. FRENCH CABINET BEHIND POINCARE

Approves of Premier's Attitude at Conference in London.

PARIS, Dec. 13. — (Canadian Press.)—The French Cabinet to-day approved the attitude taken by Premier Poincare at the London conference on reparations, after hearing the French Premier's report. It also expressed agreement with him in a declaration to be made to the Chamber of Deputies Friday, when it is forecasted he will ask for a free hand in reparations negotiations and for like freedom regarding seizure of pledges permitted under the Versailles agreement.

The Premier told his colleagues of the cabinet that he had brought back from London assurance that the differences between France and Great Britain in execution of the Treaty of Versailles would henceforth be discussed in an amicable spirit, unaccompanied by press campaigns against either country, and that a final disagreement would not menace the existence of the Entente.

Germany's Position.

The foreign office to-day was as much pre-occupied with the situation in Germany as with the aftermath of the London conference. The reported repudiation by German manufacturers of Chancellor Cuno's reparation proposition was interpreted in official circles as a fresh indication of the belief held here that no German government will find the support necessary for any programme for carrying out of the Treaty of Versailles.

Premier Poincare made it clear to interviewers last night that he will announce at the resumption of the Parliamentary debate on the French foreign policy that the Government retains the right to use a free hand in seizing security for Germany's debt. The time for threats without acts has passed, he said, and the government had finally resolved to act, even if alone.

MAY ASK BLANKET COMBINE RIGHTS.

State Governors and Governors-Elect May Tackle This Problem.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Dec. 14.—(United Press).—A movement to obtain blanket rights for states to effect "combinations" and enter into agreements for concerted action on certain industrial and economic problems probably will be got under way at the fourteenth annual conference of State governors and governors-elect meeting here for three days starting to-morrow, according to Miles C. Riley, secretary of the conference.

A Federal constitution nor prohibits the commonwealths from entering into agreements "except by permission of Congress." Granting of this required permission sometimes delays imperative action fy the states for an uncomfortable period, Riley said.

The governors' tentative proposal is to interpret the wording of the law inversely so as to allow Congress to pass legislation allowing states to effect combinations on certain general types of problems, and to get such a law passed by the national legislature.

Waterpower navigation and boundary disputes are the main problems that would be handled under such permisison.

Such a campaign would not be subjected to on attempt at immediate adoption but will be discussed perhaps until next year's conference, in order to crystalize the idea Riley said

Specific and immediate conditions that will come under the fire of the executives' discussions include the Ku Klux Klan crime waves in states, state administration budget systems, farm loans and the St. Lawrence deep waterway to the Atlanic.

The sessions of the governors will be held in The Greenbier, a resort hotel here.

TURKEY READY TO SIGN PACT

Will Join the League of Nations as Soon as Peace is Signed.

LAUSANNE, December 14.—Canadian Press. — Turkey will join the League of nations as soon as peace is signed at Lausanne. Ismet Pasha announced at the Near East Conference to-day, he fact.

As the league exercises a general supervision over minority populations Ismet's announcement was interpreted as meaning that Turkey will accept the League's supervision over the Christian peoples of Turkey.

Ismet said that Turkey was ready to accord the same treatment to the minorities as provided in the treaties exchanged between the various European countries.

This Ismet declared was not because of the menacing words of Lord Curzon, the British foreign secretary as voiced yesterday, but because the Turkish national pact required it.

Turkish delegates said that Turkey acepted a general amnesty to political prisoners. He would decline however to establish national homes for Armenians.

Turkey accepts in principle, application to national minorities in her territory of clauses on this subject inserted in Austrian, Bulgarian and other eace reaties, Ismet Pasha declased at this mornin's session of the Near East conference, and also the granting of anesty to members of these minorities.

Once Victim of Robbers Becomes Bandit Himself

DETROIT, Dec. 12.—"It takes a thief to make a thief!" This paraphrase of the old bromide is Homer Noel's explanation of why he is in the Wayne County Jail, a confessed bandit and impostor; accused by his own word of having been a participant in the slaying of Alexander Dombrowski, slain Jan. 24, by a group of men who pretended that they were Federal prohibition agents.

Noel spent his boyhood on his parents rock-strewn farm near Lowell, Mass. His school was a tiny brick structure at the turn of the road, his work in the almost sterile fields his father tried to till, and his pleasures he found along a gurgling trout stream, and among the oak slashing in the fall, where the quail and grouse drummed, and awakened the thunder of his rusty hammer gun.

Parents Move.

Tiring of the farm, Noel's father and mother moved to Lowell. Life in the city, however, was too complicated and expensive, so they bought a smaller farm, and moved back to the soil.

There was no room on this land for Homer. With $300 in his wallet, he found that work was not to be had for the asking. He saw his savings dwindle fast and poverty in prospect.

He constructed to take $1,500 worth of whiskey into Ohio, and started with his load. Somewhere along the way, some men better schooled in the rules of this new game, stole the whiskey, and incidentally presented him with an idea.

He returned to Detroit and became a professional masquerader He wore a spurious Federal badge, and his prey was the bootlegger. He found stealing whiskey more profitable than making it.

Becomes Bolder.

He participated in the robbery of the Turner Cartage Co. warehouse, last February, he says when $100,000 worth of alcohol was stolen; he was one of several men who posed as Federal officers and seized three boatloads of liquor that were landed at Ford city in March; and once, he took a bootlegger to the Federal Building here and made him turn over a $2,000 "fine."

Likewise it was Homer Noel, "the Federal liquor agent," who stalked brusquely into the home of Dombrowski and started a search for liquor. It was when he came back from that search, he says, that he found Dombrowski dying from bullets fired by the other "officers" in the party.
